

CHAUFFEUR TELLS OF BAKER'S LAST RIDE TO BOGOTA

"I'm Poisoned!" He Kept Crying, All the Way, His Head on Mrs. Hurd's Shoulder.

ARRESTS ARE EXPECTED.

Police Waiting for Chemist's Findings of Poison and Looking for New Man.

Officials of Bergen County, N. J., are working this afternoon to find a chauffeur lately employed by Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Hurd, at whose home in Bogota Walter Farnsworth Baker, the Boston clubman, who is alleged to have been poisoned, died without medical attention early in the morning of Oct. 27, after having been removed from Brown's chop-house on Broadway.

This chauffeur could not be found today by reporters and others who looked for him. What particularly interests the county authorities is a story which the Hurd chauffeur is alleged to have told to another chauffeur when he brought the car back from Bogota to "Kid" McCoy's garage in Forty-fifth street on the day after the death. This second chauffeur, who is known only as "Bobby," made a statement to an official at Hackensack, but this was ten days ago, before murder was suspected.

"Bobby's" account of his conversation with the Hurd chauffeur is said to be substantially as follows: "Bobby, it was the damndest night I ever passed through in my life. All the way from New York to Bogota Mr. Baker was groaning and crying out: 'Oh, I'm poisoned, I'm poisoned.' He had his head on Mrs. Young's shoulder and she was trying to soothe him by telling him he was only sick but he kept saying he was poisoned. Mr. Hurd turned around and told him to please shut up as he was only drunk and sick. But Baker kept saying he was poisoned. Baker looked to me to be fairly sober, for him. He was still saying that he had been poisoned when we got him into the house."

Waiting for Findings. It is announced that definite action will be taken by District Attorney Koster, of Bergen County, as soon as he receives from Boston an official copy of the findings of the chemists of the Harvard Medical School who found poison in the stomach and internal organs of Baker.

The attested report will reach Mr. Koster to-night. On the strength of it he is expected to ask the Massachusetts authorities and the relatives of the dead youth to exhume the body and return it to Hackensack for an autopsy and an inquest. As witnesses before the grand jury with reference to the case, Mrs. Hurd, Mrs. Hurd's sister, Mrs. George W. Young, the physician who reached the house soon after death had occurred; the undertaker who embalmed the body that same night and all the other persons who figured in any way in the events of Oct. 26 and 27.

As a result of the facts that Mr. Koster hopes to bring out before this inquest it is probable that warrants for murder will be issued against a man and a woman, and possibly against two men and two women.

Chemists Finished Work Last Night. The chemists were employed to make the examination of the internal organs by the dead man's brother, Edward F. Baker, who has insisted that Baker was poisoned. It was pointed out, however, that the poison he noted might have been the result of embalming the body.

The chemists' report shows there was poison in the kidneys and the intestines, when it was impossible for embalming fluid to be injected. How much poison was discovered by the chemists will be made known by their report. It is possible that the report will be kept secret for the present, to give the authorities here an opportunity to take action. Edward F. Baker received the report from his attorney, Mr. Nay, and will abide by the advice of his lawyer.

Missing an Hour and a Half. The Pinkertons employed by Baker's brother account for Baker's movements on the fatal evening up to the time he became ill in Brown's chop house, except for one hour and a half. At 7:30 o'clock, so Mr. and Mrs. Hurd have stated, Baker left them at the ferry-house of the Pennsylvania Railroad, where they had arranged to meet him. He made a stop at the ferry-house for a later time with them. Nobody can be found who knows or who will tell where he spent the ensuing hour and a half. There is a theory that he visited an apartment-house and there swallowed the poison which is believed by his relatives to have been taken.

In Hackensack the county authorities are paying particular attention to several stories that have come to the surface in the last few hours. They are very anxious to know how much the bill for the embalming amounted to and how many of the houses did bills of the kind were paid direct by Baker.

According to the Plunkerton, Mr. and Mrs. Hurd and Mrs. Young talked with them willingly on the first two days of the investigation, but since then the detectives have been unable to see them. This the Hurd lawyer, Maloney Lawrence, says he advised them to do in order to save themselves from annoyance.

