$500,000 WAR FLEET LINES UP FOR KING GEORGE AT THE CORONATION REVIEW

British Monarch at Spithead
Sees the Greatest Fighting
Fleet Ever Gathered.

U. S. S. DELAWARE LEADS.

Many Americans in Throng at the Naval Feature of the Coronation.

PORTSMOUTH, England, June 24.—Never before has such an armada been brought together for review by a monarch as was assembled in the narrow waters of the Solent on this, the navy's day, in the round of coronation pageantry. Ranged in a parallel line six miles in length and two miles broad floated 187 British warships and eighteen foreign vessels representing seventeen nations.

The great United States battleship Delaware easily stood out as the most formidable craft in the review.

The aggregate tonnage of the British fleet alone was over one million, as compared with a little more than one-half that total present at Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee review in 1897. This aggregation of British Dreadnaughts and smaller vessels represented approximately the huge outlay of $400,000,000, while if the value of the eighteen foreign warships is added, there was moored in this historic roadstead representing a total initial expenditure of $500,000,000.

Dressed from stem to stern in a riot of bunting, the gray lines of the warships with a background formed by the blue coastline of the Isle of Wight, made a magnificent spectacle. A strong southwesterly breeze blowing across the anchorage raised a choppy sea and incidentally conflicting emotions in many among the scores of thousands of spectators who viewed the scene from the multitude of beflagged excursion craft crowding the roadstead.

THUNDEROUS WELCOME TO KING AND QUEEN.

At noon picket boats from all the warships covered the review area like a flight of gulls warning off the fleet of excursion vessels and from then on until the king's yacht weighed anchor for a return to the harbor, none but official craft were permitted within the reviewing lines.

The sun was shining brightly when King George and Queen Mary, with their brilliant suites, left the naval port aboard the royal yacht Victoria and Albert. The Victoria and Albert were way and in line by His Majesty's yacht Alexandra, the Admiralty yacht Enchantress and the commander-in-chief's yacht Fire Queen.

All the vantage points at the mouth of the harbor, on the shores to the southward, and stretching far to the eastward of Southsea Castle, were black with masses of people, who cheered themselves hoarse as the flotilla passed down the fairway almost within a stone's throw of Southsea's marine promenade.

An additional convoy of four torpedo-boat destroyers picked up the royal yachts before they reached the review

ROOSEVELT, ROOT AND LA FOLLETTE IN LORIMER CASE

All Mentioned as Factors in Events Bearing on Bribery
Charges Against Senator.

NAMED BY KOHLSAAT.

Editor as Witness Puts Lorimer
in Jekyll-Hide Class—Defines Lorimerism.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—That Col. Theodore Roosevelt has known since early last fall the entire story of how Edward Hines is alleged to have asked Clarence S. Funk, general manager of the International Harvester Company, for a $10,000 contribution to a $100,000 fund "used to put Lorimer across at Springfield," was testified to-day before the Senate Lorimer committee by Herman H. Kohlsaat, publisher of the Chicago Record-Herald.

Mr. Kohlsaat said he told the story to Col. Roosevelt just before the Hamilton Club dinner at Chicago, which Roosevelt refused to attend until Lorimer's invitation was withdrawn. It was upon this information, Mr. Kohlsaat said, that the former President based his action in declining to sit at the same table with the Illinois Senator.

Mr. Kohlsaat further testified that he had written an account of the conversation between himself and Funk, but without mentioning Funk's name, to Senators La Follette and Root.

This was done at the request of Walter L. Fisher, now secretary of the Interior, and others.

ROOT THANKED HIM FOR HIS HELP IN THE CASE.

"Senator Root wrote me in reply," said the witness, "and thanked me for the information. He said that it had greatly influenced him in making his speech against Lorimer on the floor of the Senate."

"What?" exclaimed Senator Gamble. "Do you mean to say that Senators were influenced in arriving at their decision by matters not in evidence?"

