MOST PICTURESQUE FIGURE IN RING IS 'BOER' UNHOLZ

Conqueror of Memsic and Nelson Hails Originally from Germany—Fought Against British in South Africa.

UNHOLZ, the Boer, is the most picturesque figure in the ring just now. A few months ago he was an unknown. Now he can hardly walk without kicking the vaudeville agents out of his way.

Unholz came here from South Africa. Originally he came from Germany. Rudolph bade adieu to Hoch der Kaiser while still a small boy and went to sea.

Unholz speaks eleven languages. While fighting he can use them all fluently. This gives him a vast advantage over ordinary scrum fighters.

Unholz fought Joe Greag, the Indian, at Old Orchard. He lost a fifteen round fight. In the second round the Boer broke a bone in his left hand by hitting Greag's elbow.

Unholz refused to break his engagement. Two days after breaking his hand he boxed Cote and lost a close decision in five rounds.

Unholz's next match was with Young Kenny at Lawrence, Mass. But by this time his broken hand was so bad that he was unable to fight.