FORCED TO GET CASH ON CITY'S CHECKS AT THE SMALLER BANKS

HOW MUCH CASH DID GOVERNMENT ADVANCE ON CITY SECURITIES? CORTELYOU REFUSES TO STATE.

At the time the city turned over to J. Pierpont Morgan the $30,000,000 of city revenue bonds this statement was made by Comptroller Metz:

"It is expected that $10,000,000 of this $30,000,000 bond issue will be sold abroad and that this will tend to relieve the general situation by stimulating the movement of gold in this direction.

"Banks of issue in America, moreover, by purchasing these bonds will be enabled to free immediately an equivalent number of Government bonds, which, by being made available as security for a further issue of circulating currency, will help to relieve the stringency in the money market.

"While these considerations are important, it should be understood that they were incidental. The city of New York, of course, was not to be used as a nurse to coddle the crippled financial situation at large. It has not been so used because, I repeat, the city has made a good bargain."

The checks for $30,000,000 received by Comptroller Metz were two in number, each for $15,000,000, and were drawn on the National City Bank and the First National Bank. James Stillman, president of the former bank, signed one check, and George F. Baker, president of the First National, the other. The Comptroller deposited the checks in the opposite bank from which they were drawn.

The amount of Government bonds released under the process outlined by the Comptroller and what part these bonds played in the releasing of $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 in gold by Secretary Cortelyou are unknown.

The city received for these bonds not cash but checks.

CORTELYOU REFUSES TO EXPLAIN.

(Special to The Evening World.) WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 7.—Secretary Cortelyou declines to state how much Government money has been advanced to the New York banks on municipal or other securities.

RICH WOMAN DROPS DEAD AT BREAKFAST

Every Effort Was Made to Restore Respiration, but Doctor Said It Was Useless. Mrs. Fannie Claude Mantle, a wealthy woman, died at the breakfast table today in the old Adams house, a colonial relic standing in Audubon Park, near the end of the Riverside Drive extension. Mrs. Mantle was talking with her husband, J. G. C. Mantle, a mechanical engineer, of No. 1807 Park avenue, and with her two nieces, who live in the house, when she suddenly fell back unconscious.

One of the women ran to the home of Dr. W. H. Fisher, at Broadway and One Hundred and Fifty-eighth street. When Dr. Fisher reached the house he found Mr. Mantle and the other niece, Mrs. Agnew, had carried Mrs. Mantle into an adjoining room and were working over her. Although she had ceased to breathe Dr. Fisher tried some time to revive her.

The husband, who seemed frantic with grief, wanted to run from the house to his workrooms to get a J. Arsonal machine for causing artificial respiration. The physician finally restrained him by assurances that his wife was dead and no earthly power could bring her back to life. Dr. Fisher gave heart failure as the probable cause.

Mrs. Mantle, who was thirty-nine years old, had appeared to be in excellent health lately. Owing to the suddenness of the death the coroner's office was notified.

Hollis, has brought a suit against the company for $7,315.45. She bases the claim on the legal and diplomatic services of her late husband in securing the adjustment of the claim, less 25 per cent paid on account.

OSBORN'S MOTHER DENIES HE'LL WED GIRL-WIFE AGAIN

Maloney Family's Friends Say Second Ceremony Will Be By Priest.

NEW STORY OF FLIGHT.

Left Clarkson at Montreal. It Is Said, and Went Into Retreat.

The matrimonial difficulties of Helen, the daughter of Martin Osborn, Standard Oil millionaire of New York and Philadelphia, remain in a muddled state. Friends of the Maloney family in the city have given out so many contradictory stories that a Philadelphia lawyer would find himself bewildered trying to figure out the truth.

According to the latest reports the Maloney family have arranged to have Helen re-married to Arthur Herbert Osborn, the young New York broker, to whom she was married by a Protestant minister at Mamaroneck in October, 1906. Martin Osborn and his daughter have returned to Philadelphia, and there was a family conference at the Maloney home in that city last night, at which young Osborn is said to have been present.

There is strong opposition to the Maloney plan of straightening out the tangle on the part of Mrs. Osborn, mother of the young man in the case. She is proud and has advised her son against agreeing to a marriage contract, and while the Maloney family would not have recognized two years ago.

