

defeat staring him in the face, forced a recess, while Grady for the racing men was working for an immediate vote.

FANCHER TURNS UP.

A searching force was sent in all directions, and while the hunt was hottest Fancher suddenly appeared at the Capitol. He was surrounded by the joyful reformers and told the most extraordinary story. Some of the unusual features pointed to a desperate attempt to delay the Senator during the consideration of the race track bills. The Senator would not enter into details for publication, but strongly intimated that the opposition had resorted to methods that had been found effective many years ago, when the lobby organized entertainment committees to engage the attention of legislators whose presence in either body was inimical to its interests.

The Chautauqua Senator, whose return to the Senate was hailed with delight by the advocates of the bill and with consternation by its opponents, appeared to have enjoyed his experience and to have profited by it.

It leaked out that he had been lured to a poker game, and, fortune smiling on him, time passed quickly. In fact, the flight of time was not noticed by the Senator until the rescuing force found him.

At midnight last night Fancher was called on the 'phone. A friend took the call as he was absent. Fancher was asked to go to the outskirts of the city. When the Senator received the message he was advised not to go but insisted on going. That was the last seen of him.

His friend recalled the telephone number this morning, and in this way he was traced and set free from the "kidnappers" by several members of Assembly. But for this incident the game to keep Fancher away would have succeeded.

Subsequently the friend who received the 'phone message for Fancher recalled that the person who 'phoned to Senator Fancher had said that the matter was very important and that $1,000 was at stake.

REFORMERS CLAIM VICTORY.

Fancher on his return immediately announced his intention to vote for the bill.

The first sensation of this momentous day came when Senator Grattan, who had been strangely missing from his usual haunts for twenty-four hours, and absent from the Senate when the roll was called this morning, suddenly entered the chamber at the heels of Senator McCarren. The spectacle shocked the Hughes reformers and brought a round of applause from the opponents of the bill.

Grattan had announced that he would vote for the bills and he was counted among the twenty-six lined-up for the Governor. Hence when he came in, figuratively manacled to McCarren, the hopes of the reformers slumped, as they saw their chances of victory fading.

"We will win, anyhow," was Senator Agnew's answer to the query as to how he stood.

ANOTHER BOMB BURSTS.

But immediately another bomb burst. The McCarren men boldly answered this boast by declaring that they had swung Cassidy and Wilcox into line, and that these two men, who had been counted as doubtful, would surely vote to defeat the bills.

Jolt No. 3 came when Senator Knapp, who had been coddled by the Hughes forces, came out into the open and declared for publication that he would vote against the bills.

With the Senate Chamber jammed and friends and foes of racing circling about, buttonholing, arguing in groups and pairs, and all making claims to victory, the Senators were called to action to-day in the final fight over the anti-gambling bills. The scene was most dramatic as the presiding officer's gavel fell calling the assemblage to order.

Senators Raines and Agnew had posted themselves at strong vantage points ready to rush a favorable vote for the Hughes bills, while McCarren and Grady were equally prominent, each with a battling dogged air that presaged determined resistance. The galleries were filled with spectators and representatives of the gambling interests, and reformers fringed the rear of the chamber, keeping an expectant, nervous eye on the Senators.

Dr. A. S. Gregg, secretary of the International Reform Bureau which has been promoting the race track legislation, confident and smiling, was fully in evidence and gave much of his attention to the movements of John Sanford, State Racing Commissioner, race horse breeder and strong ally of McCarren, who occupied a prominent seat near the Lieutenant-Governor's desk.

GRATTAN WAS MISSING.

As the spectators quickly scanned the Senators there was a buzz of excited talk. Senator Grattan, one of the men counted on by both sides to sway the final result, was missing. This fact was not only mysterious, it was portentous. All recognized Grattan, as the key to the situation. He had been practically in hiding since yesterday morning, and his whereabouts none could guess. Representatives of both the race track and the reform interests were hot on his trail for twenty-four hours, but failed to reach him. The fact that Grattan had been keeping out of sight the Governor's friends took as a favorable sign, but the racing contingent made much capital of it for themselves.

Senator O'Neil, who has been absent since last week, and was said to be consulting a specialist in New York, was on hand when the session opened. He had been regarded as one of the most earnest supporters of the bills, and his absence, occasioned by ill-health, would have been a severe blow to the supporters of the bills.

The session opened in routine fashion with the reading of messages from the President. While that was in progress McCarren walked over to some of the Senators opposed to the race track bills and whispered in their ears. Those on the opposition who "ride to the orders" of John Sanford scowled nervously at the chamber. The situation was tense.

Where is Grattan?

