

TINY MISS KINGSLEY SWEARS SHE DIDN'T MEAN TO HURT MAID

Youthful Heiress Is Self Possessed as She Testifies on Witness Stand.

SERVANT AFTER $20,000.

Claim Girl Did Not Bring Suit Until After Her Discharge.

Little Miss Hope Kingsley, who may some day charm princes and lords and set a prominent figure in the courts of Europe as an American heiress, was the central figure to-day in an American court of law.

Now is the daughter of Darwin Kingsley, President of the New York Life Insurance Company. She is just fourteen years old, and proved to be an excellent witness in her own behalf when called to the stand to-day in the Supreme Court in the suit for $20,000 damages brought against her by Therese Hakanson, formerly employed as a maid in her home.

Miss Hakanson complained that three years ago, when Hope was only eleven years old, she "recklessly, wantonly and with great force and violence" pushed her (Miss Hakanson) off an elevated sink in the kitchen of the Kingsley home, causing injuries from which the maid has never recovered.

"I was going down the service staircase in my home," said little Miss Kingsley, "and as I entered the kitchen I saw Therese standing on the edge of the sink. She appeared to be swaying and thinking she might fall I rushed in to save her. Before I got to her she fell and I had to jump out of the way in order not to get hurt."

"Did you take hold of her dress?" asked her lawyer, Charles Stecker.

"No, sir," replied Hope promptly. "And you were always friendly with Therese?"

"Yes, sir."

"You never had any feeling against her, or any desire to harm her?"

"No, the slightest. We used to play together. I liked Therese."

Miss Hakanson's lawyer, on cross-examination, had Hope repeat her story of Miss Hakanson's fall.

"Did you talk with anybody about this case before coming to court?" was asked.

"Yes, with my father and mother and Mr. Stecker. I talked it over with my father and mother several times and with Mr. Stecker once."

Hope was excused, and her mother, a young, attractive woman, took the stand. She told of sending Miss Hakanson to a physician. She said the maid remained in her employ for a year after the accident, and did not even as much as intimate she intended to sue Hope for damages until she (Mrs. Kingsley) and Miss Hakanson had some words and the maid quit.

"How long was that after the accident?"

"Fourteen months," replied Mrs. Kingsley.

Miss Hakanson, on the stand yesterday, testified that she and Hope were always friendly, and she could think of no reason why Hope should care to hurt her.

ACCIDENT STIRS SHOPPERS.

Auto Dashed by Crowds, Bearing Man It Had Run Down.

A man about twenty-five years old and who, from papers found in his pockets, is thought to be E. Goodfrey of Ferry Park, L. I., was knocked down by an automobile to-day on Twenty-third street, just west of Eighth avenue. The automobile is owned by Harry R. Tremaine, President of the Aeolian Company, No. 32 Fifth avenue. Mr. Tremaine's chauffeur, Henry Dickman, of No. 34 East Forty-ninth street, had taken him from the West Twenty-third street ferry to his office and was returning for Mr. Tremaine's valet, when the accident happened.

According to the chauffeur and the conductor of a street car, the man stepped off the car in front of the machine. He was struck by the mud guard. Dickman at once stopped the machine and, with the aid of Policeman McGuire, picked up the wounded man and rushed him through the shopping district, crowded with Christmas buyers, to the New York Hospital on Fifth street. The swift passage of the big automobile, with a policeman holding a wounded man in the rear seat, caused considerable excitement.

Goodfrey was unconscious and suffering from internal injuries. His condition is serious. Dickman was paroled in charge of his employer.

John E. Farrell Dead.

John E. Farrell, thirty-seven years old, court stenographer at the Second District Municipal Court for Richmond, at Stapleton, died to-day at St. Vincent's Hospital, Livingston, Richmond Borough, after a long illness. His home was on Clay's avenue, West Brighton. He was First Vice-President of the North Shore Volunteer Firemen's Association of Veterans, Secretary of the Knights of St. Patrick and a member of the Richmond County Catholic Club and one of the founders of the Young Men's Catholic Union of West Brighton.

Requiem Mass for Little Tim.

A requiem mass at St. Ann's Church, on East Twelfth street, for the repose of the soul of the late Timothy P. Sullivan will be held to-morrow. The members of the Democratic organization of the Third Assembly District, of which "Little Tim" was leader, will be present. The present executive members are former Senator John C. Fitzgerald, and Aldermen John J. White will lead the organization delegation, comprising several thousand members. Men prominent in business and professional life, who were among "Little Tim's" long list of friends, will also attend.

