

MORSE CAN PLEAD FOR PARDON AGAIN, BUT NOT TILL 1913

Taft's Refusal Carries With It Two Years' Doom—Walsh Free in September.

Charles W. Morse of New York and John R. Walsh of Chicago, both millionaires, were today, the first in Atlanta Penitentiary and the second at the Leavenworth Prison, that the devoted struggle of relatives and sympathizers to obtain pardons for them from President Taft had failed.

In the case of Morse the President said that no renewal of his effort to get a pardon or a commutation of sentence shall be considered before Jan. 1, 1912.

JUSTICE DAVIS SETS TRIAL OF REICHMAN FOR JUNE 12.

Counsel for Indicted Carnegie Trust Co. Director Wanted It Postponed Until October.

At the conclusion of an extended argument between counsel in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court today, Justice Davis set June 12 as the date for the trial of Joseph B. Reichman, one of the indicted directors of the Carnegie Trust Company.

Justice Davis said he would be ready to try Mr. Reichman on a misdemeanor indictment, charging him with making false returns of the assets of the Carnegie Trust Company to its estate banking department. He asked that Justice Davis assign the case for trial during the month of June.

LUMSDEN PLEADS GUILTY ON HIS SECOND TRIAL.

John C. Lumsden, who killed Harry R. Snydam, a broker, in this city in December, 1908, pleaded guilty today before Justice McCall in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court to manslaughter in the first degree and threw himself on the mercy of the court. He will be sentenced later.

Lumsden, who is a young man, had already been convicted of the crime at a former trial and served two years of an eighteen-month sentence in Sing Sing.

The Court of Appeals reversed the judgment of the jury at the first trial, however, and directed a new trial of Lumsden.

Martha W. Littleton, who represented Lumsden, told the Court today that the client was in very poor health and the strain of a long, drawn-out trial might result in his death.

Mr. Littleton said he had talked the whole case over with Lumsden and the latter had concluded it would be best for him to plead guilty and ask for the clemency of the Court.

"It's Immoral for Woman to Scold; Most Ills Due to Wrong Thought."

And You Can Control Your Heart and Lungs Mentally as You Do Hands and Feet, Says Mrs. Cheney, Founder of Right Thinking and Right Living Sect.

Set the Current of Your Being Toward Comeliness and It Will Flow That Way—Anger and Worry Bring Heavy Penalties.

By Ethel Lloyd Patterson.

Mrs. Vance Cheney controls and directs her heart and lungs mentally, just as you control your hands and feet. She told me she does, so it must be true. It is not a trick, either, like learning how to pat your stomach and rub your head, both at the same time. It is a science, a religion, if you prefer.

Mrs. Cheney is its founder and organizer, and so well has she founded and organized that her sect, which is called "The Woman's International League of Right Thinking and Right Living," is about to move from temporary quarters in Carnegie Hall to permanent quarters in a large brownstone house on Fortieth street, just west of Fifth avenue.

"But what does it all mean?" I asked. "Eventually, when you have grasped the science, it means success, health and happiness," Mrs. Cheney replied. "It sounds good," I admitted, "but cannot you give me something more tangible? Something the uninitiated could understand?"

"Immoral to Scold." "I will give you a few of our contributory beliefs," agreed Mrs. Cheney. "For example,

"It is immoral for a man to swear, it is immoral for a woman to scold. Scolding is but swearing in different diction.

"Make your character to order by carefully selecting the ingredients. The sub-conscious chemist will not fail to do the compounding.

"Your opinion of the motive of another is a flashlight on your own character.

"Set the current of your being toward comeliness and it will flow that way.

"Set the current of your being toward anger and worry, and you will come into port with a heavy cargo of physical ills."

"So that all sick people would naturally have nasty dispositions, and all healthy people would be naturally sweet tempered?" I interrupted.

"Broadly speaking, yes," agreed Mrs. Cheney. "Of course, you will say at once that you have known invalids who were perfect angels. You are right. They may appear to be. But if you could only go deeply enough into their ailment you would find it was founded on selfishness, or in wrong thought, or possibly in incorrect breathing.

"Practically all the ills of the world are due to either incorrect breathing or wrong thought."

"But in the case of an invalid such as we are citing the chances are that even though the ailment was not induced by worryment over self, it was induced by worryment over some loved one, and his or her future or success."

"You make the physical absolutely dependent upon the mental?" I suggested.

"I do," said Mrs. Cheney. "Not only one's body but one's surroundings affect the mind and soul. Beauty in surroundings and in dress are an important asset in the element of right thinking. Ugliness of any kind is inharmonious and therefore not to be endured. One's dress need not by any means be costly, if one will but see to it that the costume and the wearer fit. In other words, the quality of right thought brings a love for rightness in all directions, whether it be that of mental poise and peace, or a love for the beautiful and agreeable as expressed through the physical senses."

"Anyway, whether you are willing to attribute it to Mrs. Cheney's beliefs or to causes that to you seem simpler, you would have to admit that something, somewhere certainly agrees with the founder of the Right Thinking and Right Living League.

"Had Been a Nervous Wreck." She would tell you, if you asked her, that at the age of eighteen she was a nervous wreck, with one hand and arm paralyzed from overwork at the piano in pursuance of an intended musical career. In the dark days of that illness she evolved the principles of life which she has since followed and taught. Now, Mrs. Cheney is a woman of rather more than average height, holding herself magnificently, moving with the assurance of perfect poise. Her skin is flushed and clear, and her white hair crowns her as regally as has the years.

"If I brought a woman to you who was ill and unhappy, what would be the first thing you would tell her?"

Mrs. JOHN VANCE CHENEY.

"I would explain to her that it is just as possible to control the organs of the body as it is to control the limbs," Mrs. Cheney replied. "She would have to learn to breathe properly and to control the organs of the body. Having learned to control them, she would then have it in her power to banish the illness from which she suffered.

"Secondly, I would tell any woman who was ill and unhappy that she must get a definite aim in life. Some people call what I mean 'a hobby.' I prefer to call it 'a life work.'

"But whatever it is, just one thing must be stipulated. The aim must be unselfish. It must not be for oneself alone. It must be for humanity."

"But," I protested, "might not all this thought above self defeat its own purpose? I mean, would it not make a person self-centered and selfish?"

"No," denied Mrs. Cheney. "Because lack of poise and fear are really what induce selfishness. If one is perfectly sure of one's self, subconsciously positive that one is completely master of one's mentality, then one ceases to be nervous; the mind no longer dwells upon self. We go forward confidently. What you aim for," concluded Mrs. Cheney, "that you will be."

"And I am thinking of all the little boys I heard they are going to be President of the United States, some today, and wondering how it is going to work out, if we are to believe Mrs. Cheney. It will be very trying, I am afraid."

TAKING NUGGETS HOME AS PROOF OF THEIR BONANZA.

The O'Donohues Are on Their Way to Visit the Old Folks in Ireland.

Stephen and Patrick O'Donohue are here to sail on the White Star liner Cedric Saturday for Wexford town, Ireland, with a box of gold nuggets to gladden the eyes of the "folk in the old country."

Ten years ago Stephen, now thirty-three, went to work in a tin mine in Bolivia. Soon he sent for his brother. They heard of an abandoned tin mine near La Paz, raised $5,000, and took title. They say it has turned out to be rich in gold and tin, and that they have refused more than $1,500,000 for it. Two brothers remain on watch at the mine.

The O'Donohues arrived on the Orontava, the passengers on which they presented with gold nuggets. They are taking a native boy to Dublin to be educated.