"Where's Grattan and how's he going to vote?" was the question that dominated the buzz of conversation. Republican leaders who made a public appeal to Grattan in his newspaper to vote against the reform bills, had sent a messenger to the Capitol with a note for Grattan.

"Twenty-five minutes of the session had passed and Grattan was still absent. Senator Agnew bustled about, declaring that he had every reason to believe that the bill would receive twenty-eight votes.

"Do you count on Grattan, of Albany?" Agnew was asked. "I certainly do," replied Agnew. "He told me yesterday that he would stand for the bill. I have been with him for six weeks, and know him. His word is good."

"How about Wilcox?" was asked. "I count on two of the three doubtful Senators, who are Grattan, Wilcox and Cassidy."

While he was talking Grattan entered the Senate, trailing after McCarren and sitting himself with the forces against the bills. Then the announcement was made that Knapp, Wilcox and Cassidy had also joined the racing forces, and there was applause and a sensation.

It was 11:30 o'clock when the Race Track bill amending the penal code in relation to the betting was called up and the fight began. Senator Grady, Democratic leader, formally moved to strike out the amending clause for the purpose of precipitating the debate. He assailed Gov. Hughes for his activity in promoting the legislation.

"The Governor has sought to create in the public mind an impression that this is a contest between moral forces and the blacklegs and disreputable of our citizenship," said Grady.

"The Governor is unworthy of his office. He has prejudiced the public mind, teaching that this is a moral movement opposed by no one who was not of a corrupt mind and debased conscience. It is only because the Governor is such a good man that he thinks that race track betting is the only betting that exists, while that bad man, the President of the United States, recognizes there is some thing as bad in Wall street betting and has pointed out the ruin that it has brought."

"No one has heard from the lips of our Governor what the President means when he condemns the horrid disgrace of Wall street gambling. The greatest gambling evil is ignored by him."

Calls Him a Bully. There is no provision of the Constitution directed against race-track betting, but there is a provision against all forms of gambling, and we have yet to hear that the Governor favors a

"COTTON KING" QUILTS MARKET TO SAVE HIS SON

"Health of Child More Important Than Money," T. H. Price Says. In order to devote the next five years of his life to the care of his only son, an infant, Theodore H. Price, the successful cotton planter, has closed all his deals, retired from the market and arranged to sell his town house, his country place, his horses and carriages and his furniture. With his wife, his son and his two daughters he will soon go to France where he will buy an estate on the coast of Brittany, the only place, the doctors say, where the little boy can live and recover his health.

Mr. Price was the head of the firm of Price & McCormick which failed for millions a few years ago. He went to work to rebuild his fortune, and succeeded, after paying off $1,250,000 in debts that were more moral than legal obligations. Since the downfall of Daniel Sully, Mr. Price has been the commanding figure in the cotton market.

His whole life is wrapped up in his son, Theodore H. Price, Jr., who is now three and one-half years old. The child was a sturdy infant up to a few months ago, when he began to fall in health.

Specialists have been in disagreement that the little fellow was suffering from tuberculosis of the throat, contracted probably through drinking milk from a tuberculous cow. An operation was decided upon. An operation was performed at Roosevelt Hospital removed from the throat of the child a number of tuberculous glands. The operation was extremely delicate and unusual. As soon as possible the little patient was removed to Atlantic City, where he is now in a private sanitarium.

Mr. Price was informed that his son could not live in this climate for any length of time. The doctors told him he would have to establish the little fellow either upon the coast of Maine or on the coast of Brittany. Finally it was decided that Maine would do, and a great specialist issued an order exiling Theodore H. Price, Jr., to France.

After starting for Atlantic City this afternoon Mr. Price was seen at his office, No. 82 Beaver street. He made this statement: "I got out of the cotton market and began to wind up my business affairs two weeks ago. I consider the health of my child of more importance than the mere making of money. Future developments must establish how long I shall be out of the market. My office in New York will be open during my absence, which may stretch over a period of five years—possibly ten."

CLERK QUILTS CITY BUREAU UNDER FIRE.

Chief Bookkeeper of Water Supply Board Refused to Explain Letters He Wrote. Charles E. Marr, chief bookkeeper of the Bureau of Water Supply, to-day sent a hasty resignation to Walter Bensch, president of the Water Board. Marr received a salary of $2,000 a year, and lived at N. 1066 Bergen street, Brooklyn.

Letters written by Marr to certain contractors doing work for the Board of Water Supply, recently fell into the hands of Mr. Bensch. One, written to the firm of McArthur Bros., offered to supply labor to the contractors. The letter might have been regarded as an intimidation, because it threatened to withdraw the Board's contract to build New York's new $100,000 aqueduct. The letters need not have been so construed, if the contractors were not so convinced that the Board would, however, conduct an investigation.

