

D'ABRUZZI-ELKINS WEDDING IS OFF, ROME ALSO HEARS

Cablegram From Italian Capital Speaks of Religious Differences, but Senator and Mrs. Elkins Deny That There Was an Engagement.

It would appear, from announcements made concurrently in Rome and Elkins, W. Va., that the reported engagement of the Duke of the Abruzzi to Miss Catherine Elkins, daughter of Senator Stephen B. Elkins, has been absolutely and finally broken off.

Mrs. Elkins, in an interview with a correspondent of The World positively denies that her daughter is engaged to the Duke, and a cablegram from Rome alleges that the engagement has been terminated because Miss Elkins refused to change her religion.

Senator Elkins, in Pittsburg, declared no engagement had ever existed.

Mrs. Elkins was quite definite in her statements about the many rumors that have been current concerning the possibilities of another international marriage. But she studiously refrained from saying that the engagement has been broken off.

"No engagement," she declared, "exists between my daughter and the Duke d'Abruzzi, and no engagement between them ever existed. If the Duke is coming to the United States this fall it is not for the purpose of marrying my daughter. Neither my husband nor myself entertain anything but the kindest feelings toward the Duke, and my daughter admires him as a friend. We all regard him as a charming, cultivated gentleman. Nor has Mr. Elkins ever said a word reflecting upon the Duke. I wish it distinctly understood that no hint of the alleged engagement ever came from our family.

"Understand me, I am not opposed on principle to the marriage of an American girl to a foreigner of title. If true love exists, in my judgment, the marriage will be happy whether he is a house clerk or a prince, or she a stenographer or a princess. My daughter is worthy of the very best man in the world. She is fond of outdoor life, travel and books and cares for society only as it is incidental to her life. And when she is engaged the announcement will come from me."

This is the first time that Mrs. Elkins has positively and publicly disavowed

Duke and Heiress Whose Reported Engagement Is Officially Denied

GIRL BRIDE KILLS HERSELF OVER "SPAT."

Leaving a note, in which she complained that her husband was not treating her kindly, Mrs. Annie Tramb, nineteen years old, a bride of a year, killed herself with gas and undisturbed in her home at No. 33 Perry street, Williamsburg. She was found by her nephew, Alfred Maxwell, of No. 30 Rodney street, when he went to the Perry street flat to tell her that her mother wanted her to spend the day with her. A neighbor said that she heard the couple quarrelling yesterday morning. Later Mrs. Tramb told the neighbor that her husband had threatened to strike her. She went to her mother's home and told of the quarrel. She was advised to return home and see if she could not patch the trouble up.

You Are Mistaken, Madam

If you cling to a milkman's germ-laden milk it is because of mistaken ideas. Perhaps you think that Van Camp's Milk is peculiar. If so, you are wrong. It differs from raw milk only in richness and purity.

You are bound to use Van Camp's Milk before very long. Your neighbors will tell you its goodness—tell you what delicious milk dishes they make with it.

They will tell you the convenience of a cow in your kitchen—and the economy, too. And you will not be content with impure milk when you have learned those facts.

But you are wrong in waiting. If you will read these facts—then get one can to prove them—you will use in your home the richest, purest milk in America.

Please remember this fact. Van Camp's is not like condensed milk, which is half sugar—a milk that you can't use in cooking.

We take the richest of milk, fresh from the cow, and evaporate part of the water. Then we seal it and sterilize it, so it comes to you just as fresh as it was on the day we milked it.

That is all. We add no sugar, no starch, no preservative. Nothing whatever is altered.

Analysis shows about 30 per cent of solids, of which 8 per cent is butter fat.

Six Cents Per Quart

A pint of Van Camp's costs less than ten cents when you buy the cans by the case.

Put back the two parts water—which we evaporate—and you have our original milk. The cost is about six cents per quart.

Think of that—rich Holstein milk, without a germ of any kind in it, for six cents per quart. And no waste.

Van Camp's is as thick as thick cream. So thick that you add one part water for coffee. Yet it costs half what cream costs.

This richest of milk costs you less than a half milk—less than a milk that's impure. And it can be always on hand.

For Children

Two-thirds the mortality of children is due to the germs in milk.

Van Camp's avoids those dangers. Raw milk is just as unfit as raw meat. It carries more danger of germ infection. Give your children milk that is safe.

They will like Van Camp's better than raw milk. For that slight almond flavor, due to sterilization, is itself a delicious taste. And the fact that Van Camp's is not germ-laden makes it seem doubly good.

