

YACHT RESCUES THREE ADRIPT ON DISABLED BOAT

Columbia, Battered by Storm, Stands By and Saves Crew of Fishing Schooner.

DERELICT CUT LOOSE.

Rescued Men Brought Here Had Given Up Hope When Ladew Boat Signalled Them.

The steam schooner yacht, Columbia, of the New York Yacht Club, owned by Joseph Harvey Ladew, a wealthy banker, docked early to-day with as thrilling a tale of the sea as a spick and span pleasure craft ever brought to port.

Sea Swept Dinghy Away.

When they saw the yacht meant to stand by, the three attempts to launch a dinghy, but a big sea got it away from them and it went adrift. After a lot of figuring, and a good deal of expert handling of the yacht, the skipper managed to get to seaward of the derelict and, after a dozen attempts, got a line aboard.

Carried Off of Track of Ships.

Fishing schooners do not carry extra suits of oil sails as a general thing, so they were in a bad way, and being carried further out of the track of vessels every hour. Luckily for them the wind was off shore. With no sail to keep her nose to the sea the schooner wallowed through them like a pig swimming in a ditch, and about the first thing a big sea did was to carry away their water case, which was lashed to the bits forward.

CHINAMAN TRIES TO END LIFE BECAUSE OF ILL HEALTH.

Li Wing, a young Christianized Chinaman of Carlstadt, N. J., was removed from the establishment of W. Kie Kee, a Chinese merchant, of No. 78 Bryan street, this afternoon to the Hudson Street Hospital, dying from wounds in the head self-inflicted with a carving knife in an attempt at suicide.

The dying Chinaman was a member of the Passaic Baptist Church in Carlstadt and well educated in American ways, and had been prospering in the laundry business with his brother. He had not been well for some time, and yesterday came to this city to spend the day and evening with his friend Kie Kee. He remained over night and this morning bade his friend good-by and presumably left for home.

Several hours later Kie Kee heard groans issuing from among some boxes in the basement of his store, and on investigation he found Li Wing unconscious, with his head horribly mutilated. He had been brooding over his ill health.

Lured Across Ocean by Love Notes, Girl Finds Gates Barred Because the Man Cannot Be Found

Pretty Ida Ruffy Who Hurried from Swiss Home Expecting to Become a Bride, Held at Ellis Island.

NIXOLA GREELEY-SMITH

My dear little adored wife: I have been wicked. I have suffered for it. I did not see you before leaving. I would have suffered too much. But I know you. I know that you love me a little and even much, for you will not forget that you have suffered in my arms.

For two years we were two examples of perfect love. We quarrelled sometimes, fought even, but we loved each other always. What did I not do to see each other? Did I not risk my life many times when on dark nights I dropped from a second-story window to go to see the girl I loved? Did I not more than once forsake the paternal roof for you? Ida, if you have a heart and you have one, you will feel that some one suffers and weeps for you.

Write to me, I beg of you. One single word from you will prove you have thought of me one moment, will dry one of my tears. I see only you. You cannot believe that enough. My heart is torn. I cannot write any more. I want you to be mine. I adore you. I would kill some one to bring you here. But you will come. I am working and will make money. Good-by, my dear little wife. Throwing myself in your arms I kiss you on the mouth. Good-by, think of him who suffers for you. It is your lover who adores you. A. BOUET.

This is a literal translation of a letter written on January 14 last by Mr. Amy Bouet, aged twenty-two, residing in New York, to Miss Ida Ruffy, aged twenty-four, of Geneva, Switzerland. Not Allowed to Land.

Receiving this and subsequent letters of more burning urgency, Ida Ruffy, who considered herself engaged to the young man, sold out the little millinery business by which she had supported herself and took passage on the steamship President Lincoln for New York. Having notified the ardent Mr. Bouet of her coming she naturally expected to step from the steampship into the many arms so much written about. Instead, she stepped into the detention pen at Ellis Island, where she has remained ever since, and young Bouet who lived till the day of her arrival at No. 125 West Eighty-second street, worked for a heart street of merchant as an assayer has fared appointed from the face of the earth.

