

ARREST NOW FACES EX-JESUIT WHO SAYS COUSIN RUINED HIM

Drugan, Who Alleges She Wrecked His Career in Priesthood, Is Accused of Insanity, but Dodges Warrants - Case Up in Court To-Day.

It is promised that the most unusual story of intrigue that has ever been heard in New York State will come out on the first Monday in January, in the Supreme Court at White Plains, when Justice Keogh calls the hundred-thousand-dollar damage suit of Frank Drugan, for ten years a student of the Jesuit Brotherhood, against his cousin, Mrs. Emily F. Dunphy, charging her with ruining his life and causing his expulsion in disgrace from the novitiate of the order to which he had dedicated himself with the most solemn and binding vows that a human being can take.

Incidentally while pressing his action the young man must keep on dodging the confinement which threatens him as an alleged lunatic.

Drugan has been sojourning in New Jersey to evade service of a warrant issued by Magistrate Corrigan in the Tombs Police Court last Thursday, charging him with being insane, and if he appears on this side of the river he will be arrested and held.

The suit of the former Jesuit novice is altogether the most remarkable proceeding on record in this State. He alleges that Mrs. Dunphy, who is the daughter of his mother's brother, Thomas H. Barrett, of Yonkers, followed him persistently for years, declaring her great love for him and finally causing his ruin.

Doesn't Seek Money.

Alfred B. Osgood, of No. 81 Nassau street, attorney for Drugan, said to-day that the suit for $100,000 was not for money but to offset Mrs. Dunphy's efforts to have his client committed to an insane asylum.

To an Evening World reporter who saw him to-day at his home, No. 123 West One Hundred and Third street, Mr. Osgood said:

"The suit resolves itself into a fight on my client's part for vindication and an effort to save him from an asylum. He is not a lunatic in any sense of the word, but he is crushed by the ignominy of the position in which he finds himself.

In Great Mental Anguish.

"The young man is in the greatest mental anguish. His life in the monastery had unfitted him for contact with the world. His mind was that of a carefully reared young boy's. Things which every youth is supposed to know were to him closed books. I am sure that he will be able to convince any unbiased person that, while heartbroken over his expulsion from the order to which he had given his life, and feeling keenly the attitude in which he stands toward his church he is entirely sane."

According to his statements to his attorney, Drugan first noticed that his cousin was too ardent in her attitude toward him when she called to see him early in 1906. He claims that she kissed him with such fervor on these occasions that he felt constrained to inform his superior of what had happened, and as a result he was ordered to say many prayers, while she, he says, was forbidden to see him alone.

Nevertheless, he says, she succeeded in seeing him and in protesting for him a great love. He was induced to accompany her to cafes and drinking places, he admits. Then he goes on to say that about a year ago he was taken by her to the Ansonia when he was ill. She aided him in getting to bed he says, and then left, saying she meant to go to the Hotel Bellevue. In a half hour she returned, he says, and although he begged her to leave, he claims she remained.

His description of his fall he likens to the temptation of St. Anthony. When he realized what he had done he says he threatened to kill himself, but she soothed him and the next day she got him carried to St. Luke's hospital.

Put a Ring on Her Finger.

After he had been expelled from the order he says he accompanied her about until his friends were gone. For a while he was at her father's home. Once, he says, he went with her to St. Patrick's Cathedral, and as they knelt before an altar in prayer he put on her finger a ring as a sign that his intentions toward her were pure, even though they could never marry. After this secret ceremony Mrs. Dunphy said that he wanted to lead a good life, but so she declares, she tempted him again and again.

Later she told him she did not wish to see him for three months. He promised to comply, he says, but he heard that she was enjoying the company of other men and going to a cafe. He says he found Mrs. Dunphy and another woman dining with two married men. The next morning he says one of these men threatened him with arrest unless he let Mrs. Dunphy alone.

FACTS FOR JEROME FOUND BY CLARKE IN BANK PROBE

Brooklyn District Attorney Finds International Trust Frauds in His Inquiry.

Officials of the International Trust Company and Brooklyn Bank were called before the Kings County Grand Jury to-day in the investigation being made by District Attorney Clarke into the causes of the financial collapse.

First District Attorney Clarke to-day he did not at first intend to probe into the affairs of the International, because it is a New York County concern. He was inclined to leave it to District Attorney Jerome.