"I did not discuss that question with Senator Root," replied Mr. Kohlsaat.

The witness said that Senator La Follette tried very hard to get him to come to Washington to tell about the conversation, even threatening to send a sergeant-at-arms of the Senate after him.

"I replied that it would merely result in my spending a hot summer in Washington," said Mr. Kohlsaat.

The witness explained that he had given his word to Mr. Funk that he would not reveal his name, but he considered that he was free to tell the story. In answer to questions as to why he did not give the story to members of the committee, without the name, Mr. Kohlsaat said, referring to his experience before the Helm committee, that the only time he had ever done such a thing they threatened to send him to jail if he did not give the name.

"By what code of morals or good citizenship, I should like to know," declared Senator Gamble, "could you keep secret such information as you believed you possessed when the honor of a Senator and the fair name of a State was in question?"

"As an editor," began the witness, when Senator Lea, himself an editor, interjected that "good citizenship does not require the sacrifice of personal integrity."

TOLD ONLY TWO OTHERS BESIDES ROOSEVELT.

Mr. Kohlsaat agreed with that, and added: "Senator Gamble, if you ever bestow upon me such a confidence I assure you I will keep it."

Mr. Kohlsaat said that besides Col. Roosevelt he had only divulged Mr. Funk's name in connection with the

KILLED FOR JIBES OVER BLACK EYE IN A RESTAURANT

Cashman's "Joshing" Leads to Sudden Shooting by the Object of Ridicule.

CROWDS SEE TRAGEDY.

Victim Falls Dead on the Threshold of Seventh Avenue Place.

Edward N. Cashman, a chauffeur, of No. 545 West One Hundred and Fifty-sixth street, was shot to death to-day in L. J. Collins's restaurant at No. 47 Seventh avenue by Martin McLoughlin, a waiter in the place. The victim of the tragedy had enraged McLoughlin with a continual stream of stunts and witticisms while he was getting breakfast in the restaurant. Cashman was thirty years old, McLoughlin is twenty-eight.

Cashman entered the place with his friend, Ralph Blackmar, also a chauffeur, whose home is in Providence, R. I. Both have been seeking employment and carried on a wildcat trade. He sold his taxicab a week ago.

JOKED ABOUT THE BLACK EYE "GOPHER" GANG GAVE WAITER.

The moment McLoughlin stepped up to wait on the two chauffeurs, he noticed that he had a black eye, and even before they gave their orders they began to make sport of him. The black eye was only one memento he had received from members of the Gopher Gang, which infests the neighborhood, during the past few weeks. The "Gophers" had not only bullied and "kidded" the young waiter in the restaurant, but they had waylaid him on Seventh avenue, beating him with clubs and blackjacks. Because of this, McLoughlin had got a revolver, which he kept under the cash counter.

When Cashman opened up on the waiter with, "Got your right lid in a handsome frame, ain't you?" McLoughlin said, "Cut it out," and said it with an intonation that should have impressed the two chauffeurs that they were treading on dangerous ground. But there was something in the rakish appearance of the waiter that gave to the waiter that was a source of great mirth for the two young men.

McLoughlin's face under the ridicule became almost as black as the swollen circle around his eye, but this did not stem the current of Cashman's witticisms. He kept driving away at McLoughlin all through the breakfast, and when he went to the desk to pay his check he still had some more left-hand compliments to sling.

"Cut it out," snarled McLoughlin with an oath, but Cashman came back with a torrent of profanity and obscenity, interspersed by roars of laughter. At the height of his hilarity McLoughlin seized his hand under the counter and brought up the revolver.

SCOFFER FELL DYING WITH LAUGH ON HIS LIPS.

He threw up the weapon and pulled the trigger with one swift motion, and the bullet penetrated the base of Cashman's skull. He was laughing when the bullet struck him and bowed over. He was unconscious before his body struck the ground and he lived only a few minutes after the arrival of an ambulance surgeon.

