

FUNERAL SPLIT UP BY FEUD OF RIVAL UNIONS

Business Agent Orders Drivers Not to Follow the Hearse.

LONG DELAY AT CHURCH

Finally Body Is Taken One Way and Sixty Carriages Go Another.

It was a scattered funeral that Michael Tully, of Williamsburg, had today. The hearse containing his body went from St. Vincent de Paul's Church, in North 27th street, near Bedford avenue, to Calvary Cemetery, over the route regularly followed by the relatives and friends of the deceased, travelled through all sorts of devious wanderings on the way. They descended on Calvary Cemetery from half a dozen directions, and the funeral was half an hour in collecting itself at the gates.

A feud between the Liberty Dawn Association, an organization of cab drivers, on one side, and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, allied with the United Brotherhood of Teamsters, on the other, was responsible for the sad distribution of Mr. Tully's funeral. The drivers of the coaches refused to follow the driver of the hearse. They would have allowed him to bring up at the tail end of the procession, but who ever heard of a funeral so organized?

Drivers Get Orders

Mr. Tully was a prosperous and popular butcher in Senator McCarran's district, where the Irish have successfully withstood the growing tide of Jews and Italians. He died on Tuesday. Arrangements for the funeral were made by George Hamilton, an undertaker, of No. 2 Bedford avenue.

The demand for carriages was so great and so many other funerals set for today, that Mr. Hamilton was compelled to recruit the vehicles for the Tully mourners from all over Brooklyn. There was no trouble until the body had been conveyed from the Tully residence, at North Seventh street and Bedford avenue, to the church. While the corpse and the mourners were in the sacred edifice a business agent of the International Teamsters' Brotherhood questioned the driver of the hearse and found that he was a member of the Liberty Dawn Association. There is a deadly feud on between the Liberty Dawn and the International Brotherhood.

The business agent went down the long line of carriages and ordered all the coach drivers to refuse to follow the hearse unless a Brotherhood man was assigned to drive it.

Business Agent Obdurates

By the time the order had been passed along the coffin hearse, brought up and placed in the hearse. Then undertaker Hamilton was informed of the condition that had arisen during the church services. The mourners crowded around the undertaker and the drivers crowded around the business agent of the Brotherhood. The business agent of the Brotherhood was adamant. The policeman on the beat tried to arrange a truce, and, failing, called Capt. Kramer to the aid of the Station. When the captain arrived an immense crowd had gathered and he went for the reserves. At last the funeral started on its disorganized way after a delay of more than half an hour.

Four open carriages containing the moral tributes preceded the hearse by several blocks. Two carriages carrying the immediate family of the deceased followed the route of the hearse, but were kept out of sight of it. The other coaches were driven as their drivers willed.

CAN'T "SHOE" AWAY WIFE IN THIS LAND

Son of Moorish Chief Learns Barbary Coast Methods Are Bad Form Here.

This business of divorcing a wife by throwing a pair of shoes at her is orthodox in Northern Africa, but it is not quite the thing in New York.

Achmar Silver, who says he is the son of a Moorish chief, and who lives at No. 25 Washington street, learned this today when he was arraigned in the Tombs Court charged with having thrown a new pair of thick-soled shoes at his loving wife. His defense was that he wanted to divorce her and that the shoe tossing expedient which is quite the custom in Africa, whence he came, was all that occurred to him at the time. He said that his wife had distressed him by working in an all-night restaurant where she was a waitress. She said that the paucity of support from her husband had made her work, and Magistrate Drogge told her both to go home and be good.

THIEF HIS SHIELD AGAINST PISTOL HELD BY A PAL

Policeman's Revolver Called the Bluff of Two Alleged Burglars.

Policeman John P. Barron, who was recently complimented by Deputy Commissioner Hanson for a good arrest, saw two young men approaching the corner of Ninth avenue and Forty-ninth street at 3 A. M. today. One carried a revolver, and the other a pistol. When Barron asked where they got the young fellow carrying it, he said he had been playing at a dance and was going home. At the same time he slipped something that gleamed to his friend.

Barron, drawing his revolver, ordered the men to surrender. At the same time the second young man flashed the gleaming object that had been passed. It was a revolver, right on a line with Barron's stomach. The policeman jumped behind the first young man, who had passed the revolver, and, using him as a shield, ordered the other one to throw down the gun, which he did.

Barron marched them to the West Forty-seventh street station, where the men gave their descriptions as James Kelch, twenty-one years old, of No. 75 Second avenue, and William Kelly, twenty years old, of No. 124 Bloomingdale street, Hoboken. Kelly had a revolver besides that slipped to him by Kelch. He also carried a Jimmy.

Four hours later, Max Rothstein, who keeps a second-hand sporting goods store at No. 590 Tenth avenue, rushed into the station to report that burglars had jumped through a brick wall from the room adjoining his store and had, in the confusion, taken a cornet, a raincoat and other stuff. When the young men were arraigned before Magistrate Crane in West Side Court, Kelly claimed the raincoat had been his for a year. He was ordered to put it on and it was big enough for two of him.

