"TRICK" ON WIFE IS CONTEMPT OF COURT

William S. Brewer, the man who, in the midst of the trial of his wife's suit for divorce, sent to the newspapers a story that he had arranged a situation with a strange woman at the Astor House for the purpose of fooling his wife, was adjudged in contempt of court by Judge Pitzeck, this afternoon. He was sentenced to pay $500 fine or go to Ludlow Street Jail for thirty days. Brewer's lawyer asked for time, as Brewer is now going through bankruptcy. Justice Pitzeck granted Brewer until the settlement of the order for contempt to sign. This will be done on two days' notice. It did not occur to Brewer that the trick on his wife was also a trick on the court. Justice Pitzeck said that if Brewer had not admitted that he sent the published story to the newspapers he would have sent him to jail without giving him a chance to escape by paying a fine.

Selecting the Jury. Justice Goff came on the bench with this usual punctuality and asked if the lawyers were prepared to go ahead with the trial. Both sides were ready, and Clerk Penney called the roll of 150 special jurors from which the jury will be selected. No member of the accused attorney's family was in court. None had any of his friends accompanied him to the tribunal. When recess was taken at one o'clock the defendant left the courtroom with his counsel, no effort being made on the part of the prosecutor to restrain him. He was very pale when he sat down to his ordeal to-day and his large blue eyes shifted about uneasily until the first eyesman was called and examined. Thereupon he became nervously alert and took an active part in the sifting of the material for the jury. When the lawyer and clubman was arrested last April, shortly after the first trial of Raymond Hitchcock, in which he played a conspicuous part, he declared that he was a victim of a blackmail plot.

LUSITANIA MAY TIE MAURETANIA RECORD

The Cunard liner Lusitania was 224 miles east of Sandy Hook Lightship at noon to-day, according to a wireless message received at the offices of the Cunard Steamship Company. The Lusitania had covered 618 miles since she was previously reported, at 11:31 A. M. yesterday, which is at the rate of nearly 25 nautical miles per hour. If she maintains this speed to Sandy Hook she will arrive about 1 A. M. tomorrow and will equal the Mauretania's record of 4 days 20 hours and 15 minutes.

KAISER SHAKES MAILED FIST AT CZAR OF RUSSIA

Notice Given That a New Triple Alliance Will Be Taken as Hostile Move.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 11.—It was learned here today from a competent source that the recent meeting between King Edward and Emperor Nicholas at Reval and the rapprochement between Great Britain, Russia and France has been made the subject of grave representations on the part of Germany, who has met the threatened birth of a new "triple alliance" with a display of the "mailed fist." After the announcement of the Reval meeting Russia was given to understand at Berlin that the conclusion of a formal entente between these three powers would be regarded as a hostile move, or, to quote the exact term used by the informant of the Associated Press, as a "Kriegseroehnung." Whether such a development was originally contemplated from the meetings between King Edward and the President of France and the Emperor of Russia is not stated, but the immediate result of the representations made in Berlin was the publication June 5 of an obviously inspired article in the official Russia, which, while speaking warmly in favor of the meeting between King Edward and Emperor Nicholas, declared that the suggestion of any new grouping of the powers at the present time was impossible. Furthermore, Foreign Secretary Grey announced in the British House of Commons that no further expansion of the Anglo-Russian Convention was contemplated.

Racing Will Continue Under Jockey Club Rule.

The men who operate the large books—Sol. Lichtenstein, Bill Cowan and their kind—took the passage of the race track bills philosophically at the Gravesend race track to-day. They say there will always be racing and there will always be betting, although there is no hope that the present form of open betting will continue through this season. No official statement has yet been made by any member of the Jockey Club or the racing associations, but IT IS GENERALLY UNDERSTOOD that the associations will fulfill their obligations for the year. "I am not so terribly despondent," said John Cavanaugh, who has charge of the betting, and it is believed that he voices the sentiments of the more extensive bookmakers in the big ring. "I have seen racing get many knocks. I saw the lives lay knocked out in 1894 and things looked very blue, but racing to-day is on a more prosperous basis than ever before, and I look for it to continue that way for the next thirty years. I have received no instructions regarding the betting and everything will go on as usual to-day."

