

DR. AMEY SURE MRS. BURRELLE LEFT NEW WILL

She Let Him Understand She Changed Testament After Thanksgiving Quarrel.

JEWELS CALLED "FAKE."

Clipping Man's First Wife May Ask District-Attorney to Find Missing Stock.

The mass of scandal surrounding the death of Mrs. Nellie Burrelle, widow of the founder of the Burrelle Press Clipping Bureau, was still steaming to-day, though her body, released by Coroner Frohshauer after an inquiry into the cause of her death, was on its way to burial in Hamilton, O. Dr. Jesse W. Amey, who lives at the Oregon, No. 295 West Fifty-fourth street, across the way from the hotel Carlton, where Mrs. Burrelle made her home, to-day gave what he called "a final statement."

"I am told," he said, "that Mrs. Burrelle wrote a letter to a friend, a Mrs. Kanny, that she feared I would kill her. I have no doubt she wrote such a letter. Her pretty little hands were filled with the most horrible melodramatic ideas. She often accused poor Frank Burrelle of trying to murder her. The more she loved a man the more awful were the things she imagined and said about him."

"A good deal has been said about Mrs. Burrelle and myself. I announced our engagement because I thought she meant to marry me. When she refused she called me a presumptuous man. We had a quarrel and made it up as we made up many other quarrels. SAID SHE'D REMEMBERED HIM IN WILL.

"Along in November we went down to the Moltan Aerodrome at Lincoln. She had made arrangements to be taken as a passenger in a flying machine. Just before the machine was ready, she took me around behind the hangars where nobody could see us and told me that if she did not come down 'right side up'—those are just the words she used—she wanted me to know she had made a will which left me a considerable interest in her press clipping business."

"She said she had recognized the right of her husband's children by his first wife, Mignon and Douglas, to thirty of the hundred shares and that she had left enough shares to secure control to the manager, Charles Hemstreet, and one or two other old employees of the concern."

"I then told her that as soon as I got home I would make a will leaving her a proportionate share of my estate. This made her so happy that she said she didn't care whether she got killed or not."

"Well, just before Thanksgiving Day we had a new quarrel. She would not change her habits and defied me to make her change to her liking. I told her I would punish her the only way I knew how and would stay away from her. Every day she went to her window across the street there and stood with her arms stretched out, looking at my window."

"Dr. Amey, who is forty, fat and bald, went copiously as he continued the narrative.

HE MADE UP WITH MRS. BURRELLE AGAIN.

"On Thanksgiving morn, when the thing was getting hot in the strong belief, Mrs. Grace Miller White called to me she thought Mrs. Burrelle would kill herself if I didn't go to see her. He went off and made up with her. She said something at that time which led me to believe she had changed her will since Thanksgiving, but meant to change it again. I am sure she left a will and that it was drawn by somebody else than Charles Matland Boston, her usual lawyer. She told me the man's name, but I have forgotten it. She said she liked him because he fought everybody and made trouble."

The confusion regarding Mrs. Burrelle's affairs was increased to-day by the fact that a necklace of emeralds, pearls, with a watch thought to be worth many thousands of dollars, was appraised as a fake when taken from her strong box."

Several very valuable diamond rings, which from time to time she accused her friends of stealing, but always found in some place where she had carelessly left them, were also in the strong box. Frank A. Burrelle died at sea on his way from Costa Rica to New Orleans. The cause of his death was announced as "a quick consumption." Mrs. Julia Burrelle, his first wife, started a rumor to-day that there was to be a belated inquiry to redetermine the cause of his death."

In the course of his statement Dr. Amey said he had seen a typewritten document which he believed to be Mrs. Burrelle's will. Charles Hemstreet, who had been told by Mrs. Burrelle that she meant to make him executor of an estate which yielded about $2,000 a year, also said he had seen it. Asked if he did not think the much discussed document would appear at the psychological moment best suited to the interests of the press clipping bureau, Mr. Hemstreet, who wears a soft Windsor tie, said he "hoped so."