"But I found that the affairs of the Brooklyn Bank and the International Trust Company were very closely interwoven," said Mr. Clarke, "and so I had to look into both. Mr. Jerome is welcome to use whatever we turn up."

No Christmas Money.

There will be no Christmas money for the depositors of the Williamsburg Trust Company.

"There is no immediate hope for the depositors," said Frank L. Bapat, one of the receivers. "There is no money available. There is $25,000 in cash on hand, but $20,000 is owed to the First National Bank, and under the law the bank must be paid first."

BUSS MRS. LESLIE CARTER. GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass. Defendant in suit against Mrs. Leslie Carter was instituted by Miss Edith M. Norton, a stenographer, to recover $22 for services rendered while Mrs. Carter was in the Berkshires last summer.

DESERTED ARMY TO SUPPORT MOTHER

Samuel Soleck was in the Yorkville Court to-day on the charge of having deserted from the army. Magistrate Kernochan ordered him back to Fort Slocum. He had deserted on Nov. 15, he told the Court, so that he could be of material assistance to his aged mother and two sick sisters, who were in want.

"I couldn't get a job at my trade as a painter," he said, "so I decided to go into the army in August last, intending to give my mother and sisters the $12 a month pay. When I got my leave in November I found them all down sick and about to be put out and then I hurried harder than ever for a job at my trade. I got a job at $2.50 a day and was able to provide for mother and sisters. They are well now and I am ready to go back and take my medicine."

DYING WOMAN SAYS MAN HIRED THUGS TO KILL

Coroner Takes Ante-Mortem Statement of Woman Beaten in Victoria Annex.

Mrs. Mary Magdalene Heinek, who says she is a sister-in-law of Mine. Schuman-Heinek, is dying at the Victoria Annex, No. 114 Broadway, from the effects of a beating she received early last Wednesday morning at the hands of thieves, who robbed her of $2,000 in money and $1,000 in jewelry.

She made an ante-mortem statement to-day to Coroner Dooley, in which she declared that she believed her assailants were inspired not only by motives of robbery, but were paid by a man whose name she mentioned to kill her.

"I caused the arrest of this man a short time ago," she said. "It is my earnest belief, and I feel that I am about to die, that he employed the men who beat and robbed me to kill me. As they were beating me with a poker one of them said:

"Kill her. Remember we mustn't make a botch of it."

"One of the men engaged in the attack upon me was Walter Williams, also known as 'Fatty' Williams. I gave his name to the police and gave them clues by which they should have located him. From inquiries I have caused to be made I am convinced that the police have not done a single thing toward running down the men who robbed and mortally wounded me. Detectives came here, talked to me and went away, and that is all I have heard about their part of it."

"I told them that this Williams had a sister working at Miner's Theatre last week, and that if they questioned her they might find out something about him. No detective, I have ascertained, called upon his sister. It is a fine state of affairs when a woman can be called to the door of her own house, beaten by four men and robbed of all she has in the world and the police utterly ignore the crime. I have complained to the District Attorney through my lawyer, Assemblyman Weeks, but to no avail. When I am dead and the Coroner starts an investigation maybe the police will get busy."

KILLED BY SHOCK OF WINTER PLUNGE

Winter bathing is declared to be responsible for the death of DeWitt Van Valkenberg, for the past eight years chief clerk in the Hotel Lorraine, Fifth avenue and Forty-fifth street, who died last night at his home, No. 1440 St. Nicholas street, Bath Beach, from nephritis.

For the past three years Mr. Van Valkenberg has been in ill health, although suffering from no particular ailment. A friend suggested a cold plunge in salt water would prove a healing and invigorating tonic, and one day in January, 1907, he put on a bathing suit and plunged into the icy waves. He never recovered from the shock and soon became a victim of general breakdown.

Van Valkenberg was thirty-five years old and is survived by a wife and son. He was born in Albany and was a grandson of the late James Van Valkenberg, who thirty years ago was famous as a political leader.

The Origin of Tip.

"(From the Tacoma News.)" "Did you ever wonder, sir, what was the origin of the word 'tip'?" said the waiter.

"No, I never did," the patron answered dryly.

"Well, I'll tell you. In the past, sir, every restaurant used to have a small contribution box beside the cashier's desk for patrons to drop copper in, and this box was inscribed with the words, 'To insure Promptness.' Do you see, sir? To insure promptness—tip."

This is your hat, sir? Ah, thank you, sir. Thank you very much, indeed."