Victory for Law and Order; Foelker a Hero, Says Hughes

ALBANY, June 11.—Gov. Hughes, when informed of the passage of the bills, made no attempt to conceal his elation. He said: "I am deeply gratified at this result. It is a victory for law and order, the importance of which cannot be overestimated." Referring to the action of Senator Foelker in leaving a bed of serious illness to cast his vote for the bill, the Governor said: "The act of Senator Foelker in coming to the Senate in his weak condition was most heroic and worthy of the same praise that we give to distinguished service on the battlefield." The Governor would not say when he would sign the bills, but left no doubt that he would lose little time after they reach him from the Assembly, where they originate.

No Action Until Governor Directs It, Sheriff Says.

When Sheriff A. T. Hobbey, of Kings County, was notified of the passage of the Agnew-Hart bill by an Evening World reporter this afternoon, and asked what he would do in the matter, he said: "I can do nothing until I hear from Gov. Hughes. I am under very heavy bonds and cannot rush off half-cooked. I must know first where I am at. I presume the Governor will notify me as to what he has become a law and give me instructions as to how he desires it enforced. Furthermore, I must take advice of counsel." Assistant District-Attorney Robert H. Elder, who is in charge of the Kings County District-Attorney's office in the absence abroad of Prosecutor Clarke, said that he would make no move until he received a certified copy of the bill from the Secretary of State. "When I get a copy of the bill," said Mr. Elder, "I will put it up to the police to act. If the police fail to act in the enforcement of the law it will then be time for the District-Attorney's office to act."

DRAMATIC SCENE IN THE SENATE AS VOTE ON THE ANTI-GAMBLING BILLS IS CAST

Brooklyn Senator Who Risked Life and Won Victory for Gov. Hughes. Only Threats of Expulsion by Presiding Officer Keeps Gallery Crowds in Order

All Eyes on Foelker, and Even the Men He Helped to Defeat Pined Him.

The packed chamber. The Hughes measure had triumphed, unless one of the Senators who had been voting on the administration side on the amendments should switch. Senator Foelker was so far gone after his vote on the Hart anti-gambling bill, the first considered, that he was removed to an ante-chamber. On the question of repealing the Percy-Gray law he was allowed to vote from outside the Chamber on the call of his absentees. The courageous Brooklyn Senator was suffering tortures while awaiting the finish of the fight. When it was all over and he was told the bills had passed he brightened up wonderfully. It will take time to show how the excitement and exertion affected him. The full vote was as follows: For the bills—Agnew, Aldis, Armstrong, Carpenter, Cobb, Cordts, Davis, Dunn, Fancher, Foelker, Gates, Hancock, Hill, Hinman, Hooker, O'Neil, Hoge, Hulse, Saxe, Smith, Travis, Tuily, Wallie and White, Republicans, and Fuller and Taylor, Democrats. Total—26. Against the bill—Ackroyd, Boyce, Cohanlan, Cullen, Frawley, Grady, Harter, Hasenau, McCall, McCarran, McManus, Mullaney, Owens, Hamperger, Sohmer, Sullivan, Thompson, Democrats, and Brnt, Cassidy, Emerson, Giehrst, Grant, Kavanagh, Wemple, and Wilcox, Republicans. Total—25. The announcement of the result was received without any demonstration, the Lieutenant-Governor having given notice that any person applauding the result would be punished. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of the bills repealing the Percy-Gray law. The Senate convened sharply at ten o'clock and the battle on the bills began. The Hart bill in relation to race track betting were advanced to third reading without reference to committee. The first bill considered was the penal code amendment making race track betting a crime. Senator Grady opened the fight by criticizing Gov. Hughes for the lack of honesty in every public statement he had made concerning the bill. "When it comes to Wall Street gambling," said Grady, "his recommendation is not that you change the law but that you provide a commission to investigate the subject. Race track betting he would make a crime punishable by imprisonment alone."

Call Hughes Arrogant.

