SUBWAY TRAIN ON FIRE

TERRANOVA GIRL IS ACQUITTED IN 17 MINUTES

Took Fathers Chosen to Try Her Only a Short Time to Declare Her Not Guilty of Murder in Killing Her Aunt.

Without casting a ballot the jury in the case of Josephina Terranova found her not guilty of the murder of her aunt, Concetto Riggio, this afternoon.

Although acquitted on this charge, the girl was not discharged from custody. There is another indictment against her on the charge of murdering her uncle. It is not likely that this will be tried.

District Attorney Jerome will probably allow her to go free within a few weeks if her lawyer and relatives agree to keep her in restraint in a convent or institution where her mental condition may be kept under constant observation.

This sensational and somewhat hysterical trial ended quietly and decorously. Justice Scott concluded his charge to the jury at 3.20 o'clock and one minute later the jurors were on their way to their room.

Foreman Bugg lit a cigar, looked at the other eleven men and remarked, "Well, boys what about it."

"If everybody feels the way I do," said one, "it will be an acquittal."

There was not a dissenting voice. The jurors smoked and talked for fifteen minutes longer and then sent word to the court-room that they had agreed upon a verdict.

The court-room was packed with spectators, many of them women who have attended every session of the trial. Josephine was in the prisoner's pen back of the court-room when the jury filed in. Judge Palmieri, her counsel, looked intently at the faces of the jurymen as they shuffled to their places in the box.

Several smiled at him encouragingly, and he turned a face jubilant with hope and confidence at his side as he walked to a position beside him at the bar.

When the roll had been called and Foreman Bugg had announced the verdict Josephine smiled and dropped a quaint courtesy in the direction of the jury box. Judge Palmieri asked: "May my client go free now, Your Honor?"

"Ask him," directed the Court, pointing to Assistant District Attorney Ely. "If Your Honor please," explained Mr.

THE BATTING ORDER.

Table with 2 columns: Philadelphia and Highlanders. Rows for batting order.

BY BOZEMAN BULGER AMERICAN LEAGUE PARK, NEW YORK, June 1.—By clean hitting the Highlanders won their tenth straight game to-day, took the lead in the American League race and incidentally gave the Athletics the worst drubbing they have received this season.

The final score was 10 to 2. Chesbro was in good form and held the game safe at all stages, while Conroy was pounded all over the lot. Seven thousand spectators witnessed the contest.

With first place in the American League at stake, Clarke Griffith and Connie Mack aroused their forces to the importance of to-day's game and it was pronounced to be a game fight from start to finish.

Just before the game Connie Mack and Clark Griffith decided to have a double-header to-morrow, the first game to begin at 2 o'clock.

First Inning.

It looked dangerous as Hartsel started off by smashing a single over second, and the alarm increased as "Pop" advanced when Cross hit to Chesbro. Dandson breezed easily, however, as Armbruster struck out. Davis made it more pleasant by swishing an easy grounder to Elberfeld. NO RUNS.

Keeler bunted safely, while Knight was still playing hide and seek with the ball. Elberfeld trotted to first like a two-year-old on four wide ones. Chase tried to sacrifice, but Conroy lost his footing in the process, and instead of first, filling the bases, with none out, Laporte was allowed to walk unmolested, and Keeler walked in like a prince from a wedding. Williams slammed a hot one through Murphy's hands, and Elberfeld walked over the threshold like a long lost son. Conroy then leaned against the ball with the force of a triphammer and slashed it against the score board for three cushions, clearing up the bags, Chase, Laporte and Williams scoring. Hoffman bumped a bouncer into the infield and was thrown out. Kleinow followed and Elberfeld walked over the threshold like a long lost son. Conroy was picked off before he could get back to third. FIVE RUNS.

Second Inning.

Seybold popped a high one to Kleinow. Elberfeld sent Murphy to the boneyard by a pretty throw to Chase. Knight went out on a long stab to Conroy. NO RUNS.

Elberfeld threw Chesbro out without exertion. Davis got Keeler's soft tap and threw low to first, and "Wee Willie" was same. Willie, however, was caught stealing second. Elberfeld did on a grounder. NO RUNS.

Third Inning.

Powers was an easy victim on strikes. Conroy, too, hit the air three times and sat down. Elberfeld then made a wonderful stop of Hartsel's grounder and got "Pop" at first. NO RUNS.

Chase opened up with a smash to left for one base. He immediately went to third on Laporte's single to right. Williams walked and the sacks were filled. The crowd looked wise as Conroy and his bludgeon came up again, and the "I told you so" smile was

Fire and Smoke Issuing from the Ventilators from 104th to 110th Streets.

DEFECTIVE FUSE SET THE CARS ON FIRE.

Passengers in Wild Panic Manage to Escape Before the Blaze Made Much Headway.

A south-bound train caught fire in the Subway shortly before 6 o'clock this evening.

Dense volumes of smoke issued from the entrance to the station at One Hundred and Tenth street and from the openings in the roof from One Hundred and Fourth to One Hundred and Tenth street.

The southbound Broadway train had just left the One Hundred and Tenth street station and was getting under headway, when a smell of burning waste, which had been noticeable, became very strong and smoke curled up around the side of the train. The air rushing through the tube fanned the fire into a full flame as the train reached One Hundred and Seventh street.

The firemen and the police arrived at the stations at One Hundred and Third and One Hundred and Tenth streets in quick time, but all their efforts to reach the scene of the fire were unsuccessful.

The smoke poured out in dense columns at the One Hundred and Tenth street station, and every time the firemen undertook to descend into the cavern they were driven back by the stifling smoke.

"There's a fire in the Subway!" was the cry that went up on the people on the street, as the thick smoke burst up through the wire-covered arch hole, in the Broadway grass plot between One Hundred and Sixth and One Hundred and Seventh streets.

A policeman on the block immediately rang in an alarm, and the engine company from One Hundred and Thirtieth street and Broadway appeared within the minute, followed by other apparatus.

By this time the thick clouds of smoke were rolling up through the One Hundred and Tenth street station, driving the platform men, obnoxious and sellers from their posts.

The air hole at One Hundred and Seventh street was a miniature volcano, belching black clouds of smoke that drove back the firemen and prevented their entering. With men falling all around the firemen, the heat and smoke, turned the streams down through the air vent.

On the middle track that runs along this section were stored many empty cars, about to be made up into trains. The smoke and flames were so thick that it was thought these had caught fire and were doomed to complete destruction.

The fire in the Subway which set cars ablaze from One Hundred and Eighth to One Hundred and Fifteenth street, was explained by a motorman who was switching trains from the storage track. His train crashed into other cars causing a fuse to blow out and set fire to the woodwork.

Power was shut off above Ninety-sixth street except on the Lenox avenue division.