"You're it," said the Magistrate, imposing $100 bail for trial. He complimented Barron for going against the empty revolver.

WIFE GOT THE STORE AND PUT SIMON OUT

Husband Said He Wasn't Needed After He Gave Her the Business.

Simon Simon didn't meet a pie in the street. He had a business, and he was doing it. He had a store at No. 126 Bath avenue, Bath Beach, and a $200 house to his wife, Fannie, a year ago. As soon as he did that, he says, he was no longer regarded as an artistic piece of household furniture, although he had been married thirty-nine years. He asserts that as soon as the deed was signed and the ink dry Mrs. Simon said, "Good-by. Let the postmaster know where you want your mail delivered."

When he came around to the store, he says, his wife and strapping son Samuel, aged twenty-five years, would greet him with the snappy word, "Skid-booth!" and show him the exit signs. Simon became peevish last night and went to the dry goods emporium, where he was received with the furthest north reception.

It irked him so that he seized a bolt of percale and began ripping off a few yards. He had just progressed to six yards when the Simon entered and tried to urge him to the doorway. This didn't move him, so she started up the phonograph on which she kept the record: "I've Said My Last Farewell, Too, Too, Good-by. This was too much for Simon, and, seizing the brass horn from the talking machine, he sneered Mrs. Simon on the map with "At that moment the son Samuel entered impetuously, and seeing his father in a loving embrace, rushed from the bargain counter into Bath avenue. Samuel then had Simon Simon arrested for the reason that the Magistrate ordered her to be quiet while the son made the complaint.

Magistrate Crane then put Simon Simon in $50 bonds to keep the peace.

JOHN DREW'S LEADING LADY SPEEDY TRAVELLER.

Her Chauffeur Pays a Fine for Violating the Speed Law.

Frank Rivett, who was born within sound of Bowbells and who came to New York from London a couple of weeks ago as chauffeur for Miss Billie Burke, John Drew's leading lady, made his first appearance in any American police court today.

Before Magistrate Crane in the Harlem Court Rivett was charged with having driven an automobile containing Miss Burke, another woman and a man, the name of Chappelle in Seventh avenue last night at the rate of twenty and one-half miles an hour. His defense was that he was not going that fast. Magistrate Crane believed Policeman Genes, who had made the arrest, and fined Rivett $10. "The fine is a joke," said the Magistrate. "I ought to put you in jail!"

FOUR CHILDREN LOSE LIVES IN DEATH TRAP

Angelo Marino, seven years old, who lived with his parents at No. 324 East One Hundred and Seventh street, fell into the East River at the foot of One Hundred and Seventh street yesterday. His body has not been recovered. The place where the accident happened is an anchorage for the barges which carry rubbish out to sea. Children board the barges in search of wood, and to get on the barge they have to cross narrow planks. In this way four in a month have been drowned by falling off board.

SABINE WOONG SPOILED BY COP

Policeman on the Job Saves Girl From Being Forcefully Wed.

Hearing in his left hand a gold-framed photograph of Amelia Bichner, a maid in the household of N. C. Korff, of No. 14 Edgewood avenue, Frank Calidra called at the Korffer home today and demanded that the Dichter girl come out and marry him. He had called yesterday and demanded a revolver, and when he appeared today Policeman Birmingham, who had been kept in the house, went out and arrested him. But before the policeman appeared Calidra caught the girl around the waist and begged her to go with him and be married at once.

Policeman Birmingham took the maid to the Harlem Police Court, where Magistrate Crane, after warning him to cease his attentions to the young woman, let him go. Calidra was not shaken off and for weeks he has appeared at the Korffer house twice a day to call upon the maid. He said today that he would go away and try to forget her.

KILLED HER DOG AND THEN BEAT WOMAN

Farmer Held for Special Sessions on Charge of Kicking Dog to Death.

Daniel Cunningham, a farmer of Hoboken and West Third street, was today arraigned in Coney Island Court charged with cruelty to animals and punishing a woman, Mrs. Pauline Metzger, and her sister, Mrs. Rosie Decker, were the complainants. Mrs. Metzger said that Cunningham passed their farmhouse next to his farm, Tuesday night, and came out their four dogs, three black-and-tans and one fox-terrier. She said that he then kicked the terrier so severely that it died the next day.

Wednesday night the women met Cunningham and upbraided him for killing the dog. They saw Mrs. Decker called him a "boaster" at which he punched her face. Cunningham said in his defense that each night as he passed the farmhouse the women set the dogs on him, and that to loosen the terrier's hold on his trousers he had kicked it.

Magistrate Voorhees held him in $500 bail on the cruelty charge and $50 for the assault charge in Special Sessions.