The Governor, Grady declared, was arrogant in his attitude toward the Legislature, as he had notified the Senate that he would not sign the bill if it provided the usual penalty of a fine or imprisonment. "The Governor has not addressed one word to the Legislature about the bill which in which men have lost their fortunes. Not a word about the criminals who Wall street had sent to prison," cried out Grady. "When it comes to his former clients he would have a commission to inquire into the conditions in Wall street. Yet he goes through the States arousing the conscience of the people. Yet what will become of the conscience of the people when he is relegated to private life and renews his business relationship with Wall street?" "Was there ever such hypocrisy?" "It was only this year when some of his friends thought he was a natural fighter, then he felt called upon to play the part of the evangelist and discovered that gambling existed. The man who is without character always wants to be on the side of the minsters on a public question. The man who can afford to risk money on a horse race, commits no sin by making a race."

Following Grady, Senator Owen Cassidy, one of the eight Republican Senators who originally voted against the bills, argued that punishment would not eradicate the ends of gambling. The person who had not sufficient moral fiber to restrain himself from stealing in order to play the horses could not restrain himself, said Cassidy, from stealing to buy a satin dress for his wife.

The race track bills, said Cassidy, were spite measures. Senator Wilcox, another race track Senator, charged the pool-rooms with fostering most of the evils of gambling. He said that the pool-rooms were not only a source of revenue to the State, but also a source of revenue to the Governor's friends for forcing Senator Foelker, "almost a dying man," to attend the session. Wilcox's speech ended the arguments against the bills, and Senator Hinman opened the debate for the Governor. He defended the acts of the Governor.

While Senator Hinman was talking Senator Foelker reached the Capitol. He was there by 11:30 and was escorted by Dr. Murphy, his physician, the Rev. Canon Chase, of Brooklyn, who stood guard over his every movement since his arrival, and Assemblyman Surplus, his colleague in the Kings County legislative representation.

Could Not Hear Him. Sergeant-at-Arms Hotaling escorted the little party through the dense crowd which surrounded the entrance to the Senate Chamber. The Senator walked from the elevator, and said he felt fairly well, but very weak. Senator Agnew greeted him with a hearty handshake and led him to the seat nearest the door—that of Senator Aldis. Senator Foelker's appearance in the chamber was greeted with a roar of handclapping, which was sternly suppressed after a moment by Lieut. Gov. Hoge in the chair, who threatened that if it was repeated he would have the floor and galleries cleared. Senator Foelker's own seat among the Brooklyn Senators was clear across the chamber and he sank into the one nearest the door of the room, usually occupied by Senator Aldis of Chenango, close to the door by which he entered. He was evidently in great distress of body and mind, and to a question as to how he felt, said only that he was "very weak."

"Vote No." He Was Told.

LEGISLATORS IN A RUSH WIND UP SPECIAL SESSION

They Lose No Time Adjourning After the Racing Bills Are Passed.

ALBANY, June 11.—The extraordinary session of the Legislature, which began on May 11 at the call of Gov. Hughes, adjourned without day this afternoon, both houses adjourning about 2 P. M. Just prior to adjournment President Pro Tempore Raines of the Senate announced the following members of the Special Legislative Committee to investigate the finances of New York City: Senator Owen Cassidy, of Schuyler, Chairman; Martin Saxe, of New York, and Patrick H. McCarran, of Brooklyn.

The Assembly members of the committee have not yet been announced. The last stand in the fight for the Governor's recommendation to place telephone and telegraph companies under the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission was made in the Assembly, when Assemblyman Wainwright, of Westchester, moved for a suspension of the rules in order to take up the Page bill. The House showed its continued hostility to the measure by not even permitting a discussion on it, adopting by a vote of 15 to 24 the motion of Assemblyman Oliver, of New York, to lay the Wainwright motion on the table. Apparently much exhausted by the journey of about sixty miles from Staatsburg, Senator Foelker was taken in a carriage to the home of Mrs. Marie Baupre at No. 137 Hudson avenue, and there passed the night with Dr. Murphy. He was met at the train by Senator Agnew and Assemblyman Hart, introducers of the Anti-Gambling bills, and by the Rev. Canon Chase, of Brooklyn, who was also a large crowd gathered to see the muck-talked-of legislator. He showed little interest in his surroundings and gave slight sign of recognition of his fellow-legislators, but sat listless in the invalid chair on which he was wheeled in his carriage, his head drooping upon his chest, his hands feebly clasped in his lap. Dr. Murphy said Senator Foelker had had an attack of vomiting just before taking the train at Staatsburg, but had made the journey without much discomfort, sleeping most of the way. At midday Dr. Murphy said, his patient had collected and showed marked symptoms of shock. "He is a very sick man," the doctor said, "and should receive immediate medical attention. He is trying to do something beyond his strength."