AGROUND IN HER SLIP.

The ferry-boat Jamestown, flagship of the Erie ferry fleet, grounded in her slip at the foot of Chambers street at 9:30 o'clock this morning and lay firmly in the mud about twenty feet from the landing place. The tide was exceptionally low. After whistling ten minutes for assistance she was nosed in by the Erie tug Elmira.

agree or disagree with what the Executive has done, or whether this legislation is wise or unwise; it is whether the Constitution of the State shall be obeyed.

At the conclusion of Senator Hinman's speech the recess was taken. When the Senate reconvened at 3 o'clock Senator Grady, who had spoken before, at once renewed his attack on the race track bills, referring especially to the failure of the bills to promote anti-race track gambling. He remarked that he had introduced a bill against stock gambling, which had spoken before, at once renewed his attack on the race track bills, referring especially to the failure of the bills to promote anti-race track gambling.

Grady was followed by Senator Hooker, who spoke for the bills.

GRABBED CHILD FROM WIFE AND RAN TWO MILES

Mrs. Leon Miller, Loudly Yelling, Chase! Fleeing Husband in the Rain. With his little daughter Ida, two years old, clasped in his arms, Leon Miller ran two miles this afternoon in the rain from Westleigh to Port Richmond, Staten Island, with Mounted Policemen Hayes thundering after him. Miller is now locked up in the police station in Port Richmond and will be arraigned to-morrow before a magistrate on a charge of kidnapping his own child, preferred by his wife. He is a clerk, twenty-seven years old, and has been married four years.

Mrs. Miller, a pretty little woman, says she has lived in fear for six months that her husband would steal the child from her. The young couple, in their short period of wedded life, have separated several times, and about seven months ago, after a quarrel, Mrs. Miller took the little daughter, Ida, and left the home in Port Richmond. She went to board with friends in Woodward avenue, Westleigh, and there to-day Miller called on her.

"The servant told me he only wanted to see me a few minutes at the door," Mrs. Miller said, "and I had the baby in my arms when I went to see him. He wouldn't come in, but stood there in the rain talking. He said he wanted a reconciliation, but I told him it was no good to argue that point, that I would never go back to him again. Then, before I knew what he was doing, he reached over and took baby out of my arms. I thought he only wanted to get her at first, but when he ran down the garden walk and darted out of the gate, I knew he intended to kidnap her, and yelled as loud as I could and followed."

But Miller was feeter of foot than his wife, and, turning a corner, was soon out of sight. Westleigh is one of the most aristocratic towns on Staten Island, and there was a good deal of excitement at the sight of a young man with a baby in his arms running at full speed in the rain and followed by a pretty little woman, bareheaded, and losing ground at every step. Mrs. Miller soon found aid in the person of Policeman Hayes.

Chased on Horseback. "He was going to Port Richmond," she told the officer, and Hayes took the words in his stead and started off after the fleeing father. Miller little Ida was clinging to her, and she was crying and gurgling away for dear life. She had enjoyed the lull in the rain, and had taken a short rest, and justly when taken away from him. Her mother arrived in Port Richmond shortly after and took Ida home.

LEAVES PRISON CELL TO GO TO FATHER'S FUNERAL.

Accused Man's Aged Mother Wins Few Hours' Freedom For Son. A white haired little woman dressed in mourning edged her way into Judge Foster's part of the Court of General Sessions to-day and spoke to an officer on guard near the door. After a few moments she was escorted around the jury box to the Judge's desk, where she stood, tearful, her hands nervously picking at her gown.

As a result of this visit, John Kelly, a prisoner in the Tombs charged with robbery, was allowed to attend the funeral of his father at No. 229 East One Hundred and Twentieth street, this afternoon. The little old woman who talked to Judge Foster was his mother.

Real housecleaning cannot be accomplished without proper disinfection, as soap and water do not kill disease germs.

Those who think that the sick room and the toilet are the only places that require regular disinfection are the ones who are usually wondering why there is so much sickness in their family.

It is very simple to pour a few drops of C.M. Disinfectant (non-poisonous) in all cleaning water and to sprinkle it everywhere about the house.

By doing this you can secure a healthy home for your dear ones and keep sickness away from your door.

NAVAL BILL CALLS FOR $103,967,518

Two Battleships and Eight Submarine Boats Provided for in Measure. WASHINGTON, April 8.—The naval appropriation bill authorizing the construction of two battleships and eight submarines and eight instead of four submarine torpedo boats, and carrying a total appropriation of $103,967,518 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908, was reported to the House to-day by Chairman Foss of the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The total appropriation recommended is $25,583,188 less than the aggregate estimate submitted by the department, and $1,853,916 more than the amount appropriated for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908. The bill carries an item of $1,000,000 toward the construction of submarine torpedo boats and an item of $46,000 toward the construction of sub-surface torpedo boats. Provision is made for the enlistment of 6,000 men to man the following ships, which are to be put in commission within the next few months: The California, Mississippi, Idaho, New Hampshire, South Dakota, North Carolina, Montana, Chester, Birmingham and Salem, and for 1,500 men required to man torpedo boats not now in commission.