McLoughlin dropped the revolver and almost swooned when he saw what he had done. He made no effort to escape and was huddled behind the counter when a policeman came.

The restaurant is opposite the Hotel York and the Hotel Navarre, and scores of pedestrians were passing on both sides of the street. The door of the restaurant was open and many heard the shot fired and saw the chauffeur drop across the threshold. An immense crowd collected and the revolvers were summoned to keep traffic open.

Blackmar told the police that he and Cashman were only joking good naturedly with the waiter. McLoughlin said they had started to joke with him, but had ended by calling him vile names, that they had started his race and made other personal comments of a character that had maddened him beyond control.

He admitted that he had shot at the chauffeur point blank. He could only "see red" at the time and had no realization of what he was doing until the deed was done. He was arrested in the West Side Court and remanded to the Coroner.

Shooting Show Girls in Stokes Case As They Appeared in Court To-Day (Specially Photographed for The Evening World.)

BABY BOY KILLED TAKING FIRST RIDE ON HIS BIRTHDAY

Fell From Horse When His Father's Back Was Turned and Was Crushed.

To-day was the third birthday of William H. Metz Jr., and his father, who drives for a coal merchant with a station at No. 250 Park avenue, kept a promise to him to take him for a ride. Metz stopped with his team at his home at No. 32 East One Hundred and Thirty-seventh street, and drove the little chap to the stable.

When he had unbarned the team the boy asked permission to ride bareback and the father put him up on one of the big bays that the child had long known as "Billy." After walking the horse back and forth for several minutes Metz turned round to speak to the foreman. In the moment he turned the boy fell from the horse's back and the horse stepped on the little head, crushing the skull.

An ambulance was called from Lincoln Hospital and the child was rushed there, still conscious, but according to the surgeon, having only one chance in a thousand of recovery. Several times while in the ambulance the little chap spoke the name of "Billy," and said that he wanted to go to sleep on the big horse's back. The boy's father was overwhelmed by the tragedy and seemed on the point of going out of his mind.

TWO BOYS SAVED FROM HELL GATE BY POLICE SERGEANT.

Sergeant James G. Stephenson of Police Locals No. 9 saved two boys from drowning in Hell Gate's waters this afternoon.

The boys, Robert Sheehy, fifteen years old, of No. 28 East One Hundred and Second street, and Max Dorsch, eleven years old, of No. 28 East One Hundred and Sixth street, were swimming off Mill Rock when they became exhausted battling with the current. They yelled for help. The police launch, passing at the moment, made for the boys, and Sergeant Stephenson pulled them on board.

The boys were taken to the foot of East One Hundredth street, where their clothes had been left. They were dressed, and thanking the police, left for home.

WOMAN ARRESTED IN LOAN SHARK CRUSADE.

On complaint of a representative of the Sage Foundation, which is conducting a crusade against loan sharks, Mrs. Ella Bloomberg of No. 41 Clinton avenue, manager for H. Tolman of No. 10 Fulton street, one of the most prominent of the so-called loan sharks, was held in $200 bail for trial in Special Sessions by Magistrate Corcoran in the Tombs Court to-day. The woman was charged with usury.

The specific charge was that she was paid last October to George Goufous of Riverside, Conn., and that the contract required that he pay $20 a month for three months. Mr. Goufous is an expert accountant and has been retained by the Sage Foundation to work up cases against the notorious loan sharks.

BABY RESCUED FROM THE LAKE IN CENTRAL PARK

Unidentified Boy Fished Out
By a Passerby—Recovers at Hospital.

The officials of the Presbyterian Hospital are wondering why some one does not climb a boy between two and three years of age who was brought there to-day after being fished out of the Central Park lake opposite East Seventy-second street. The police of the Arsenal station are searching on the East Side and also awaiting some one to report that a child is missing.

