ROOSEVELT GIVES REASON FOR BAN ON "IN GOD WE TRUST"

Motto on Coins, Instead of Moving People to Reverence, Is Made the Subject of Jokes, and So He Struck It Off.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—In answer to one of the numerous protests which have been received at the White House against the new gold coin which has been coined without the words "In God We Trust," President Roosevelt has written a letter which he to-day made public. The letter follows:

"When the question of the new coinage came up we looked into the law and found there was no warrant therein for putting 'In God We Trust' on the coins. As the custom, although without legal warrant, had grown up, however, I might have felt at liberty to keep the inscription had I approved of its being on the coinage.

"But as I did not approve of it, I did not direct that it should again be put on. Of course, the matter of the law is absolutely in the hands of Congress, and any direction of Congress in the matter will be immediately obeyed. At present, as I have said, there is no warrant in law for the inscription.

Does Positive Harm.

"My own feeling in a matter of this kind to my very firm conviction that to put such a motto on coins, or to use it in any kind of manner, not only does no good but does positive harm, and in effect irreverence, which comes damnably close to sacrilege. A beautiful and solemn sentence such as the one in question should be treated and uttered only with that fine reverence which necessarily implies a certain exaltation of spirit.

Lack of Reverence.

"It is a motto which it is, indeed, well to have inscribed on our great national monuments, in our temples of justice, in our legislative halls, and in buildings such as those at West Point and Annapolis—in short, wherever it will tend to arouse and inspire a lofty emotion in those who look thereon. But it seems to me eminently unwise to cheapen such a motto by use on coins, just as it would be to cheapen it by use on postage stamps or in advertisements. As regards its use on the coinage we have actual experience which tends to confirm my opinion.

Hospital Doctors Have Faint Hopes of Saving His Life, They Say.

William Corcoran, twenty-two years old, a clerk, living at No. 431 Enfield street, Brooklyn, inhaled enough gas and swallowed enough carbolic acid to-day to end his life, according to the physicians at Bradford Street Hospital. Corcoran was found moaning on a bed in his room by one of the servants. He was partly conscious and was fully dressed. On a table near his bed was the following note addressed to his parents:

"Forgive me for what I am doing. I wish you a long life and more happiness than I have had in my short one. Some day Mayme will know the truth. She will then be sorry. So has misjudged me. Farewell forever.

WILLIAM.

Dr. Scanlon, who is the Brooklyn Club baseball pitcher, and who conducts an office nearby the Corcoran home in winter, was called. He ordered the young man removed to the hospital.

MRS. BRADLEY DEJECTED SEES JURORS CHOSEN

Buries Her Face When Name of Ex-Senator Brown, Man She Shot, Is Mentioned.

(Special to The Evening World.)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Forty-six prospective jurors were examined in District Criminal Court No. 1 to-day in an effort to obtain a panel to serve in the trial of Mrs. Annie M. Bradley for the murder of former Senator Arthur Brown of Utah. Three times during the afternoon session the Government announced that it was satisfied with the twelve men in the box, but each time Mr. Hoover for the defense challenged one of the number.

Mrs. Bradley was not in court when the session began to-day. She reached the court-house shortly after 1 o'clock and was taken to a cell in the lower corridor, where she remained until summoned to court.

Just behind Mrs. Bradley, not four feet away, was Max Brown, the twenty-five-year-old son of the murdered man. Mr. Brown looked long at Mrs. Bradley when she came in, and few in the courtroom knew of his silent challenge to her.

District Attorney Baker briefly outlined the case to the prospective jurors. When Mr. Baker stated tersely that Mrs. Bradley was about to be tried for the murder of Arthur Brown, United States Senator from Utah, Mrs. Bradley's face went down on her hands and she was overcome. She did not raise her eyes until Mr. Baker had finished. Her face was deathly pale and the lines about her mouth were deeply drawn. There were deep circles under her eyes, and she gave every evidence of having had a sleepless night.

Punishment Stirr Her.

The reports that Mrs. Bradley had some idea as to the kind of men she desired to have on the jury were certainly not borne out by her demeanor to-day. She apparently had no interest in the proceedings. She sat for the greater part of the time with her cheek resting on her hand and looking into space.

When a discussion in capital punishment resulted through the examination of the witnesses, Mrs. Bradley showed the first sign of interest. She bit her lip when the point was pronounced by either side. There is no (Continued on Second Page.)

A NOTED SUCCESS.

The daily increasing throngs attending the Fire Sale at Ludwig Baumann & Co.'s magnificent furniture establishment on Eighth avenue, from Thirty-fifth to Thirty-sixth street, forcibly demonstrate that it still holds the key of the public.

The goods, damaged by the fire, are being placed on the floors as rapidly as possible, as the firm intends to have the last Great Event known in the history of merchandising. Exceptional opportunities will be offered Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

CUE CHAMPION HOPPE'S BROTHER ODDLY MISSING

Frank, Pool-Player of Note, Hasn't Been Seen for a Week.

LEFT TO SEE PROMOTER Anxious Father Can't Locate "C. W. Lyons" or His Lost Son.

The police have been asked to look for Frank Hoppe, brother of Willie Hoppe, billiard champion of the world. Frank, who is twenty-two years old and one of the crack pool players of the country, left his home in Ridgely Park, N. Y., last Thursday and has not been seen or heard of since.

Mrs. Hoppe, the boy's mother, said to an Evening World reporter to-day that when he started for this city from home he said he was going to see C. W. Lyons, a promoter, of Fifth street and Madison avenue, for whom he intended to go to work.

