

SHOT DEAD BY AVENGER WHO CROSSED SEA

Padrone Joseph Montileone Had Just Told Friend He Was Safe.

IN TERROR FOUR YEARS.

Victim Fled from State to State to Evade Agent of Secret Society.

The deadly hand of the avenging vendetta reaching across the sea struck down Joseph Montileone, a prosperous Italian padrone, of No. 46 Villa avenue, the Bronx, as he was in the act of telling his friends that at last he had shaken off the agents who had shadowed him—always seeking his life—ever since his arrival in this country from Italy four years ago.

This the police learned today from Joseph Murcurio, who was with the padrone when he was shot dead by an unidentified assassin, and who is himself in the Goodham Hospital with a bullet in his thigh from the pistol of Montileone's murderer.

Acting Capt. Sam Price, of the Bronx Detective Bureau, believes that the padrone's slayer was the man upon whom fell the death lot of a secret society to which Montileone belonged when he lived in the wild country of Arfacola, in the mountainous regions outside Naples, and that he is the avenging figure that has driven the padrone from state to state in a vain effort to escape the unrelenting hand of the vendetta.

His Work Complete.

The agent did his work well when, after a chase of four years, he at last got a chance to strike. Montileone had returned last night from work in western Pennsylvania. For the first time in years he told Murcurio as they left the padrone's home last night for a stroll after a little dinner the marked man had given in celebration of his return he felt that he could breathe again.

"At last," he said, with his hand on his thirteen-year-old son Raphael's shoulder, "my boy and I am safe."

The words had hardly fallen from his lips when from behind a tree—the padrone lived in a wild part of the Bronx—a dark figure sprang.

The started, the inductively drew back, but not before the stranger had fired on them.

The first shot went wild. Montileone, probably realizing that his Nemesis had him at last, started to run. But the vendetta agent's death mission was not to be cheated.

"I must do it. It is their order," Murcurio heard him say as his revolver spoke again, and Montileone sank down with a bullet in his heart.

Shoots Victim's Friend.

"Who are you?" shouted Murcurio, springing at the mysterious assassin. His only reply was another shot, which hit Murcurio in the thigh. By the time two detectives—Kinley and Williams—of the Bronx Park station, who had heard the shots, reached the scene the murderer had vanished. Police lines were thrown about the clump of woods from which he had sprung, but they found nothing but tramped grass. The entire neighborhood, which is mostly populated by Italians, to-day joined in the hunt for the man whom the police and Italians declare to have been a vendetta agent, but no trace of the murderer was found.

Montileone's son told the police that he had no idea for what act the vendetta agents had wounded his father, but declared that the padrone's efforts to escape them had driven him from New York to California and back again.

"He often told me that they would kill him in the end," said the boy.

FOUR HURT IN B. R. T. TROLLEY CAR CRASH.

Fulton Street Motorman Who Caused Collision Sped Away from the Scene.

Four persons were injured in a collision of trolley cars at Reid avenue and Fulton street, Brooklyn, early today. Max Janowitz, motorman of the Reid avenue car, sustained a broken leg. The motorman of the Fulton street car did not stop after the accident and escaped arrest.

Besides the motorman of the Reid avenue car, its conductor and two women passengers were injured. The conductor, Samuel Warshaw, of No. 381 Riverdale avenue, Brooklyn, was treated by an ambulance surgeon, as was Mrs. Mary Hoeling, of No. 147 Gravesend avenue, and Mrs. Sara Meyer, of No. 126 Prospect place.

WOMEN IN AUTO IN SUBWAY DITCH.

Motor Car Backed Into Excavation on Fulton Street, Brooklyn, Without Being Wrecked.

Three women and two men in an automobile backed into a fifteen-foot subway excavation at Fulton street and Red Hook Lane, Brooklyn, early today and escaped without so much as a scratch. Even the automobile was in running order when it was dragged from the hole.

