

Walker, a bomb containing an explosive, with intent to kill said Grace Taylor, alias Walker, and knowing said bomb would explode and would said Grace Taylor."

Dickinson agreed to a postponement until Wednesday morning. He was then committed to the Tombs without bail. While awaiting arraignment Dickinson was very busy at the telephone. He called up the offices of the United States Motor Company and assured a friend there of his innocence. His conversations over the telephone were listened to by a detective. The prisoner refused to make any statement. He said he had told the police all he knew about the case. His father, after seeing Dickinson in the Tombs, visited Postmaster Morgan, an old friend, to consult with him about the employment of counsel.

Following the arraignment of Dickinson Elina Le Marre was taken by detectives from the House of Detention to the Coroner's Court. She was shaking as with a chill when she reacted to the Criminal Courts Building, although she was bundled up in a heavy fur coat. The Coroner simply took her name and history for the records and did not question her about the mystery.

She described herself as a "snob girl" from the Criminal Courts Building. She was taken back to the House of Detention. The detectives in charge of the woman would not allow any one to approach her.

MRS. TAYLOR TOLD HER BISTER ABOUT A QUARREL.
Dickinson and Mrs. Taylor had a violent quarrel on Monday. Tuesday, Mrs. Taylor called on the sister, Mrs. Evans, Wednesday and told of the trouble, saying she scratched Dickinson's face. Dickinson has a number of small scratches on his face and has admitted they were inflicted by Mrs. Taylor.

It was learned that Dickinson wrote a four-page letter to Mrs. Taylor on Feb. 2. It was written on "Hasty" stationery. It was an ardent plea to be taken back into the woman's affection. In his letter Dickinson wrote: "Give me one more chance. You call me a bum and say I have no money. I know I have no money, but I will work for you. I will always love you."

This letter was sent by a messenger with the request that it be given to the bearer. Mrs. Taylor's reply was a curt two lines, written with a pencil on a plain piece of paper in which she said: "If you know what is good for you you will stay away from my flat." The note was signed "G. W." Mrs. Taylor was also known under the name of Grace Walker.

The detectives found that Dickinson did not work Friday or Saturday. Upon receipt of Mrs. Taylor's curt note Dickinson proceeded to get drunk. That evening he met a woman and together they continued the spree until Saturday morning when Dickinson went to his room. He arose about 2 o'clock in the afternoon and went to Hooley's restaurant at Fifty-sixth street and Columbus avenue for lunch, afterward going to Mrs. Taylor's apartment.

DETECTIVES SAY THE WOMAN WAS AFRAID OF DICKINSON.
That Mrs. Taylor was afraid of Dickinson is borne out in a number of things, the detectives say. In a letter which Mrs. Taylor had often remarked that she was afraid of Dickinson.

When Miss La Marre went out yesterday Mrs. Taylor told her to call up and represent herself as Mrs. Taylor's sister, as she wanted some excuse to visit beyond Dickinson.

The discovery that the wrapper around the infernal machine came from Lett's store at No. 54 Barclay street, is interesting in connection with the discovery of business cards in Mrs. Taylor's flat which had been used by one J. H. Taylor, New York representative of the American Ignitor and American Fuse Company of Muskegon, Mich. This concern is now in the hands of a receiver, but its New York office was at No. 56 Church street, only a short distance from Lett's Barclay street candy store.

The Barclay street store is one which a man with an office at No. 56 Church street would naturally patronize. So J. H. Taylor looms up as a prominent factor in the infernal machine mystery, and a most mysterious factor.

NO TRACE YET FOUND OF J. H. TAYLOR.
No trace has been found of J. H. Taylor. That there is such a person and that he posed as Helen Taylor's husband fifty-two years ago has been established by papers found in Helen Taylor's flat. But J. H. Taylor, so far as the police have been able to learn, never lived with Helen Taylor at No. 103 West Fifty-seventh street, at which address she engaged a flat about three weeks ago. Dickinson was apparently the man of the house in the infernal machine street.

Besides Taylor, whose name was borne by the victim of the infernal machine, there is a Howard Walker in the case. According to Dr. L. J. Osborne of No. 146 West Forty-sixth street, Walker went to a sanitarium for some time in the Adirondacks about two years ago and probably died there. When Dr. Osborne first met Mrs. Taylor he knew her as Mrs. Walker. He never saw Taylor. It appears from correspondence found in Mrs. Taylor's flat that Taylor came from Plattsburgh, N. Y., and has a sister living there. He was at one time in the United States Army. Although the name of Taylor has been in the possession of the detectives since shortly after the tragedy they have been unable to learn anything about his recent movements or his present whereabouts.

