WOMAN IN WHITE FAINTS AT THAW VICTIM'S FUNERAL

Millionaire Slayer Cannot Get a Fair Trial in New York, Friends of Thaw Assert—Grand Jury Indicts Him.

At the funeral of Stanford White in St. James, L. I., to-day a strange woman, clad in white duck, with a black hat trimmed with peacock feathers, made a scene by fainting.

While the widow and kinspeople sat, still figures in black, at the front of the little church, this woman slipped into a back pew. She was sobbing under her breath.

During the short service she wept bitterly. As the body was being carried from the church she collapsed altogether. A chauffeur and a man who looked like a servant bore the fainting woman to an automobile, and she was driven rapidly away. None of the members of the White family knew her and the identity of the mysterious mourner could not be learned.

In less than a quarter of an hour to-day after Evelyn Nesbit Thaw had declared she would not give evidence against her husband or tell the hidden story of the motives which prompted him to slay Stanford White

BAITS ROCKEFELLER AND MORGAN IN RED POSTER.

Morrison Swift Puts Up an Arraignment on Trusts on Standard Oil and Bankers' Buildings—Fined $10 for It.

After having posted a red-ink arraignment of trust kings in the Standard Oil Building late this afternoon a well-dressed, middle-aged man went to J. P. Morgan's office at No. 23 Wall street, put up another placard on the door and began a speech that outraged the trust king.

Several thousand persons, leaving business just as the market closed, gathered about and cheered the speaker until Policeman Roth arrested him.

The orator went along quietly, throwing small pamphlets to the following crowd. At the Centre Street Court he paid a fine of $10 but not until he had impressed the Magistrate with his earnestness. He said he was "Morrison I. Swift, of Ohio," but would give no more definite address.

"You must be crazy to utter such sentiments," said Magistrate Cornell when told that Swift declared trust magnates were making slaves of the American people.

"I'm no more crazy," replied Swift, "than are the people who allow such things. Think of what they have done—Morgan, Rockefeller, Armour and the others in that foul brood of conspirators—to crush out life, ruin happiness and slay hope. Think of the hell they have kindled in innocent lives. The 'Czar' inherited despotism. These men seized it. The curse of all their men should fall on them."

He spoke in a clear, ringing voice and seemed carried away with his theme. After he paid his fine he turned to the Magistrate and remarked:

"I've dedicated my life to the cause and nothing can deter me."

Swift first appeared at the Standard Oil Building, where he asked to see John D. Rockefeller. On being told he would have to go to Compiegne he posted up a big placard marked:

"To the Wealthy Kings of America—the Wreckers of the Nation."

In this he included the names of Rockefeller, Armour and Morgan. Part of his poster read:

"These are the men who have made us slaves by treachery and seduction and are guilty of the highest crimes. They run and are the United States."

The rest of the poster was in the same vein, and part of it he quoted in his arraignment. He posted two posters on the glass door and commenced to throw small copies of them among the crowd.

He talked in a loud voice, but made no threats of immediate violence. Therefore he remained undisturbed by the SHEEPSHEAD BAY, N. Y., June 28.—Inquisitor won the Sheephead Bay Handicap this afternoon, and Brigadier's truck record went to smash. Brigadier ran a mile in 1:37.45. Inquisitor ran a fifth of a second better. In his last race Inquisitor was beaten a block, but the grass course was heavy that day.

The finish was electrifying. Halifax made the running to the last, when the whole field seemed to fall on him and five horses flashed by the Judges heads and necks apart. After the Judges recovered they gave Inquisitor the race. Von Tromp second and Halifax third. The latter appeared surely second. Dishable was a head away and so was Dolly Spunker. No more sensational finish has been seen this season.

Peter Pan was a slight favorite in the Surf Stakes, with Saracinesca a strong second choice. The betting was limited to these two. Peter Pan ran to his form all right, but Saracinesca quit badly and stopped to a walk in the last furlong. Althueo was second and Arimo third.

Klamesha came back to her old form in the opening dash. She was the real live one of the race and the money pounded her price from 4 to 1 to 11 to 5. Roseben was the favorite, but he broke badly and lacked his speed. Handzarra beat him for the place.

In the second race Paul Jones won easily enough. He made all the running, holding the field safe all the way. Gold Fleur was second and Kernal third.

Klamesha Is Good Now.

Roseben was again favorite in the opening dash, but he had the time of his life. Water Grass a nose. Klamesha was the one the smart people played from. Handzarra to the stretch turn, where she came away in her old-time form, winning by a length. Althueo was second and Roseben third.

Paul Jones All the Way.

Paul Jones went to the front, made all the running and won in a drive by a length from Goldfleur, who raced in fourth place to the far turn and then came on. Kernal was third, a length and a half away. Flying Virgin was prominent to the last furlong, where he fell.

Peter Pan Repeats Handily.

Peter Pan went to the front soon after the start, made all the running and won handily by two lengths. Saracinesca was second, followed by Prince Hamburg, Inquisitor and Dolly Spunker. They ran this way to the stretch turn, where the tailenders closed. In the stretch Halifax began to stop, and the whole bunch seemed to swallow second up in furious finish. Inquisitor won by a head from Von Tromp, who beat Halifax a head, with Dishable a head away. Halifax looked

(Special to The Evening World.)
BOSTON, June 28.—The Giants had easy sailing to-day and romped away with the second game by score of 4 to 2. Taylor was in his usual form, and had the tail-enders completely at his mercy from start to finish. It was his sixth consecutive victory.