Van Camp's Milk comes in 5 and 10-cent cans—at your grocer's. Try one can and you will want it always. Then it is cheaper to buy by the case—also more convenient.

Produced in five states by the dairies of the Van Camp Packing Co., Indianapolis, Ind.

A Germless Milk

In five states, every day, we milk 20,000 cows.

Each of these cows is inspected. So are the men who milk them. No tubercular cows—no diseased milkmen—convey their infections to Van Camp's Milk.

Our dairies are sanitary. Cleanliness everywhere is carried to the extreme.

Our buildings, where the milk is evaporated, are built without wood.

Then the milk is sterilized after the can is sealed. This makes it certain that not a germ can exist in it.

Science guards every step.

Not so with your milkman's milk. In every drop there are myriads of germs, and you never know what germs they are.

In Washington, D. C., it was recently found that 11 per cent of the dealers sold tubercular milk—milk with Consumption in it. Milk that caused guinea pigs to die of tuberculosis when they were fed with it.

Yet that is but one of the risks. Is it not folly to take them when they can be wholly avoided?

It's Whole Milk

Van Camp's is whole milk—and you never get that from your milkman.

Milk from the top of your milkman's can has an excess of butter fat, for the butter fat rises. Milk from below the top has an excess of solids, for the solids fall. And it lacks the butter fat.

Thus, the milk from your milkman is never twice alike.

Van Camp's is always the same—always the whole, rich milk. All of the butter fat, all of the solids are in it.

That is the reason for the superlative flavor which Van Camp's gives to a milk dish. Not because of anything added. There is no artificial flavor. You simply get the richness that belongs to milk.

Use Van Camp's once in your cooking. Learn the flavor that it gives to a milk dish. Then decide for yourself if you want to go back to raw milk.

Nothing But Milk

Van Camp's is simply rich Holstein milk with two-thirds the water evaporated.

Nothing whatever is added—nothing subtracted save water.

BATHTUB DUEL FOUGHT WITH CANE AND BLACKJACK

Handsome Waiter Had Bludgeon in His Fajamas, Boss Declares.

Maison da Piedmontese, which is a restaurant and boardinghouse at No. 100 West Twenty-ninth street, mourned to-day the temporary absence of Giuseppe Cerina, the proprietor, and Vittoria Bambila, the handsome waiter. Both spent the night in the Tenderloin station, ministered to by a surgeon, who stitched them into a semblance of their beauty.

Cerina and Bambila had a violent falling out yesterday that shook the Maison da Piedmontese to its foundations and the beautiful French lady on the second floor who owns the white poolie is still being shaken by hysterics. She and her cousin bianco, Spaghietta, a gift of Cerina, were at the bottom of yesterday's misunderstanding. Several weeks ago Spaghietta mysteriously disappeared. On Saturday she returned as mysteriously. The beautiful French lady rejoiced and ordered a little banquet for yesterday afternoon. The proprietor suspected Bambila of complicity in the disappearance of the white poolie, for after it vanished he got a Black Hand letter demanding a ransom for its return, and threatening that Spaghietta might be delivered a short foot of bologna. When the pair met by accident in the bathroom yesterday, conditions were ripe for trouble. When the case was threshed out in the Jefferson Market Court today, it appeared that Bambila had first gained the bathroom. He wore a yellow and green Hawaiian, carried a bath brush, a bar of soap, one towel, and it was alleged by Cerina, a blackjack. Bambila denies the blackjack and swears that after the police came, it was inserted in his clothing to make a case against him.

Bambila was arranging his bathing implements when Cerina entered. It is alleged by Cerina that Bambila cracked his head with his brush. Bambila alleges that Cerina first hurled a bar of soap in his teeth. All the boarders were then aroused, and the beautiful French lady got into the hall in time to see Cerina and Bambila come downstairs, tearing each other's pajamas to shreds as they bumped the bump. Her business almost set her nightie on fire as she slugged the door.

STARVING WOMAN DIES AS CHILDREN JEER.

While a crowd of children on their way to school to-day were watching an aged woman hobbling along Division street and sitting at her tent form and queer ragged clothes, she suddenly reared in front of a store at No. 110 and fell to the floor.

A policeman summoned an ambulance from Gouverneur Hospital, but Dr. Anthony, who responded, said that she had died suddenly, probably from heart failure due to lack of nourishment. Two pawn tickets were found on the body. One was for a shawl and issued to Mrs. Weber, and another was for a skirt and bore the name of Saunders. Three cents was all the money on the body, and from her emaciated condition and evident extreme poverty the police believe that starvation caused the woman's death.

The race is not to the swift, but to the competent. Keep well and strong on
