AQUEDUCT RACE TRACK, April 16.—Straight and true as a bullet from a rifle Darcy Johnson's Roseben, the public favorite, whizzed down the stretch in the Carter Handicap this afternoon and landed the $10,000 inaugural feature of the 1906 racing season in New York.

Roseben won on his gameness. From the heart of the stretch the Ben Stron gelding was hard pressed. First Whimsical lapped him, but he faced the daughter of Orlando into submission.

Lyne Landed Him. Jump by jump he held his own during the heart-breaking journey until, with a last supreme effort, Lyne landed his nose first past the post and the crowd yelled itself hoarse with joy and relief.

POOLROOM WAR FAILS; NO LET UP ON BETTING

Despite the apprehension among poolroom players that all information from the track would be cut off this afternoon, no great difficulty was experienced in placing bets and getting results in any of the old places and many new ones that have sprung up with the opening of the racing season.

That their tip was founded on straight information was apparent, although the result of the first race did not reach the poolrooms till 2 o'clock. After that returns from the track came in much as usual, and there was no apprehension.

What truth is there in that account? The Commissioner was asked. He did not answer immediately. Taking a slip of paper from his desk he wrote the following sentence: "Si non a vero beatovata."

Meaning Seems Plain. The Commissioner's Italian is a trifle lame, but an interpreter had no difficulty in getting his meaning. Literally translated into English the message to his reply reads: "If it is not true, it is well turned."

Mayor McClellan was seen this afternoon concerning the story that one of his commissioners had tried to influence Commissioner Bingham to keep his hands of certain poolrooms. He said the tale was preposterous. He also denied that he had Commissioner Bingham's resignation. The Mayor was unwilling to advance any theory as to the inspiration for Commissioner Bingham's remarkable writing in Italian.

GIANTS FALL BEFORE LUSH, THE PHILLIES' NEW PITCHER

By BOZEMAN BULGER.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 16.—Though they tried every trick known to baseball, the Giants were hopelessly beaten by the Phillies this afternoon, and defeat was due alone to the masterful pitching of Lush. The final score was 4 to 2.

First Inning. Breanahan got four balls as a starter. Gleason made a miserable fumble of Brown's grounder, and both New Yorkers were safe. Donlin placed a neat sacrifice in front of the plate, advancing both runners.

Second Inning. Devil struck out, and Gilbert popped a high foul to Sentelle. Ames also fanned. NO RUNS.

Third Inning. Bransfield struck out and Donlin fanned. Brown fanned. Donlin hit a hot single through McGinnis, which Dan barely knocked down with one hand. Lush was granted a base on balls. Donlin made a spectacular steal of third.

Fourth Inning. Devil struck out, and Gilbert popped a high foul to Sentelle. Ames also fanned. NO RUNS.