LAWSON AND COL. MANN—WERE THEY PARTNERS?

And Did "Frenzied Finance" Author Rent Furnished Houses Here for Secret Confab? LYNN, Mass., April 8.—Was Thomas W. Lawson ever a business partner of Col. Mann, of Town Topics? Did he rent furnished houses in New York for secret meetings of financiers? Did he conduct a theatrical enterprise in connection with Olga Netherese and some other person.

These questions are raised by allegations to that effect in the suit against Lawson for $20,000 by John P. Donohue, a wealthy business man here, who was for years the confidential man of the author of "Frenzied Finance."

Donohue alleges in his action that by his handling over to Lawson certain Bay State Gas books H. H. Rogers made $5,000,000, which he divided with Lawson.

CURE BY CUTICURA AT CITY MISSION

Young Woman Found in Awful Condition with Scabies—Body a Mass of Sores from Scratching—Tried Many Remedies for Seven Weeks—Result Was Discouraging, But

ITCHING TORTURES YIELDED TO CUTICURA

"While I was doing missionary work in the lower portion of several cities I found it necessary to know a little of the efficacy of a few medicines and after a while I found that a little knowledge of Cuticura was about all I needed. One of the very bad cases I had to deal with was that of a young woman who had come to us not only broken in spirit but in a most awful condition physically. Our doctor examined her and told us that she had scabies (the itch), incipient paresis, rheumatism, etc., brought on from exposure and the effects of her ragged-edges life. Her poor body was a mass of sores from scratching and she was not able to retain solid food. We tried many things, a good tonic was prescribed and baths with a rubbing of large quantities of Cuticura were given for seven weeks and you can imagine how discouraged we were when, after all that time, we could see so little improvement. One day I happened to see a Cuticura advertisement telling how a little baby had been cured of a bad case of skin eruption, and although I had but ninety-seven cents with me, I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. When I reached home I was like a child with a new toy, and we bathed our patient as well as we could with a full dose of the Resolvent. She slept that night better than she had since she had been with us and the next day I found that the itching had stopped. I thought, 'I am not exaggerating when I say that in exactly five weeks this young woman was able to look for a position, being strong enough to work and full of ambition. In another month she left the home, and now has a good position in a nice family where she is respected and is strong and well. You will not regret that you were personally, Laura Jane Bates, 85 Fifth Ave., New York, N. Y., Mar. 11, 1907.'"

LAST TWO MONTHS ENJOYED LIVING FOR FIRST TIME.

Statement by Brooklyn Man Who Has Recently Become a Cooper Convert.

The following statement was made by Mr. S. J. Simpson of No. 99 President street, Brooklyn, said: "According to my experience this man Cooper is justified in his claims that his medicine will actually help the stevedores in good condition. I have had chronic stomach trouble for several years past. My stomach seemed to give up completely in August, 1906, and I have been able to eat next to nothing since."

"I have not taken the slightest enjoyment in living I have been so depressed by my condition. Neither physicians nor medicine helped me and I was only by the most careful diet that I was able to sustain any life. For the last seven months I have not eaten a particle of meat. In the most skeptical frame of mind possible I called at the Riker store to see Mr. Cooper. At two months ago, while the smallest hope his medicine would help me, he had given up hope during the last year. I obtained some of his medicine and used it as directed. To-day I am as healthy as ever. My stomach is now eating a full meal and I am able to do my work as usual. I have gained weight rapidly and it is positively all thanks to the medicine. I can sleep at night and am cheerful in every way. Before I used his medicine I was a man in pain. In New York is truly deserved."

"In a shop in Manhattan a Cooper salesman told me that he had been in the business for two weeks. So far as I can learn he has had about twenty thousand people taking his preparations. He said that he had never known a man who had not been cured. He said that he had never known a man who had not been cured. He said that he had never known a man who had not been cured."

"My medicine is not only good for the stomach, but it is good for the whole system. It is good for the whole system. It is good for the whole system. It is good for the whole system."

"I am so glad to be able to tell you that I have been cured. I have been cured. I have been cured. I have been cured. I have been cured."

"I am so glad to be able to tell you that I have been cured. I have been cured. I have been cured. I have been cured. I have been cured."

"I am so glad to be able to tell you that I have been cured. I have been cured. I have been cured. I have been cured. I have been cured."