NAUGHTY OLIVE! SHE DISROBES IN LOBBY OF HOTEL

Miss Dorr of Washington Isn't Going to Lose Her Sleep for Anybody!

OLIVE DORR, who comes from Washington and admits she is twenty-six years old and one of the brightest jewels in high society at the capital, flounced into the corridor of the Hotel Lincoln early this morning, and twisting her green serpent gown closely about her approached the clerk.

"Shay of shoy, gimme key. Must go to bed. Out all night. Fine time, shimply boofull." And she clenched the cigar case for support.

"Nothing doing, Olive," replied the clerk, in his most courtly manner.

For a moment, Olive stared at him in amazement. Last night, before she departed for the ball, the manager of the Lincoln, Harry Siegel, had made some remarks about a $50 board bill due. He had even intimated he would be forced to hold her trunk unless she settled. But Olive had not taken him seriously.

"Listen, H! one, I shud I wan's go to bed. Gimme key," she lisped again to the clerk.

When she finally understood she could not go to her room, she was nonplussed, but only for a moment. She would not mind going to sleep in the lobby. But before sleeping she would disrobe. She calmly announced her decision to the manager and without waiting for criticism or consent, began to get ready for bed. Her fur coat she hung from a chandelier over the desk. Her dress followed. Other articles were hung from various vantage points. One article of underclothing she draped neatly about the coat rack.

Somewhat or other one can never tell how such things happen—a crowd of men began to pour into the lobby. Olive and only once did Manager Siegel attempt to interfere. After jumping about shouting, "You can't do that in here!" he attempted to seize her. A small bottle filled with ink landed on his shirt front and caromed through the window.

"I'll show you if you can rob me of my sleep," said Olive.

In despair, a hurly call was sent for Policeman Knight. Blushing furiously, he forced the maiden to put on her costume. Then he escorted her to the West Side Court.

In court, Olive attracted much attention. Pipped against the rail before Judge Sherman, she lisped out the details of her troubles. The Court, after trying to interpret what she was saying, ordered her remanded until afternoon, in order to allow her time to gather more coherency.

WANT ROOSEVELT ON PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY BALLOT

Nebraskans, Headed by Omaha Man, Formally Petition Naming of Colonel.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 21.—A petition asking that the name of Theodore Roosevelt be placed on the primary ballot as a candidate for the Republican nomination for President of the United States was received by Secretary of State Walt to-day.

The petition is signed by Attorney John C. Yeiser of Omaha and twenty-five other voters.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 21.—John C. Yeiser, who filed the Roosevelt petition, declined to say whether or not he was authorized by Col. Roosevelt to file a petition to have his name put on the official ballot. He admitted, however, that he had been in correspondence with the former President.

"Under our State law," said Mr. Yeiser, "the candidate is not required to accept the nomination, nor has he authority to withdraw his name once it is filed."

The Nebraska Primary Law makes it the duty of the delegates to the national convention to vote for the candidate receiving the highest popular vote for President. This is a provision, however, like that under which the people instruct the State Legislature regarding Senatorial elections, which could not be enforced should the delegates see fit to disregard it, according to the opinion of local attorneys.

CHEERS FOR HERO CEASE WHEN HE IS ARRESTED AT FIRE

Detective Recognizes Him as Thief After Rescue—Stole Amid Flames Is Charged.

LOUD CHEERS greeted the brave conduct of Arthur Alloway, a youth who ran up the fire escape of a tenement house in Hoboken to-day and performed deeds of valor. He came down the fire escape ladder with two little children, one under each arm. He rushed up again and was gone a long time. When he came down, this is what he had in his pockets:

Five gold watches.

Two necklaces.

Many yards of valuable lace.

Miscellaneous articles of jewelry.

The hero had been recognized by a detective in the crowd as a professional sneak thief. He had seen an opportunity for business at the fire and grasped it. In Recorder McGovern's Court, when arraigned on a charge of robbery, he fell into an epileptic fit and was later removed to St. Mary's Hospital. Alloway gave his address as No. 14 Greenwood avenue, Richmond Hill, L. I.

The fire, at No. 41 River street, was smoky and spectacular, but not particularly damaging. It started in a stationery store on the ground floor of the building. Before the firemen arrived the tenants were grouped on the fire escape landings. Here was when Alloway seized his opportunity. He had the whole house to himself for a few minutes.

The Hamburg-American Line pier is across the street from the scene of the fire. Since the great dock fire of July 1, 1909, the Hoboken authorities have been extremely watchful of water front blazes. A mass of apparatus was concentrated on to-day's fire and quickly smothered it.