Against Second Marriage. "My son is not going to marry Miss Maloney again," said Mrs. Osborn at her apartment in the Bedford-Clyde Central Park West, to-day. "It is not true that he is in Philadelphia. He is in New York, but he will not be seen. Nor is it true that he has become a Roman Catholic. A great deal of matter that was not true has been given to the newspapers about this affair."

Philadelphia friends of the Maloney family say that young Osborn has agreed to embrace the Catholic faith and to be remarried by a priest. In that case, the Maloney would furnish the young couple with a fine establishment and consider the Clarkson incident as a forgotten piece of history.

Some serious scenes in Philadelphia have given intimations that Helen Maloney did not go to Europe with Clark-son. The latest version from the Maloney family is this: Helen went to Montreal with Clarkson, innocently. Soon after they reached that city he procured a marriage license and tried to persuade her to marry him. She refused and returned at once to her people, while Clarkson went to England from Montreal. The new story states that Miss Maloney was in a Catholic retreat near Philadelphia until yesterday, the day before when her father returned from Europe.

Searched in Europe. This story does not agree with the happenings following Miss Maloney's disappearance from the room at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, when she was last seen. She had been furnished with a passport and had been furnished with a passport and had been furnished with a passport.

Here's a Thriller, With Big Bludgeon, Cab and Lady Rescuer All in It

McGloin Gives Details of His Abduction, of Being Robbed of $42, but the Mean Police Won't Believe It.

McGloin, who is twenty-four years old, is now a painter.

It is a thrilling story that James H. McGloin, of Wellesley, Mass., tells of having been abducted on a main-traveling thoroughfare in a cab, of being beaten and gagged and bound and robbed of $42 of hearing a woman's voice crying "Do not kill him!" and of being left finally in Central Park, where it is a story with enough spine-chillers in it to keep Theodore Roosevelt busy for a year. But the police are inclined to cast a few pinches of sodium chloride, commonly called salt, on the tale of Mr. McGloin from Wellesley.

McGloin, who is twenty-four years old, is now a painter. He used to be a baker of bread in the United States Navy, and while he was there he acquired a fascinating series of tattooed designs that make sections of him look like wall paper for the dining-room. He has rather long, rather light hair and is good looking.

Found Him in the Park. He came down from Massachusetts last week to visit his friend, George Weber, of No. 21 West One Hundredth street. Tuesday night he went downtown to see the election crowds. Early yesterday morning, John H. Craig, a cabman, of No. 311 East Sixty-second street, found him seemingly unconscious in the park. A sponge which had apparently contained a string of McGloin's hair was found in his mouth and his hands were hit with a gravel. Craig took McGloin to his hospital where the surgeons soon revived him. He had no bruises on him.

McGloin said that when he got back from Park Row after viewing the posting of the election returns he made a mistake and started in the doorway of No. 81 West One Hundredth street, instead of into the house next door, where the Webbers live. Halfway up the first flight—this is McGloin's account—two men leaped upon him out of the darkness. He fought back, "Bang, bang, bang," down grand right and left, ladies' chairs, chairs, all; but the two men overpowered him. They drag him down the steps. They throw him into a cab which is waiting at the curb. Two men composing the committee on entertainment are in the cab. They seize him with steady hands and choke him, throttle him. Throttle has got choke skinned a block when you're writing one of these heart-interest stories. The Reception Committee mount to the seat.

Kind Lady Saves Him. The cab whirled away through the darkness. All is lost. No, for as his senses leave him, McGloin hears a woman's voice utter this fatal remark: "Do not slay the stranger," or words to that effect. All is dark before his eyes. He knows no more until he awakes at the hospital. McGloin's head was about yesterday and had Mr. McGloin repeat his story for them. They laugh in a coarse, brutal, plain-clothes manner and go back to the station and resume their game of forty-fives with the doorman.

These detectives say that at the time the cab abduction took place Mrs. Weber was standing in her front door. Two policemen were at the door of a polling place directly across the street at No. 60. A detective and another policeman were passing the time of day at the Manhattan avenue corner, half a block away. Various people were passing to and fro and no one, as people will on an election night.

McGloin said that when he got back from Park Row after viewing the posting of the election returns he made a mistake and started in the doorway of No. 81 West One Hundredth street, instead of into the house next door, where the Webbers live. Halfway up the first
