

WARD'S ISLAND PATIENTS KEPT IN TERROR OF BEING CRUELLY CHOKED AND BEATEN

Unfortunate Insane Are Struck in the Face, Kicked in the Abdomen, Slammed Into Corners or Dragged About Floor.

work by men who have been trained in the school of brutality. This training is handed down from man to man, and has been so handed down for years and years.

It will be noted that in the diary of The Evening World Investigator the names of the patients who were subjected to ill treatment are given.

The names of the attendants designated as B, C, D, E and F, are in the possession of The Evening World.

Asylum Brutalities Seen by Evening World's Investigator

BY DR. JOHN C. MCCARTHY.

The fine buildings of the Manhattan State Hospital are situated on Ward's Island, one of the chain of small islands in the East River, about a block from One Hundred and Sixteenth street, Manhattan.

The whole island is given over to the uses of the institution. A more ideal spot for a charitable institution could hardly be imagined.

The island, as it is familiarly called by its inhabitants, is a veritable little garden, with well kept lawns and roads, neatly trimmed hedges, well constructed buildings, and with an air of order, cleanliness and repose pervading it everywhere.

It is unfortunate that the general public does not know more intimately and take more interest in the insane, who are really worthy and grateful, and not nearly so forbidding or dangerous as is popularly imagined.

It was to study them and their treatment that I applied at Ward's Island on the last day of October for the position of attendant. There is just a little red tape as is absolutely necessary in securing a position, and after furnishing two references and making out a very serviceable resume regarding my previous work with my patients.

HUMANE INSTRUCTIONS THAT DON'T GO. I had had some experience and some ideas of my own on the subject. I was very much pleased, therefore, when I was instructed that the golden rule, to be my guide, and that I was to mingle with my patients in kindness—that I was to do to them as I would wish to be done by them if I was unfortunate and sick, away from home and my freedom restricted by the laws of reason.

With these humane instructions, I was turned over to an assistant supervisor, who took me to my charge attendant. By him I was assigned to do duty on the recess of a large, semicircular inclosure, the center of the ward in which most of the sixty patients in Ward 4 are kept sitting during the entire day, except when at exercise.

Two attendants, at least, are always on duty before the recess to administer to the wants of the patients, to keep them in order and to mingle with them in kindness before I had time to take in all of the above details my attention was attracted to a small room at my back, the clothes room, where I saw a tall man in uniform, whom I will designate as attendant B, give a patient a blow from his fist in the face.

After the encounter he had a swelling on his forehead and on the back of his right hand. I questioned him later as to the offense for which he had resorted to such violence, and learned that he had gone to the clothes room for a rag with which to wipe up some stain on the floor.

"HANGED" FOR RESENTING ABUSE. A little while I noticed a stout, red-haired young fellow, who was very talkative and mischievous, tormenting by his remarks another patient. He was reported for that by attendant C, who cuffed him about the face and head.

As this method of treatment will be referred to many times later on, it is well to describe the mode of procedure at some length now. I had been in the ward then less than two hours. As there were already three able-bodied attendants administering to the patient, I did not think it would be expected of me to participate, and I remained an interested spectator.

CHOKED UNTIL UNCONSCIOUS. A towel was slipped around the patient's neck and twisted and drawn against an over the back of his head. The patient's breath was thus completely shut off, the lips began to swell and the mouth to froth, the veins of the head became turgid, and the patient soon became, for the time, unconscious.

"HANGED" AND THEN BEATEN. I held one hand and another attendant held the other while he was "hanged." As he lay on the floor, still in a state of semi-consciousness, he was kicked in the joints, ribs, stomach and back. He was then thrown onto a bench and hit with fists in the front and sides of the face.

BEATEN FOR BEING SLOW. Such was the case of Liook Martin, who seemed to be jolting about the hall in a confused state on the evening of Oct. 1. Attendant B, grabbed him by the collar, rushed him down the polished floor of the hall, as slippery as ice, and, just as they reached the recess, by a skilful yank and trip, landed Martin with a thump of the head and back on the hard pine floor of the ward.

DYING WIFE BEGS FOR RELEASE OF BRUTAL HUSBAND

With Her Skull Fractured by Hatchet Blow, Pleads With Police.

The surgeons at the Presbyterian Hospital say that the case of Mrs. Mary Ellen Murray is one of the most remarkable that has ever come under observation in the institution.

Patrick Murray, husband of the injured woman, is locked up in the East Eighty-eighth Street Station, charged with having struck his wife with the hatchet. Although Mrs. Murray has since made a full statement to the coroner, in which she tells how her husband struck her and of the quarrel that led up to it, she spent half an hour before going to the hospital in an effort to dissuade the police from locking up Patrick.