Lawyer Frederick J. Goldsmith, who has been acting for Mrs. Burrelle's sisters, came forward later with the statement that he was the lawyer Mrs. Burrelle had referred to as "a fighter." Incidentally he produced ninety of the missing shares of the clipping bureau stock as an evidence of his sincerity. He said he knew where the other ten shares were and would recover them in due time. The friends of Mrs. Burrelle are now looking to Mr. Goldsmith to produce the much discussed missing will."

Greatest of Russian Dancers Gives Some Hints and "Dont's" for Women To Be Graceful and Acquire Poise

"It is Not Just the Body That Must Be Kept Responsive," Says Mlle. Goltzer, "It is the Face"—The Best Way to Learn Is to Study the Mirror.

But You Must Feel in Your Heart What You Show in Your Face—Don't Over-Gesticulate, Avoid the Military Pose but Don't Slouch, and—Throw Aside Corsets!

Marguerite Mooers Marshall. Mlle. Cathrine Goltzer, prima ballerina at the Imperial Opera House in Moscow, has just arrived in New York. She comes to take the place of Mlle. Pavlova in the Russian grand ballet, and makes her debut at the Metropolitan Opera House Tuesday afternoon of next week. She had to obtain the special permission of the czar to pay a three weeks' visit to America, and she is said to be the highest-priced dancer ever to come to this country.

But it was not of these things that I thought when I called on Mlle. Goltzer yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Reuter. Mademoiselle's personality is a sufficiently engaging subject. As she sat carelessly on the edge of a straight-backed chair she reminded me of nothing in the world but a goose winged victory.

There is nothing of the haughty Mike about her, for she is hardly above middle height. But there are certain diminutive Greek figures which convey perfectly the sense of arrested motion, and that is the abiding impression given by Mlle. Goltzer.

For the rest, she has hair as gloriously red as any Russian story book lady's, blue eyes with red-brown lashes, a pointed, triangular little nose and an enchanting smile. When I saw her she wore a tunic-like frock of some soft dark-blue stuff, overlaid with heavy dull-gold embroidery, and the feet and the third fingers of her small left hand were laded down with diamonds, pearls and two or three big emeralds.

There is nothing of the haughty Mike about her, for she is hardly above middle height. But there are certain diminutive Greek figures which convey perfectly the sense of arrested motion, and that is the abiding impression given by Mlle. Goltzer.

MR. SCHLOPPER'S QUEEN WON'T GIVE BACK HIS RING, BO!

Swell Dame Grabs His Cameo, All May Die in Chair Same Day If Di Marco Gets Death Penalty.

"Hi, Bo! Flip a coin and see who gets the ring?" This invitation extended to Magistrate Corrigan, in the Harlem Police Court, this morning, by Miles Schlopper, who had summoned one of his five sweethearts into court in an effort to make her return a cameo ring, was not accepted. Instead, the Magistrate told Mr. Schlopper to go to the civil courts with his case.

Schlopper says he is a postal clerk at the office at Lexington avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street. He had caused to be summoned into court pretty Anna Stevenson, twenty-three years old, of No. 206 East One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street.

"It was this way, bo," said Schlopper, in explaining his case to the Magistrate. "The first time I meets this girl, I falls for her beauty. One night, over at Clason Point, last summer, she gets me waiting to one of those dreamy strains that they can pour out only at that place, and when the queen asks me for me swell cameo, I up and gives it to her."

"But just a little word of explanation, bo. The dame here thinks she was fooling me when she made me believe I was the only guy she loved. Well, she didn't and all the time I was going with her I had four other girls myself."

"Flip a coin, Judge, and see whether she gets the ring or whether I gets it. I just want to show you that I'm no cheap sport, and am willing to take a chance."

"I guess I can't do that," said the Magistrate. "Then he asked the pretty defendant to take the stand."

"Does the ring fit you?" asked the Magistrate. "You bet it does," said Miss Stevenson, as she held her hand uprightly so the ring wouldn't fall off.

"I tell you, Judge, the only reason I had the girl summoned to court was to show some people who said I couldn't get the ring back, that I could," was Schlopper's parting testimony.

"I can't see there has been any larceny here," said the Magistrate. "Take her into a civil court and see whether you can't get possession of it there."

And as they left the courtroom, Miss Stevenson's face was aglow with a smile of victory.