The little fellow, who is very pretty but who is poorly dressed, was seen playing about the lake for some time this morning. Policeman Tomney watched him for a time and supposed he was one of a party of Saturday frolicers. The child was suddenly active, and while running along the shore fell in.

Children gave the alarm, and George McDonald, aged sixteen years, of No. 32 East Fifty-sixth street, who saw the accident, dashed to the scene. The little tot was entirely submerged. McDonald waded out a few feet and dragged the child in. Policeman Tomney came up on the run and registered a passing automobile, in which he took the child to the Presbyterian Hospital.

The child is as lively as a kitten this afternoon, but can give no intelligible account of himself. He can only say he is "mommy's boy" and that he lives in a "great big house."

GIRLS SHRIEK FOR JOY OVER LIBERTY TO-NIGHT IN STOKES SHOOTING

Magistrate Freschi Directs a Bond
He Will Approve and Orders
Young Women Sent to His Room to Await Release.

MICE IN TOMBS CELLS
MADE THEM UNHAPPY.

"Matron Was Cross and Treated Us
Just Like Plain Criminals," Wails Miss Graham.

Overcome with hysterical joy at the prospect of being freed from the Tombs on bail, Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad, the show girls who are accused of trying to murder W. E. D. Stokes by shooting his trousers, his hat and his legs when he was running out of their apartment on June 7, were told this afternoon by Magistrate Freschi that he would visit the Criminal Courts Building to sign their bail bond at 8 o'clock to-night.

He could not sign it at the moment because he had rejected Giuseppe Fusca, one of the proposed bondsmen, on the ground that Fusca was on other bonds, notably that of Sabato Fiorito, under indictment for perjury.

But Raffello Marzano, whose real estate holdings had been held insufficient when he first came forward, produced stocks and bonds to amount which showed him responsible to the extent of $10,000 and the Magistrate ordered a new bond drawn, making him the sole surety for the two girls.

FELL INTO EACH OTHER'S ARMS TO SOB AND GIGGLE.

When M. Jordan, lawyer for the girls, explained to them that they would surely be turned loose at 8 o'clock they fell into one another's arms and sobbed and giggled. All of a sudden both of them were struck by the same thought.

"Oh, Mr. Jordan," they said in the same breath, "please ask him not to send us to that horrid Tombs place again. It will kill us, indeed it will."

The youthful Magistrate looked gently on the tear-filled eyes of the pair and extracted Deputy Sheriff Hiley to take them to his office in the building and see that they had a good dinner and were comfortable until 8 o'clock.

A taxicab, in which sat two mysterious young men who had been waiting all afternoon for the young women to come out, was dismissed. The young men left word that they would be back.

C. L. Jordan, the girls' counsel, had presented both Marrazzo and Fusca as bondsmen separately. Each had been rejected by the bond investigators of the District Attorney's office on the ground that their property was too heavily mortgaged to accept their equities in it for the amount of the bond. Ten thousand dollars required an equity margin of at least $5,000 in the District Attorney's opinion.

But when Mr. Jordan offered both men as joint sureties their combined holdings looked like safe security to the District Attorney, and Mr. Sullivan, the assistant in charge of the case, said they would be satisfactory. The office was familiar with their qualifications and no time was wasted going over them again.

Miss Graham and Miss Conrad said they were sure that both the District Attorney and Mr. Stokes would have them shadowed after they were released and to avoid such spies they would go together to some quiet hotel and remain in seclusion until they had outlined their plans with their lawyer.

Miss Graham knew that her sister, Mrs. S. Singleton, who lives on the Pacific Coast, had arrived in town to-day on the Campana and expected to see her this evening, though no message had been received from her since her arrival.

NEW EAST SIDE PARK.

In the presence of a large crowd of women and children, Thomas N. Rhinlander, President of the National Highways Protective Society, to-day officially opened another park and playground established by the society at State-street and Second avenue. With President Rhinlander were Park Commissioner Stover, Dudley Field Malone, Alfred L. Seligman and others.