After the children had left, Mrs. Murray prepared breakfast for her husband. He objected to it and a row resulted, during which Murray grabbed up a hatchet and struck his wife on the back of the head. Mrs. Murray struggled with him and her screams attracted Policeman Coughlin. He led the pair around to the station.

Milk Wagon Upset by Runaway Horse. Two blocks on Lexington avenue, between One Hundred and Seventeenth and One Hundred and Nineteenth streets, had a milk bath and several stray dogs had a feast this afternoon by the overturning of a milk wagon which a runaway horse had upset.

When it reached the station, the animal was badly frightened and the driver, Henry Leopold, of No. 142 Amsterdam avenue, while the horse was standing on One Hundred and Seventeenth street, near Lexington avenue, an auto scared the horse and it bolted toward Lexington avenue.

Taylor street, Van Nest, were among the passengers in the rear car of the first train. Both were badly hurt, and were taken to Fordham Hospital.

A few minutes after the collision the motor engineer of the first train cut off the first five cars and ran them up to the terminal at Bronx Park. There he dropped out of sight. Detectives were detailed to look for him.

No Warning of Wreck. Walter R. Cole, of No. 2061 Boston road, was a passenger in the second car of the second train. He was badly out and bruised.

There were about twenty passengers in the car, said Mr. Cole. "The collision occurred just after the station was left, and before we got under full speed. There was no preliminary warning in the way of shutting off power or application of brakes."

The shock of the collision injured passengers on the train was affected. Those on the cross seats were thrown forward and jammed against the backs of their seats and those on the side seats were slid along until they landed in two heaps on the floor.

A policeman who saw the accident call for ambulances to Fordham, Lebonon and Lincoln Hospitals. The reserves from the Tremont and Bronx Park stations were called out and a fire alarm was sent in. The fire alarm brought a hook and ladder truck, and the firemen raised ladders and carried down about a score of passengers who were hemmed in the rear car of the first train and the front car of the second train. They were taken out through the windows.

Year in Jail Rather Than Support Child. Sentence Imposed on a Charge of Disorderly Conduct—Prisoner Undismayed.

El Buzika, shoe dealer, living at Tonawanda avenue and Irving street, Jersey City Heights, was sentenced to one year and a day in the Penitentiary to-day by Judge McCarthy, of the Second Criminal Court, Jersey City.

Buret had originally been arrested on a complaint charging him with failing to contribute to the support of his fifteen-year-old daughter Minnie. For thirteen years he had neglected the child to be reared and cared for by her mother, the widow of John J. Buret, 102 Beekman street, Jersey City.

Mrs. Englehardt had made repeated demands to the district attorney that he not allow the expenses attendant to the child's care and support, but he ignored her. Mrs. Englehardt finally appealed to the authorities, obtaining a summons for Buret to appear in court to-day on the charge of non-support.

In court, Buret refused to recognize his daughter, whereupon the judge, though he did not openly so, took Judge McCarthy asked Buret many questions regarding the child's care and support, but he ignored her.

Only recently through the death of a relative Buret was left a legacy of $10,000. His able business is prosperous.

I could say the same of the mingling in kindness and addressing with respect. So far, I had looked about me in vain for any act of kindness or word of sympathy toward a patient. Everywhere about me it was a yank, a shove or a kick, an oath or a vile name.

KICKED FOR LOOKING PLEASANT. I tried on the morning of Oct. 3 to engage in conversation a peculiar-looking, mischievous little fellow, who seemed to be conversing with me. There was not much that was intelligible in his replies.

Attendant Stamped on His Stomach. At the breakfast table a young colored man, Sammy Carter, was making some noise with his plate. I reproved him, and the incident would have been closed, for Carter was always very tractable.

Hanged' and Then Beaten. I held one hand and another attendant held the other while he was "hanged." As he lay on the floor, still in a state of semi-consciousness, he was kicked in the joints, ribs, stomach and back.

CLEVELAND IMPROVES; HE HAD INDIGESTION. Ex-President Up and About House, and His Doctors Declare He Has Fully Recovered.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 23.—It was declared at the residence of Grover Cleveland today that the report of his illness was exaggerated and that he had been suffering only from an attack of indigestion from which he had completely recovered this morning.

Dr. Carmichael, Mr. Cleveland's physician, visited the patient this morning and moving around the house and apparently showing no signs of yesterday's attack of his old enemy from which he has suffered for years whenever he eats imprudently.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Geoffrey Duvener, son of the head of the art firm of Duvener Brothers, of London, and New York, was married at the Central Synagogue in this city to-day to Ethel Lewis, daughter of Isaac Lewis, of Lewis & Marks, South African mining magnates. By this ceremony two of the wealthiest families in England are united, and two colossal fortunes brought under one management.