The automobile was driven by a man who said he was Albert Parsons, of No. 274 Hancock street, Brooklyn. When the machine made its leap Parsons was backing it to turn around. While the machine was being lifted to the street, the women waited in a nearby restaurant. When they took their seats in the tonneau again, Parsons threw a handful of money to men and boys who had assisted him.

CERTIFIED MILK PRICES GO UP.

An increase of three cents a quart for certified milk was announced yesterday by the large milk concerns of this city. The price is now fifteen cents a quart. The reason given for the advance is that producers, under heavy expense in complying with the requirements of the County Medical Society, have raised the price to them. Ordinary milk will not be advanced.

TWO INJURED IN A TUNNEL BLAST

A gang of laborers set off a blast in the workings of the new Pennsylvania tunnel under East avenue in Long Island City today and then ran back to await the explosion. They returned too soon to the place where the explosion had taken place and a great quantity of loosened stone suddenly dropped from the sides and roof of the tunnel upon them. Two of the men were pinned flat under the rain of rock. The others, although badly battered and out by the flinty shower, were able to reach the mouth of the bore and bring help. The rescuers found George Taylor, thirty years old a foreman, and William Dawkins, twenty-nine years old, a driller, both of No. 86 Hamilton street, groaning beneath a mass of shattered stone. They were carried to the temporary hospital which the railroad company maintains at No. 123 Third street and moved from there later to St. John's Hospital.

The Savings Bank Principle Applied to Piano Buying

DEFENDERS of spot-cash payment—including advertising dealers and theoretical writers—garrulous, but grossly illogical, have written columns of fiction, as imaginative as Jules Verne and as truthful as Baron Munchausen, in trying to disparage the buying of pianos on the monthly payment plan—to the end that their own arbitrary method of sale be justified.

Let us look into the matter, fair and square, for a moment.

A Piano is one of the very few costly things that cannot be counted an extravagance. The love of music, as well as the inborn ability to learn or enjoy some form of it, is the birthright of every normal human being, without reference to financial condition.

Hence it is commendable to make the possession EASY TO ALL.

The saving of money requires an incentive—some objective. Money saved, without an object in view, or some arbitrary requirement, melts away for some passing whim—or is frittered away in careless pastime.

If the person loves music, and buys a J. C. Campbell Piano at Wanamaker's, THREE THINGS are secured:

1. A Worthy Piano, that is a lifelong source of pleasure and mental and social improvement.
2. The Habit of Saving Money is formed by the $6 a month payment—no hardship to any wage-earner who really loves music.
3. An Always Valuable Piece of Furniture—capable of being turned into cash at any time—is added to the home.

The cash price is $190—and no piano, equal in quality, can be bought elsewhere for so little.

If bought on the EASY PAYMENT PLAN, the price is exactly the same; but you pay a banking interest of 4 per cent. per annum on the part unpaid. If $10 cash is paid, and $6 a month afterward, this interest will amount to a trifle less than ten dollars for the entire period.

If you saved up TO PAY CASH for your piano, you would have to wait TWO YEARS AND A HALF to save up enough to buy it, saving the above amount monthly, after having ten dollars to start with.

By paying an average of THIRTY-THREE CENTS a month extra, you HAVE THE USE OF THE PIANO all the years that you are saving.

You have the piano ALL THE TIME. You are SURE TO SAVE THE MONEY every month.

You have a fairly good MUSICAL EDUCATION long before you would have had a piano at all, if you had waited to pay cash for it. You are sure that you got THE BEST PIANO THE MONEY COULD BUY.

You are sure you paid THE LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICE for it. And you only need pay six dollars a month, with ten dollars cash, to have a handsome new J. C. Campbell Piano sent home.

It is just like putting money in the Savings Bank—for you save the money absolutely and enjoy the possession of the piano besides. See the handsome new J. C. Campbell Pianos now on demonstration in our beautiful Warehouses in the Wanamaker Building. If you can't come, write for fuller information. These pianos are sent anywhere on the same terms.
