YANKEES WILL RACE; OLYMPIC OFFICIALS REFUSE TO ALLOW IT

400-Metre Contest Ends in a Sensational Ruling When English Competitor Runs Third, With Americans in Front.

THE STADIUM, LONDON, July 23.—Real sensation was caused here this afternoon when the final of the 400-metre (437 1/2 yards) was run. The first to breast the tape was J. C. Carpenter, of Cornell University. He was followed by W. C. Robbins, of Yale; Halswelle, of England, and Taylor, of the Irish-American Athletic Club, in the order named.

Immediately after the race the officials declared it no contest, and that the strategy used by Carpenter to hold the inside was entirely fair and within the rules.

WHAT WE WON TO-DAY.

200-Metre Flat Race—R. Cloughan, Irish-American A. C., second, three points; V. J. Cartmill, University of Pennsylvania, third, one point. Standing High Jump—Ray C. Ewer, New York A. C., first, five points. J. A. Biller, Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., tied for second, two points.

Total gain for America to-day, eleven points.

SHOT HIMSELF ON EVE OF VACATION

An Accident, the Boy's Mother Declares—Didn't Know He Had a Pistol.

Charles Holme, sixteen years old, son of a wealthy horse mover, shot and killed himself this afternoon in the bathroom of his parents' home at No. 280 Kosciuszko street, Brooklyn. The bullet, fired from a pistol that he was going to take away with him on a vacation, pierced his heart, according to his mother, the shooting was accidental. She scoffed at the idea that her son had deliberately shot himself.

"My son was employed in the Stanley Debenture Company in New York," said Mrs. Holme. "He was on an errand to Brooklyn and being near home he came here to get his luncheon. While I was preparing it he went upstairs to the bathroom. I heard a report that sounded like an explosion, but did not heed to it thinking that it was far away from my home. I waited half an hour and then went up stairs. I found my son lying dead in the bathroom. My boy did not commit suicide; the shooting was accidental. He was going to take a vacation and he had a pistol with him. His father and I did not approve of this and told him he could not take one. I don't know where he got it. He was evidently trying when it when he was shot."

"Highway Robbery"—Murphy. "Highway robbery" is pretty strong language," said Trainer Murphy, "but there are no other words for it. I have been up against the English officials for years, and it has always been the same story—they would have robbed us of everything if they could. The race was a perfectly fair one. Carpenter should have come behind him. Both Carpenter and Robbins had the Englishman beaten from the crack of the pistol and the English officials could not bear to see their own man beaten in a race which they had counted on winning. We had three runners, two of whom had Halswelle beaten, and there was no necessity for unfair work. Besides, running at the pace Carpenter and Robbins were going, they did not have time to think of fouling. Of course, Carpenter went out a little at the turn. How could he help it at the speed he was making? Why, he finished in 47 1/2 seconds.

"It is all nonsense to talk about fouling. There is one satisfaction to me, however. It shows what the boasted 'fair sportsmen' in the world will do to win. I would rather have seen this happen than win fifty races. It proves what I have always said, that these English officials will do anything to prevent an American or anybody else from their own people from winning a race. You bet they won't run it over."

Shellard Confesses He Was With Barbara Reig in Shelter House and That His Revolver Ended Her Life.

DETAILED TO SEEK SLAYER WITH PRECINCT COMRADES.

Disclaims Knowing Young Woman, But Evening World Traces Letters to Him, and Inspector's "Third Degree" Wrings Confession and Attempted Defense.

Policeman David Shellard, of the Hamburg avenue station, in Brooklyn, a married man, with one child, was arrested late this afternoon charged with the murder of Barbara Reig, the young woman whose body was found early yesterday morning in a shelter house in Irving Square Park, Williamsburg.

Shellard admits that he was in the shelter house with the young woman when the shot that ended her life was fired, but declares that she either shot herself with suicidal intent, or the pistol, which he had discarded, exploded accidentally.