It was reported to the detectives yesterday that Dickinson, while he might know nothing about building an infernal machine to be set off by an electric spark, had a friend named Miller who is employed in the experimental department of the United States Motor Company.

Miller was found at his employment by an Evening World reporter. He denied he was an intimate friend of Dickinson.

MAKER OF BOMB KNEW ALL ABOUT MOTOR ENGINES.
"I dictated letters to him a few times," said Miller. "He was only an acquaintance in a business way. I did not take lunch with him Saturday afternoon or any other time. From what I know about Dickinson he could not have made the machine that killed Mrs. Taylor. The police have shown me what is left of it. The machine made that machine was a skilled mechanic

LAWYER ACCUSES INSURANCE CO.'S OF HIDING FELONY

Bristol Says They Did So to Get Back Money Paid on Larkin's Life

KNOW HE'S A BIGAMIST. Larkin Refuses to Talk, Fearing He Will Lose Job With Metropolitan.

George R. Bristol, attorney for Mrs. Catherine Larkin, the first wife of William T. Larkin, who was supposed dead, but discovered married again and in the employ of one of the insurance companies on which policies on his life had been paid, declared today that both the Metropolitan and the New York Life Insurance Companies had knowingly concealed the fact that Larkin was a bigamist.

Larkin was found Saturday working as a watchman in the printing department of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. He had disappeared sixteen years ago. Eight years ago, without explaining a divorce from the first Mrs. Larkin, he married Miss Susan Kerr. About the same time he got a job with the Metropolitan company and has been with it ever since.

A year ago the first Mrs. Larkin went to the office of the New York Life to borrow a small amount on her own policy. She was informed her husband's case had been investigated by the company and the officials believed he was dead. At her own suggestion she collected a little less than a thousand dollars. With the New York Life Company's check she went to the Metropolitan company. The Metropolitan, satisfied by the investigation of the New York Life, paid her a policy of $500.

Former Senator Tully who is the general solicitor for the Metropolitan, refused today to answer in any way the charges of Mr. Bristol that his company had wrongfully and against the law concealed the bigamy of Larkin. Luther B. Little, the publicity man for the Metropolitan, said all his concern was interested in was to get back the money it had paid on Larkin's life.

Larkin, who was found Saturday by an Evening World reporter in his small office in the Metropolitan Annex at No. 46 East Twenty-fourth street, said he was told when the officials of his company were aware that he was divorced to go home and keep out of sight. When seen to-day at his home, No. 46 East Twenty-fourth street, he did not know whether he had been discharged or not. He appeared in great physical pain and in great fear of talking. In an unguarded moment he asked the reporter not to publish anything about him, as the Metropolitan Company would dismiss him. Last Saturday he told The Evening World that when his identity was discovered by the Metropolitan and New York Life companies he was told by Senator Tully to "keep his mouth closed." Since his first instructions and the occasion in last November when he was brought to the attention of Mr. Bristol to be identified by Mrs. Larkin No. 1, he said today he had not been noticed in any way by the Metropolitan, but left in a state of suspense, considering every day what was to happen.

He said he wasn't allowed to communicate with any one, but was told to keep absolutely to himself and not say a word to any one. Mr. Bristol, the officials refused to-day to affirm or deny his statement.

SAYS INSURANCE LAWYERS CALLED ON FIRST WIFE.
"I saw Mrs. Larkin, the first wife, at her home at Lindenhurst yesterday," said Mr. Bristol today, "and from what she told me of a visit several months ago from lawyers of the two insurance companies, I feel sure that they knew at that time Larkin had married again."

Mr. Peter, representing the New York Life, and William Luttrell, of the Metropolitan Company, asked her to sign some kind of a document. She refused, saying, "How do I know whether you are telling me the truth or not? I've been married or living with some woman."

"According to Mrs. Larkin, Peter answered sharply, 'You don't know that you haven't any right to say it. I know the man,' Mrs. Larkin replied. 'The insurance companies had no right to conceal the fact that he was married again. They have refused to show any one to question Larkin. When he was brought to my office to be identified I wasn't allowed to ask him a question. If they didn't want to hide something why were they so secretive?'"

"Another matter," Mrs. Larkin No. 1 says the officials of the New York Life told her a year ago, when she collected her policy, that years before they had investigated her husband's death and were then satisfied that he was dead. If that is so, why did they allow her to pay the premium for all those years? They even made her pay for the last year. What the Metropolitan did in regard to this detail I don't know. I am sure from the circumstances and the fact that he took the unpaid bills from her and told her to draw on him for money. He had paid much of the expenses of her life with Noble after the elopement and had been no less insistent than her parents that she must marry the man who had broken up her home. All these things made Mrs. Noble increasingly miserable.

