

REPUBLICANS NOW LEVY ON BROKERS FOR $500 A MAN

Nathan Straus Says National Committee Is Collecting It, Too.

GOT LOTS OF "DOUGH."

Senator Scott, of West Virginia, Insists He Must Have Some of It.

The Republicans have the dough at last. There's joy and confidence now in national headquarters and patriots are rushing in from the West, both to give and to gather up the crumbs.

Chairman Hitchcock has been on mysterious errands for several days, showing up at headquarters late in the afternoon. There have been strange callers at his rooms in the Hotel Manhattan, and cabs have taken him away at times on dashing missions.

Treasurer Sheldon locks himself in his private office, while groups of men wait in the corridor and ante-room. His morning mail is unusually heavy. All other parts of the headquarters suite are deserted, save the mysterious regions round about the dough bag.

Levying on Brokers. Nathan Straus, the millionaire merchant who is devoting his time to conducting the business men's part of the Democratic campaign, said today:

"The Republicans are raising large sums of money in Wall street. You can quote me as saying that I have it from brokers who have been obliged to give up during the past few days.

"The general assessment levied on them is $500 each. The man who declines to contribute is made to feel disfavor. Of course they can go as high as they like, but anything less than $500 is frowned upon.

"I do not know who is directing this collection, but I do know that money in large quantities is being raised in Wall Street for the Republicans."

Senator Nathan Bay Scott, of the Republican Pooch Ball of West Virginia, descended on his party headquarters today to get some news of war.

"They say in the treasurer's office they are as poor as church mice," he remarked. "We are all right down in West Virginia, but we have to get along on mighty little money. Many of our voters are lumbermen and miners, who live miles back in the mountains. It takes two days for them to get in and vote. They can't very well afford the loss of time and the expense in former years we used to compensate them for the effort, but I fear this year we shall have to depend on their patriotism."

Objects to Holding Out. Somebody then told the Senator about the reports of a collection in Wall street, and added:

"We'll see about that," exclaimed Mr. Scott, making a bee line for Treasurer Sheldon's office again.

Thomas F. Niedringhouse, the richest Republican of St. Louis, emerged from Mr. Sheldon's office mopping his brow. He had little to say and fled as quickly as he could.

William L. Ward, National Committeeman from New York, is assisting actively in the dough campaign. He darted in and out of Treasurer Sheldon's office frequently during the day.

"No need to worry about New York now," he said. "I'm for Taft and Hughes. If we were confident before, we are absolutely assured now of victory."

KERN ABANDONS TOOTHBRUSH AND LOSES HIS HAT

Dinky Green Headgear Left for Candidate, and There's Woe on the Wabash.

There are two second place men in town—Vice-President Fairbanks and John W. Kern, who wants the former's job, both from Indiana.

Mr. Fairbanks came to town in the afternoon after a tour up the State, where he has been campaigning for Taft. He ventured the opinion that things looked remarkably bright for the success of the Republican ticket.

To-night the Republican managers are going to give him a whirl of metropolitan campaigning, beginning down in the lower East Side, and finishing up near Fort Washington. Some of the halls where he will speak are No. 311 Grand street, Eighty-fifth street and Lexington avenue, No. 250 West One Hundred and Sixteenth street and Amsterdam avenue and One Hundred and Fiftieth street.

Mr. Kern sat in the corridor of the Hoffman House this morning enjoying the luxury of New York life. He had discarded the faithful tooth brush, sole companion of forty days of campaigning, and in its place acquired a trunk and a suit case.

He said he was having a fine time, and could see nothing but Democratic success in New York. At 1 o'clock he was taken to the National Democratic Club, in Fifth street, where a reception was given in his honor. A number of prominent Democrats attended.

Somewhat later Mr. Kern's light colored felt hat this morning, and left in its place one of those dinky little green affairs that "Johnnie" and college boys affect. It made the tall Indiana look like 30 cents, and there was trouble along the Wabash for a few minutes.