The criminal annals of New York contain no more remarkable case than this. Here was a policeman in uniform, guarding life and property on an important post, who took a girl of his acquaintance into a building in a public park, to which he and other policemen of the precinct had keys, although there was supposed to be but one key to the place in existence, and that in the custody of the park foreman.

It is now known that various policemen sought the shelter house in the park in inclement weather or used it for the purpose of harboring women.

Shellard, on post and within a few minutes of his relief, either killed the woman or was beside her when she killed herself. He was careless and careless and had discarded his revolver and club.

Having received his uniform, Shellard joined Kohler, who has been a policeman less than a month. Together they rapped for assistance and were joined by another novice policeman named Nick. At the usual time for relief Shellard went to the station house, and there he was ordered by the acting captain to go out and try to find the murderer of the girl in the park. For the ten succeeding hours, carrying his guilty secret, he made a pretense of doing police duty.

Evening World Traced Clues. Suspicion was first directed toward Shellard when Evening World reporters learned that he was well acquainted with the girl and had sent her post cards and messages. One of these cards was secured from a sister of Miss Reig and shown to Inspector Hussey. The handwriting was compared with that of Shellard and found to be identical.

Shellard was ordered by Inspector Hussey to report in uniform at the Williamsburg Bridge station this afternoon. He was taken into Inspector Hussey's private room and questioned closely by Hussey. Capt. Carey, of the Homeless Bureau, Deputy Commissioner Wood and Inspector Brooks. When he found that his relations with the girl were known he said: "I admit I was with her, but I didn't kill her."

Inspector Hussey asked him if he wanted to make a statement. He said he thought it would be best, and dictated a long, circumstantial version of the affair to a stenographer. These are the salient points in his explanation: "I was patrolling my post on the edge of Irving Square Park about 1:15 in the morning, when Barbara came up. She said she had been looking for me on another beat for three hours, and wanted to talk to me. I took her to the shelter house, unlocked the door, entered, unlocked another door leading to a toilet room, and we went in. "I took off my hat and coat and club

HALF SOVEREIGN WINS GOOD RACE FOR BELMONT

BY VINCENT T. TREANOR. BRIGHTON BEACH RACE TRACK, July 23.—In Half Sovereign, the Hastings—Souveraine filly, August Belmont has one of the best three-year-old sprinters of the season. She has improved wonderfully over her two-year-old form. She won the fourth race, the handicap feature here to-day, with ease, after taking hold of Tom McGrath in the early part and making him quit after they had passed the far turn.

She then came clear of the field and just swung along in from with all the others driving in the race for the place and honor. When Tom McGrath quit, Queen Marguerite and Pantouffe took up the chase of Half Sovereign. The Queen crashed in the drive and Cressina, closing very strong and energetically ridden by McCahey, beat out Pantouffe for the place.

Long Shot Wins First. The first race resulted in a big surprise, being won by Montrose, a 30 to 1 shot, ridden by that comer, McCahey. In the stretch, when Initiator was being hard ridden to stall off Coat of Arms, McCahey brought Montrose from the proverbial nowhere and beat them both in the last dozen strides. Initiator lasted long enough to get the place money from Coat of Arms. Batsman, considered a good thing in this race, faded all the way to the stretch and stopped.

Ethereal in a Gallop. That is the way the etheral race resulted. Rubie, when ran himself into the ground going along with Ethereal to the stretch, closed up fast and then the favorite came away with consummate ease. Sententious didn't get into the running until the stretch turn was reached, but then she closed very fast and got up in time to get the place money from Rubie. Dandy Dixon closed some ground too and was close up at the end.

Snap for Kentucky Beau. Kentucky Beau, in with the cheapest lot he ever met in his life, just galloped all the way in the third race. After nearly knocking Brancas down at the start, Kentucky Beau went out into the lead at the paddock turn and stayed there all the way. Moonshine chased the favorite all the way, about four