Doctor Revives Hope.

Bulletins discouraging to the friends of Gov. Hughes were issued at intervals during the night and early to-day, but at 9:40 this morning Dr. Murphy declared by saying: "I am inclined to think now that Senator Foelker will go to the Senate chamber and cast his vote for the reform bills." "His temperature is normal—there has been no rise of temperature, but his pulse is very weak. I regard him as a very sick man. No, I shall not allow anyone to see him." "His head pretty clear this morning," the doctor was asked. "Oh, yes. His head is clear enough. There's nothing the matter with his head."

Summoned to Foelker.

Dr. Theodore Bailey, late this afternoon called on the Senator at his home. "Two men called at my office this morning and stated that the attending physician of Senator Foelker desired a consultation with two Albany physicians and requested that Dr. Elting and I call on him as soon as possible. I made an appointment with Dr. Elting and we found on seeing Dr. Murphy, the attending physician of the Senator, that no such request had been made. We never called on the Senator and made an apology to Dr. Murphy and departed." Dr. Bailey declared that he knew one of the two men and thought him responsible. He would not say who the man was. He said he did not know the other. Dr. Elting, when asked about the

At the Jockey Club.

At the Jockey Club, where the program just issued for the meeting, which is to begin on Friday, June 12, will be run off. As to the fall meeting, the matter will have to be decided later in any event. It is probable that the stakes will have to be decided, as at all other race tracks, as the contracts with owners and breeders which will have to be carried out. J. E. Madden, one of the noted breeders of the country, said he believed the bills will make for the good of racing and that they will put the turf in a better light and go away with all the objectionable features. Andrew Miller, treasurer of the Saratoga Jockey Club and a steward at the present meeting, said: "There will be racing, but of course we shall obey the law. It is no time now to advance arguments against the bills, but much might be said about the millions of dollars worth of property that will be destroyed and that workmen who will be thrown out of jobs—men who know no other means of livelihood." Allan Pinkerton, head of the detective forces at the track, said he had no objection to the bills, but would not act until instructed by the Jockey Club. When F. R. Hitchcock, one of the stewards, was asked his opinion of the situation, he said: "It has seemed to be a business and is now a snarl."

USEFUL HINTS TO HOUSE-KEEPERS.

A COAT of Natural Jap-lac applied over old varnish or oil cloth will double its life, by preserving the original coat of varnish which would otherwise soon be washed or worn off. WEATHER BEATEN front doors are revived and beautified when treated with Jap-lac and "newness" follows the brush. It is best to use the color nearest that of the old finish. WINDOW and DOOR screens should be coated with Jap-lac each spring, using the Brilliant Black on the wire and the Mahogany, Oak, Cherry or Walnut on the frames. It gives them new life and the wire cloth is protected from rust. PORCH FURNITURE should be protected and beautified each spring with Jap-lac. It is best to use the color of the old finish, but if you wish to change the color, use Red or Green Jap-lac. WICKER FURNITURE coated with Mahogany, Ox-Blood Red, Malachite Green or Gloss White Jap-lac, looks better than new. WATER PIPES, furnace fronts, radiators, hot water tanks and iron fences are preserved and beautified with the use of Jap-lac. Use the Gold, Aluminum, Dead Black or Brilliant Black. PICTURE FRAMES, candelabra, gas fixtures, lamps, etc., given a coat of Gold, Aluminum or Dead Black Jap-lac, are renewed almost beyond belief—the Dead Black produces that beautiful wrought-iron effect. OLD AUTOMOBILES, carriages, wagons, agricultural implements, etc., Jap-lac-ed with either Brilliant Black, Red, Green or Empire Blue, look 100% better, and are given new life. The cost is nominal, and the work can be done by an inexperienced person. JAP-A-LAC is a household necessity, and can be used in a hundred and one ways, from "cellar to garret," and is especially adapted for finishing old or new floors and woodwork. Ask your paint dealer.