Finally the man who almost immediately had taken the fawn colored chapeau of Indiana Democracy was discovered and an amusing exchange ensued.

Then Mr. Kern started to mingle with the aristocracy of Democracy at the club.

STOCKS LED BY UNION PACIFIC

Great Northern, St. Paul and Northern Pacific Also in Evidence.

Union Pacific was the feature of the early stock market today, advancing one point and rallying the list, which showed large fractional gains.

The market closed at around the lowest of the day due to profit-taking sales. The general list lost about 1-2 of a point, Westinghouse was an exception, gaining 2-3 points, and St. Paul 1-2 and New York Airbrake 1-4. Trading at the finish was almost at a standstill.

The total sales of stocks were 47,900 shares, and of bonds $1,861,000.

The Closing Prices.

Today's highest, lowest and last prices of stocks and of net changes, as compared with yesterday's final figures, were as follows:

CHANLER CHEERED BY HUNDREDS WHO ARE NOT CROOKS

Says 9,000,000 New Yorkers Shouldn't Be Governed Like a Country Village.

Lieut.-Gov. Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler and Theodore A. Bell, of California, who served as temporary chairman of the Democratic National Convention at Denver, were the principal speakers before a rally of the Commercial Travelers' League in lower Broadway today.

The Democratic nominee for Governor arrived just as Mr. Bell was finishing his speech and received a noisy welcome from the throng in the hall. So great was the crowd that fifty policemen were required to keep a passageway through the aisles.

"I have been a traveling man myself for the last three weeks," said Mr. Chanler, "and I want to tell you of the good news I have heard up the State. Many old time Republicans have come to me to say that not only are they going to support me for Governor, but that they intend to vote all of our ticket from Mr. Bryan down."

The Democratic party is united in the State as never before. There are but few instances of Democrats voting any other than a straight ticket this fall. I have met a large number of independent Democrats who told me they had intended to vote for Gov. Hughes, but had changed their mind when he proved to them by going West and attacking Mr. Bryan that he was not the independent, non-political governor they had supposed him to be.

"Gov. Hughes said out West: 'Do not ask the crooks in New York who they are going to vote for; ask them who they are going to vote against.'"

"I see here to-day many hundreds of men who are going to vote against Gov. Hughes. What you are and what your character and abilities are you know for yourself. I do not intend to use epithets in this campaign against anyone. We are all free American citizens and have a right to vote as we choose."

"If I should be elected, I would not consider that I had suddenly risen to a class by myself. The Governor should be the servant and not attempt to be the master of the people."

"I believe that the great State of New York, with its nine millions of people, should be governed on broader lines than a country village, and if elected I will enforce all the laws alike without regard to class or community."

William Denzel, a merchant, of No. 204 South Fifth street, Philadelphia, died suddenly to-day on the pier of the Hamburg-American line in Hoboken a short time after the arrival of the liner Deutschland, upon which he had been a passenger. Death was caused by heart disease aggravated by excitement.

Mr. Denzel, who was an elderly man, had been abroad for his health. He was worried because no member of his family appeared to meet him when the ship docked and spoke of it to inspector O'Donnell as the latter started to examine his baggage. Just then a clerk for the line stepped up to Mr. Denzel and handed him a typewritten communication. It read: "A long-distance telephone message from Philadelphia asks Mr. William Denzel to notify his wife as soon as he lands what time he will be home. She is ill and it will be impossible for her to meet him."

As Mr. Denzel read the message he staggered and would have fallen but for the assistance rendered by Inspector O'Donnell and the clerk. He was assisted to an office on the pier and died in a chair while attendants were hunting for Dr. Peters, the Philadelphia surgeon. The body was taken to Volke's Morgue.

PARLIAMENT SUSPENDS SOCIALIST MEMBER.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Albert V. Greenwood, the Socialist Member of the House of Commons from Yorkshire, who created a scene in the House yesterday by denouncing the members for not supporting the starving thousands on the streets of London, after which he was obliged to leave the House and the cries of disapproval from his colleagues, was today suspended for the rest of the session.