When he did not return home Thursday, Frank Hoppe, Sr., came to town to look C. W. Lyons up. He could find no person of that name at the address mentioned, or anywhere else. The parents of the boy waited patiently until to-day when they became alarmed and went to the police.

Willie Hoppe is now in Holland. Frank is the elder of the two boys by about two years. Both were taught to play pool and billiards immediately after they were graduated from the grade.

PANIC IN SUBWAY TRAIN FAR UNDER HARLEM RIVER

Passengers Heaped on Floors By Jolt That Shatters Windows.

There was a panic of considerable proportions among its hundred passengers, when a northbound train, rushing at high speed through the tube under Harlem River on the West Farms division of the subway halted to-day with a suddenness that shattered windows and piled men, women and children in heaps between the seats and in the aisles.

The accident happened about midway between the One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street and the Mott avenue station. In order to climb the grade it is necessary for trains going north to take the stretch at a good clip.

The train in question was bound for Bronx Park, well filled with picnic parties of women and children and a few men. As it slid around the curve above One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street a "trip" rose up under the forward car. A "trip" is a hook which catches on the brake of a halted train and holds it until the motorman's pressure on the lever releases it.

The springing of the trip stopped the train with a terrific jolt. Passengers tumbled bodily through the air and landed under the shower of glass that rained down in the cars from smashing irons and window sashes. Scrambling to their feet most of them ran back and forth in fright, begging the guards to tell them what had happened. The motorman knew what had occurred. He yelled to the conductor of the forward car, Pat Rooney, that there was no danger, and Rooney hurried the length of the train, reassuring the panicky women and children as he went.

The mobman tooted his distress whistle and got help from the two nearest stations. It was half an hour, however, before the brake of the train was loosed. In the meanwhile two physicians who chanced to be aboard attended the hurts of six or seven persons who had skinned noses and barked wrists. Nobody needed an ambulance.

PLUNGERS LOSE BIG FORTUNE ON AQUEDUCT RACE

Bedouin Was Backed Heavily, but Spooner Took the Lead and Stood Off a Brush When Near the Wire.

BERRYMAID CAPTURES THE BELDAME HANDICAP.

Troublemaker, at 6 to 1, Lands the Second Event on the Card and Senator Barrett, at 7 to 1, Wins the First Race.

(Special to The Evening World.)

AQUEDUCT RACE TRACK, Nov. 13.—A killing of immense proportions was attempted in the all-ages handicap, fourth on the card here this afternoon. Bedouin was the medium of the plunge, and the money went in on him in chunks. Everybody seemed anxious to get aboard, and when the horses were at the post every book was loaded with Bedouin money.

FINDER OF ROYAL ANCESTRY SUES FOR $500 WAGES

Traced Mrs. Woolsey Back to King Alfred the Great, He Declares.

Proud of her title of Colonial Dame and that she is a daughter of the Revolution, Mrs. Thomasee Rigby Woolsey, wife of Minthorne Woolsey, banker at No. 33 Nassau street and Vice-President of the Selma National Bank of Selma, Ala., aspired to be a member of the "Order of the Crown."

To be a member of this order of American women, of which Miss H. L. Farnsworth, of Detroit, is President, one must prove lineal descent from royalty. Mrs. Woolsey employed several genealogists to find out if any royal blood could be found in her veins.

Charles H. Browning, of Ardmore, Pa., with whom she dealt by letter, professed to have traced Mrs. Woolsey's ancestry back to royalty in the person of Alfred the Great, the most famous of the Saxon kings of England, who reigned in the ninth century.

For finding out all this for her, Browning put in a bill in December, 1901, for $500.

But the Order of the Crown has official genealogists, notably, Wilham Tudor, George A. Gordon, L. Vernon Briggs and Eben Putnam, of Philadelphia, Boston and other ancient towns, and when Mrs. Woolsey's genealogist's report was submitted with her application for membership, the official genealogists rejected it, and Mrs. Woolsey's application was also rejected.

Most of the genealogists named had worked on her genealogy and had made reports, and the highest bill rendered by any of them was for $75. On the score and because of the publication by Browning of an article which she says completely refutes the report he made to her on the descent from King Alfred, Mrs. Woolsey repudiated Browning's bill. He assigned it to George A. Raftery, and Raftery sued for Woolsey for the amount claimed, with interest.

The case came to trial to-day before Justice Hascall and a jury in the City Court. Mrs. Woolsey was not in court. Her husband was, and deprecated the notoriety which his wife was getting from King Alfred. Woolsey lives at No. 29 West Ninety-fourth street.

Browning is a witness. He said he traced back to thirty-two ancestors of Mrs. Woolsey who came over from England as immigrants, before the year 1700. He said, after describing multitudinous labors:

"By accident, I found a lead that induced me to believe one of Gov. Dudley's wives was of royal descent. I found that Dorothy York belonged to a family descended from King Alfred, and finally to King Alfred the Great."

OCEANIC BRINGS CARGO OF $8,250,000 IN GOLD.

Stowed away in the strong room of the White Star liner Oceanic when she reached port to-day were 110 boxes containing gold bars and coins valued at $8,250,000. The gold was consigned to New York banks. This shipment brings the arrival of gold since the beginning of the bank trouble up to $31,460,000.

More than six millions of dollars in gold has been shipped abroad for import to the United States since the present movement began. Announcements to-day of engagements of $500,000 by the First National Bank of Chicago, $500,000 by the Third York and Savings Bank and $1,600,000 by banks in New Orleans brought the grand total to $60,330,000.