HOW DOUBLE SUICIDE WAS PLANNED, MOTHER FINDS THE BODIES.
Noble and his wife left their rooms at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon. It would seem that they were then vacillating between a puff of the carrying out of a suicide pact. Mrs. Noble had sent word to her mother that she would be a guest at her home Saturday night. Before leaving she called a district messenger boy and entrusted to his care two of her three valuable pet Pomeranian dogs, Phine and Weena, to be delivered to her mother's home.

Mrs. Noble saved the two dogs to her mother's chauffeur. She was in and out of her mother's apartment all afternoon. She was last seen leaving about 8 o'clock. It was said at the Lexington apartment house that Noble never entered the place, but when his wife called to see her mother he would re-her elopement, when she began to realize the seriousness and helplessness of the situation into which her loneliness at her husband's home and her unhealthy fascination for the plumber's son had thrown her.

REPENTED AS SHE FORESAW COMING MISERY.
"There comes to all of us sometimes the knowledge that the law and religion are right," said Mrs. Suydam one evening after she and Noble had been found in an apartment at No. 42 West Twelfth street. It was one of the flashes of the eternal verities that came to her now and then. "What they say we shall not do we cannot do without suffering," she went on. "I have learned that. Also the wages of sin is death. It's worse than death—it's a hell of its own."

Behind the double suicide is the pathetic fact that Mrs. Suydam had tried a her boy and wanted her husband, Mr. Suydam divorced her. On Jan. 3 the divorce was made final. She had already turned on the telephone that night and talked hysterically. Two days later she was married to Noble in Jersey City by Edward A. Hanson Jr., a justice of the peace. It was all half-hearted.

Noble had lost his position with a vacuum cleaner company and had tried selling a patent extension telephone arm. She had $12 a week that her father had settled on her in 1908 when she married Suydam. Noble had nothing.

Scheme after scheme to make money all through. Some of them were visionary, some talked because Noble took only half-hearted interest in them. More than once they quarrelled because Noble was not working. She begged to chide him for being willing to live on her money. She lost confidence in him.

Mrs. White believed her daughter to be intensely unhappy in her life with Noble. She knew of her appeal to Suydam, just before the divorce decree became final, to take her back and forgive her. On Friday Mrs. Noble and Suydam lunched together at Mrs. White's home. He was kind and gentle with her, but made no sign of any desire other than to be formally polite. It was then that he took the unpaid bills from her and told her to draw on him for money. He had paid much of the expenses of her life with Noble after the elopement and had been no less insistent than her parents that she must marry the man who had broken up her home. All these things made Mrs. Noble increasingly miserable.

TRAIN STICKS IN SNOW.
Passengers Mourned Near Ithaca Speed Night on Cars.
ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Stuck in a snowbank night to ten feet deep, caused by the blizzard of yesterday, thirty persons spent last night on a train on the New York Albany and Lansing road between this city and Albany. The train leaving Auburn at 1 o'clock last evening became stalled in a drift near Mapleton.

A relief train was sent out and fared the same fate. Farmers served coffee and lunches to the passengers and many went to the houses of farmers for the night. Another relief train cleared the tracks this morning.

NEW YORK WOMAN FALLS FROM TRAIN, HOURS IN TUNNEL

Mrs. Frances Fraser Survives Perils and Is Found at Dangerous Spot in Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 5.—After having lain for four hours in the Pennsylvania avenue tunnel of the Pennsylvania Railroad here, Mrs. Frances Fraser, fifty years old, of New York, was found early this morning and taken to a hospital suffering from slight abrasions.

Mrs. Fraser said she was on the way from New York to Washington on the train that passed through here shortly after 8 o'clock last night. She said she was attempting to pass from one car to another, and as she stepped across the train gave a sudden lurch, she lost her hold on the side rail of the car and fell to the ground close to the track.

Mrs. Fraser said she at first lost consciousness, but soon came to. Several trains passed through and she prevailed upon the conductor to allow her to escape the wheels. The fact that she was lying close to the entrance to the tunnel probably accounts for her having retained consciousness. She was not missed from the train until it arrived in Washington, when the Baltimore police department was notified.

Mrs. Fraser will be able to leave the hospital to-day.

