

SMUGGLER YACHT WITH CHINESE IS FOUND AT ANCHOR

Frolic Dodged Revenue Cutters and Ran Into Providence Harbor.

GRAFT CHARGES MADE.

Man Who Brought Aliens from Canada Says Port Officials Are "Fixed."

(Special to The Evening World.)

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 10.—The schooner yacht Frolic, for which the immigration officials of the United States have been searching all along the New England coast for over two weeks, was found at anchor here today. The vessel was found by a revenue cutter.

Twenty-seven Chinamen are known to be in hiding in the Chinese quarter, but the immigration officials who are in this city have taken every precaution to prevent the Chinamen from leaving the city. Inspectors invaded the district today and every Chinaman will be compelled to establish his identity and produce papers showing his right to remain in this country. By this process of elimination the authorities expect to find the strangers.

Officials "Fixed."

James Duncan and Lehmann were brought before the United States authorities here and each was held in $2,000 bail for a hearing in Boston. In default of bondsmen the men were locked up.

While in his cell, Lehmann made statements which, if true, indicate that the smuggling of Chinese into New England States has been carried on for years with great profit. Lehmann stated that an expedition like that of the Frolic netted about $10,000 clear of all expenses.

Serious charges were also made by Lehmann in connection with the case of the Chinese who can be landed on the shores of New England. Asked how the smugglers were able to evade the officials, he answered: "That's easy. Most places in New England are 'fixed' and we don't have any trouble."

Lehmann explained that the Chinamen were brought from their native country to Canada, and from there in small groups to Newfoundland, where they were held to await a vessel from the United States.

"Not long ago," continued Lehmann, "a ship went into Boston Harbor and landed twenty-one Chinamen. The man who had charge of the vessel and the smuggling met the Chinamen, put them on board a street car and took them across the city to Chinatown."

Names the Men.
In explanation of his own actions in the present expedition Lehmann said that the smugglers, James B. Lehmann, who had charge in Providence, instructed him to come to this city and await the arrival of Capt. Colby with the Frolic. Lehmann arrived here last Friday, and he had been on the lookout each day for the Chinamen.

Lehmann was asked to reveal the identity of the men behind the smuggling scheme. According to his statements the expeditions are backed by a man named Goodman Phillips, of Boston, who is now in England. Abram Keiser, also of Boston, was another

WIFE PLAYS POKER; HER HUSBAND SUES

Summer at Bath Beach Proved the Undoing of the Moss Home.

Declaring that his tiny, big-eyed wife Gertrude neglected their two little children while she played poker down at Bath Beach ran about to resorts with another man, whom she called her "fellow," sought the children to call this man "Uncle Lester," and finally moved all the furniture out of their home in his absence and deserted him. Hyman Moss, a manufacturer of clothing at No. 756 Broadway, asked Justice Greenbaum for a decree of separation today in the Supreme Court.

As both were from wealthy families the court chamber was packed with their friends. John F. McKinstry appeared for the husband, while ex-Justice Alfred Stockler championed the frail little wife.

Took Children and Maid.

The couple were married Jan. 18, 1900 and have two children—Wilton S. and Helen M. Moss. Mr. Moss says his wife deserted him Sept. 25, 1906.

Her husband says that she had taken the children and the maid with her to her mother's home. This was the culmination of their quarrel over her alleged misconduct at Bath Beach during the preceding summer. He says that he had taken her to the oft-mentioned hotel in July; that he was obliged to be in business in town every day and went down Saturday night and spent Sunday with his family.

In his absence, he says, the topsome little wife found company of an undesirable sort; played cards, lost money and sometimes had to borrow enough to make good her losses. Her association with Lester Osterman was particularly objectionable to her husband, who says she called him her "fellow" and taught the children to call him "Uncle Lester."

Nurse Girl Testifies.

Bertha Joubert, a pretty nurse girl who was in charge of little Milton and Helen at Bath Beach, testified that her mistress went much time with Lester Osterman, to the neglect of the children. Ex-Justice Stockler vigorously objected to this line of testimony on the ground that Mrs. Moss's association with Osterman was not a ground on which a separation could be asked for. Justice Greenbaum ruled that it did have some bearing on the question of the fitness of the mother to have the custody of the children.

Border Mob Strangles Miscarriage After an Assault.

DALLAS, Tex., Oct. 10.—Negroes at Tarrant county have lynched a negro, Anthony Davis, who assaulted a sixteen-year-old colored girl while she was in the union station there. Davis was arrested and admitted to bail.

A mob of negroes caught him late last night and strangled him to death with a rope by dragging him about the negro settlements of the city.

SENATOR BEVERIDGE IS TAKEN ILL ON STUMP.

Campaign Tour Too Much for Indiana Man, and Boston Doctors Are Treating Him.

BOSTON, Oct. 10.—United States Senator Albert J. Beveridge, of Indiana, is ill at the home of George B. Baker at Chestnut Hill, Brookline, and it is probable that all of his speaking engagements for a week or ten days will be cancelled.

Senator Beveridge caught cold in Chicago two weeks ago, but because of his campaign engagements he was unable to take a rest. He spoke in the city Monday night and toward the close of his speech his voice failed him.

Today the throat trouble had practically disappeared, but there was some evidence of a fever and the Senator's physicians have insisted that he remain quiet and within doors for several days.

RAIN FELL JAN. 16, 1903.

Jury So Finds and Chambers's Widow Gets $5,000 Verdict.

Mrs. Margaret Chambers, widow of Thomas Chambers, was awarded $5,000 damages by a jury in Justice Newburger's part of the Supreme Court today for the death of her husband by a fall into the Subway excavation on the Depon Company's section of the work at Forty-second street and Sixth avenue, Jan. 16, 1903.

The question of liability hinged on the question of whether it rained in the Forty-second street and did not rain two miles further downtown. The Weather Bureau records showed that it was "cloudy and freezing" that day. Maurice Fitzgerald showed by a dozen witnesses that it did rain in Forty-second street.

Chambers was employed by the Depon Company. Coming out of the excavation at E P street, he stepped from the ladder upon a platform. Rain had frozen on the platform. Chambers slipped, lost his footing, fell back into the forty-foot excavation and his skull was fractured.

PRISONER WENT TO SCHOOL WITH JUDGE

Rosalasky Had Tried to Reform ex-Convict, but to No Purpose.

Two products of old Grammar School No. 42 in Allen street, met in Part I. of General Sessions today. One was the Judge presiding, Otto A. Rosalasky, the other a prisoner at the bar, Louis Harris, ex-convict, hunted by the police of every city.

The recognition was mutual. Harris, indicted for stealing a package from an errand boy, crouched at the bar, eyes cast on the floor.

"I plead guilty," he murmured to Clerk Cowing, "set it over with quick." "Don't take that plea," Judge Rosalasky ordered the clerk. "I couldn't be impartial with him."

Turning to the prisoner Judge Rosalasky said: "Harris, you and I were schoolmates and graduates of the same class. It is hard for me to see you in this position but you deserve it, according to the police."

"You promised me you would reform. I got you a good position on your promise, and you stole from the man who employed you. I don't want to pass judgment upon you and will refuse to accept your plea in order that your case may be transferred before another judge."

Harris mumbled something about being forced to crime through poverty. "That is not so," Judge Rosalasky told him. "Your parents were respectable and you once occupied a good position as a bookkeeper. You were a bright scholar, and the pride of our class. The police tell me you have been arrested numerous times and are a confirmed criminal."

At the request of Judge Rosalasky, Carl Escher-Hansen, the millionaire philanthropist-lawyer, will have Harris examined to determine his sanity. The prisoner's family believe he is insane.