Mountain Ida Ruffy, who landed here with about $5, has been excluded as an undesirable alien. She was to have been deported on the Kaiser Wilhelm this week, but persons who became interested in the young woman's plight have appealed for her to Acting Commissioner of Immigration Joseph P. Murray, the first man to nominate President Roosevelt for a political office, that of Assemblyman, years ago.

Can Support Himself. Of course the immigration officials did not detain Ida Ruffy merely because her fiancé had failed to meet her. Nor because she possessed only a limited amount of money. There seems to be no question in the mind of anyone as to the young woman's ability to support herself either at her own trade of millinery or in some other capacity, for she declared to me yesterday that she was willing to go as a lady's maid, or do any other kind of work that would enable her to land in America.

But before the examining board which passed upon her case, Ida Ruffy made some allegations regarding to young Bouet, her fiancé, which taken with a dispatch from Geneva which cast doubt upon her character, led to her exclusion.

I saw Ida Ruffy yesterday at Ellis Island. In appearance she is not a plaited Marquise, dressed and fettered by a modern Peas, but a tall, extremely good-looking young woman, with a fresh complexion, dark eyes and the red-bronze tint of one who has been crying a good deal. But she shed no tears as she told me her story simply and unadornedly.

"I met Amy Bouet two years ago at a ball in Geneva."

"His parents are very well to do, his father being a rich architect and contractor there."

Wanted a Ficher One. "We fell in love at once. I was a milliner, and his parents did not think I had money enough for him. My father, however, has some money, but she is married again, and I have to support myself. From the beginning Amy's parents tried to break up our friendship. But we made every sacrifice for each other, and were very happy. Finally they persuaded him to go to America. When he left he promised to send for me as soon as he could. He landed here on the 4th of January. On the 14th he wrote me the letter I have shown you. Then came other letters. I wanted to see him very much, and I thought how blessed he would be. I thought we could marry and I could work as a milliner and we could save money. So I sold out my little business and wrote him that I would arrive on the

BRYAN'S WIFE FROM EUROPE TO JOIN HIS TOUR

She'll Have a Little Private Talk, First, About That "Button" Joke.

The whole Bryan family was at the Atlantic Transport line pier to-day when the steamer Minnehaha arrived from London. On board were Mrs. Bryan, her daughter, Mrs. Ruth B. Leavitt, and two children, Ruth and Bryan, and Miss Ruth Raymond, of Denver, a schoolmate chum of Mrs. Leavitt. They returned after a tour of five months of Italy, Greece, Egypt and the Levant, and they are headed westward.

At the pier to meet them were the head of all the Bryans, William Jennings, and his younger daughter, Miss Grace Bryan, who came from Virginia, where she is attending school. Mrs. Bryan and the little Bryans looked particularly well.

"We had a delightful trip," she said on the way up from quarantine. "But now that I am here, there is so much more chance for a woman here. I have been told. I will work at anything if only some one will give me an opportunity. Amy has treated me very badly, yet I am sure she loves me. But I will forget him and work. Oh, don't you think they will let me in?"

I told the girl that I didn't know, but that Acting Commissioner Murray would not see an injustice done to a woman in such misfortune, if she had told the truth—and I don't think he will.

BOYNTON IN MORE TROUBLE.

Held on Charge of Man Who Says He Can't Get His $500 Back.

Troubles multiply for Capt. George Melville Boynton, soldier of fortune and locator of gold mines and buried treasure, who was arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of leaving a $500 bond. When the gallant captain was arraigned before Magistrate Finn Lieut. McConville presented an additional complaint of obtaining money under false pretenses.

The complainant witness in this case is William Nutting, of No. 142 Broadway. Mr. Nutting says Capt. Boynton $500 for the privilege of joining an expedition to darkest Brazil to search for fabulous wealth. He says he is afraid to go to darkest Brazil but has been unable to get his money back.

Capt. Boynton was held in $1500 bail for examination. Unable to secure a bondsman he went to the Tombs.

S.S.S. KILLS THE GERMS OF SCROFULA

One of the unchangeable laws of nature is that "like shall beget like." Parents who are related by the ties of blood, or who have a consumptive tendency, or other family blood taint are sure to transmit it to their children in the form of Scrofula. Swollen glands, brittle bones, weak eyes, hip disease, pale, waxy complexions, sickly bodies, running sores and ulcers, etc., are the usual manifestations of the disease.