Banker James B. Forgan Sick.
CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—James B. Forgan, President of the First National Bank, is confined to his home here with a severe cold. He has been ill since his return from Minneapolis in January. Although he was inclined to express some apprehension, it was said by members of his family to-day that his condition was not alarming.

a trip to Brooklyn on an errand for her, and when he was gone she said: "I sent Billy away because I wanted to talk to you. I don't know how I am going to be able to go on living this way; the monotony is getting intolerable. I don't want to marry Billy. I realize that we cannot be happy."

NOBLE'S FATHER SURE THEY LOVED EACH OTHER AND WERE NOT TIRED.
H. M. Noble, father of young Noble, cried to-day that Mrs. John Jay White, mother of Mrs. Suydam-Noble, was responsible for the tragedy.

"My son's wife loved him," sobbed the white-haired old man. "He loved her. It was no long-standing couple pact. I tell you these young people were driven to what they did by the needling of Mrs. White."

"Mrs. White," Mrs. Noble to go back to her husband. She kept after her to go back. She hounded her. She was with Mr. Suydam a great part of the time, and she kept telling Mrs. Noble she had done a dreadful thing."

"Why, Fred and his wife were at my house all Friday and Saturday. I know they loved each other, in spite of all this talk about her being tired of him. She wasn't tired of him. I know the way they talked to each other before me. They were making plans for the summer. It's true my son's wife did want to kill herself, but her mother made her so unhappy."

Mr. Noble's eyes were red and swollen as he moved unsteadily around his place of business at No. 48 Tompkins avenue, Brooklyn. He has no one else to attend to his business.

"God knows I am stricken," he said. "I went to the house yesterday, but I couldn't look at my son's body. Oh, I talked to him when the thing started. I tried to dissuade him, but I couldn't do it. I tried to make him see it was a mistake. Yet, after all, they did love each other, but her mother would not let them alone."

"I am going to have Fred buried at Sayville, L. I. Yes, there's another of his family buried there—his mother. The funeral will be from the house with all this notoriety."

Estelle Noble, sister of Fred, said to-day: "Mrs. Noble, who was Mrs. Suydam, began divorce proceedings last fall. She drank carbolic acid, and for a time her condition was very critical. But she recovered and nothing was ever made known to the public of her wish to die."

"GET TOGETHER" DEMOCRATS

Brooklyn's First District to Form Unattached Organization.
A call has been issued to the Democrats of the First Assembly District in Brooklyn to meet at Court and Joralemon streets to-night at 8 o'clock to form "a get-together-association."

There will be an effort to form a club which will be a clearing house for all shades of democratic opinion, without any declaration of the club as a whole in favor of any particular district or borough leader.

Diving Venus Panama Model.
Charles R. Macaulay, the artist who has been commissioned by the directors of the Panama Exposition to draw the Exposition's official poster, has chosen Miss Annette Kellermann as his model for "The Spirit of the West."

The choice of Miss Kellermann has been ratified by the officials, and Mr. Macaulay will begin work this week. The poster will be in five colors, and it is expected it will require a month to draw it. The Messrs. Schubert, under whose management Miss Kellermann is, have given their consent to her posing, and she will receive no remuneration for it. Miss Kellermann is an Australian by birth, but her mother is a Californian.

Drops Dead in Brooklyn Subway.
Policeman Rupert of the Brooklyn Health Squad was on his way to Manhattan in the subway this afternoon. Just before the train reached the Borough Hall station a man about sixty-five years old sitting across from him tumbled and fell to the floor. Rupert carried the man to the platform when the train stopped and summoned an ambulance from Brooklyn Hospital. The man was dead when the ambulance arrived. The body was taken to the Adams street police station. Receipts in the man's pockets bore the name of C. F. Bouton, No. 12 South Oxford street.

Justice Goff Has Recovered.
Justice John W. Goff, who was stricken on with pleurisy five weeks ago and was confined in a hospital, returned to active work to-day, taking his seat in Trial Term Part II, where he was assigned. The aged jurist seemed in excellent health. He disposed of a long calendar quickly and set about the trial of a case early in the day. Justice Goff was halted many times on his way to the bench from his chambers by lawyers and friends who congratulated him on his recovery.

Canadian Historian Dead.
QUEBEC, Que., Feb. 5.—Sir James MacPherson Lemoine died here to-day at his residence, Spencer Grand. He was born in 1826 in Quebec, and was knighted in 1897 for his literary work. He was the author of several books dealing with Canadian history and ornithology.

Victim of Sleeping Powder.
The Coroner's Office has ordered an investigation of the death of Mrs. Nellie Davis, wife of Arthur Davis, a doorkeeper at Keith & Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre. Mrs. Davis died at Bellevue Hospital, where she had been since Feb. 1, suffering apparently from poisoning. Her husband believes she took an overdose of sleeping powder unintentionally.