Aside from Taylor's pitching the feature of the game was the batting of Bresnahan. Two thousand people saw the game.

McGraw said this afternoon he expected to make it four straight from the Boston team. He selected Luther Taylor to do the pitching in the second contest, but said he might change his mind before time to play.

"There was only one moment yesterday when we did not have the game well in hand," said McGraw. "That was when Marshall let that fly go over him on the bounce. It tied the score, but we pulled out all right."

"While the Boston team has good players and is playing a better game than a few weeks ago, there is no reason why we should not take the games to-day and to-morrow and the one in New York Saturday."

The schedule has been changed so that the Giants and Boston go from here to the Polo Grounds to play the fourth game of the season Saturday.

First Inning.
Bresnahan slammed a hit over to Brain right off the reel, but it proved his undoing. Marshall took more time and walked. McGinn was hit by a pitched ball and took first base. After that, Marshall and McGinn tried a double steal, but Marshall was thrown out in the last furlong. Althueo, getting the side, NO RUNS.

By jumping in the air McGinn got Bridwell's five with one hand. Tenney was lucky and got four balls. Brain worked hard, but went out on strikes. Tenney died stealing second. NO RUNS.

Second Inning.
Dahlen was a quick victim on strikes. Bridwell grabbed Devlin's sharp bouncer and whipped it over in time. Gilbert then wound it up with a short fly to Peffer. NO RUNS.

Devlin and Howard went straight to the diamond. Howard cracked one on the other side of the diamond and Gilbert nailed him. Dolan walked, but O'Neil popped a weak fly to Dahlen. NO RUNS.

Third Inning.
Bowerman broke the ice by ripping a single into center, an attempt to bunt aaylor popped a little fly into Peffer. NO RUNS.

Devlin and Howard went straight to the diamond. Howard cracked one on the other side of the diamond and Gilbert nailed him. Dolan walked, but O'Neil popped a weak fly to Dahlen. NO RUNS.

POUGHKEEPSIE CREWS FASTER THAN EITHER YALE OR HARVARD.

The slowest crew in the recent races at Poughkeepsie could have beaten either Harvard or Yale to-day if time can be considered as important in making comparisons. The following tables show the difference in the times of the 'varsity race' to-day at New London and that rowed last week on the Hudson, where the course is believed to be much harder than that of the Thames River:

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 28.—For the first time since 1899 the Harvard 'varsity' crew this afternoon snatched a victory from Yale. Despite the depressing effect of the loss of the freshman and four-oared events in the morning, the Crimson 'varsity' eight outrowed Old Eli, winning by over a length in 23:02. Yale's time was 23:11.

Once again the great crowd of observers saw a race that they will long remember. They saw what oarsmen believe is a verification of the prophecies of last year that Coach Wray was able to develop a winning crew with a stroke that needed a powerful crew to drive it through the water. Yale's defeat brought no discredit; there was glory in it because she went into the gruelling contest with a much lighter crew and one in which some of the men were not what is termed "born athletes."

Yale Men Collapsed.

The Harvard crew stood the pace finely, but Yale's to some extent went to pieces after the finish line was reached. As the boats shot under the drawbridge Noyes, at No. 6, fell in a heap unconscious from exhaustion. The coaches and trainers did everything they could for him, but ten minutes after the finish of the race Noyes remained unconscious. Noyes was lifted into a launch.

At 4 o'clock Yale 'varsity' eight came slowly down the river toward the start, and walked. The finish line was already waiting. In a moment Harvard's bronzed warriors trotted out on the float with their boat. They dropped it into the water and stepped into their places.

Harvard Men Cheered.

Up along the wooded shores floated a faint echo of Harvard's battle cry as the Harvard men at their quarters saw the Crimson. The packed observation cars on the banks took up a cheer and it reached from shore to shore.

At 4:05 o'clock the pistol popped and instantly both boats shot away toward the start. The Harvard crew was no man-of-war match, this one. At the half neither crew had an inch. They were terrified at a smooth, beautiful stroke without a splash in either boat. It was 32, and 32 it stayed, as both boats passed the mile mark by side. Down the course they sped, the referees' launch and the revenue boats following a hundred yards astern.

At a mile and a half Yale had moved her stroke up a notch faster, but there were no gains. It went back to thirty-two. So it went down through the fourth half mile. Harvard began crawling slowly and steadily toward the finish. Still Yale held the lead. Harvard had a clean quarter length lead. It showed distinctly as the shells passed the two and a half mile flag. Harvard and Yale alike struck to the steady 32. Sixteen sweeps in two boats worked in perfect time—sixteen bodies awayed back and forth like parts of one machine.

Gained Half a Length.

Now it was half a length. Harvard was pulling away.

Enough closed with a rush and got up in time to win by a length from Umbrella, who beat J. C. Core a head.

Radtke Gets Entire Home.

Just so and Far West ran in close order to the stretch, followed by Telephone and Entree. In the stretch Entree with Radtke up, came through and closing stroke won by a scant length from Just So, who beat Far West four lengths for the place.
