

T. ROOSEVELT JR. TO BECOME BANKER IN WALL STREET

That's the Report but Colonel's Son Says "I Have No Definite Plans."

It is reported that the firm of Herron, Gilson & Jenks of No. 40 Wall street is to have a partnership. According to this rumor, young Mr. Roosevelt has decided to desert the carpet business. He and his wife and baby arrived less than a month ago from San Francisco on a visit.

When a reporter called at the Hotel Gotham early to-day he was told that Theodore Jr. was not up, and the clerk declined to send in a card. At that moment, however, the young man himself came into the lobby.

"I don't usually get up this early," he said with a grin, "but Grace Green (that's his little daughter) called me earlier than usual and I decided it would hardly be possible to get to sleep again."

"Is it true that you are going to become a Wall street man?" he was asked.

"I have no definite plans," he answered hesitatingly. "I expect to return West in March for a while at least. What I may do later I don't care to discuss. I don't believe the public is interested in me anyhow, so I shouldn't feel like discussing my affairs for the public."

A reporter who visited the home of the senior member of the Wall street firm, Samuel R. Herron, at No. 46 West Fifty-fourth street, last night, found young Mr. Roosevelt leaving.

Mr. Herron was told of a report that young Mr. Roosevelt would take up a connection with the banking house and was asked if it was correct.

The banker hesitated. "Please don't say anything about that," he said. "Please don't say anything about it—just now."

"Why—well, no, it isn't altogether decided. Now, if you come to me in about three or four weeks, I'll tell you all about it. But it really isn't fully decided now."

Young Mr. Roosevelt was married in this city June 20, 1910, to Miss Eleanor H. Alexander, daughter of Mrs. Henry A. Alexander of No. 42 West Forty-seventh street. Their little daughter, Grace Green Roosevelt, was born Aug. 17 of last year.

They're Losing "Big" at Monte Carlo; Prince Is Doing Nicely, Thank You

CASINO-MONTE-CARLO

For Every Time Somebody Drops a Few Thousand in Casino It Plunks Right Into His Royal Highness's Trousers' Pocket--Just Like That!

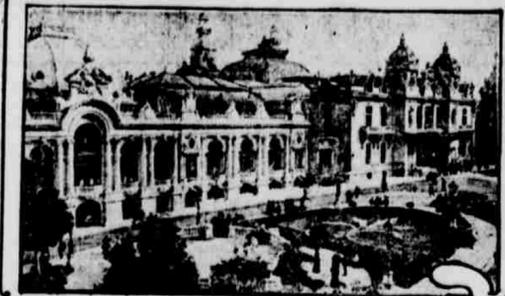

(Special from a Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)

MONTE-CARLO, Feb. 9.—The allied moths of America are swarming the principality of Monaco and fattening the bankroll of the shrewd and canny Prince, who by all odds is the master gambler of the world. This is the big season for the big players of every nation to gather in the gambling palaces of His Royal Highness and Americans are coming in like a never-ceasing stream of Jersey commuters.

The roulette and baccarat tables, however, are not the only attraction. It is the social season of the year, and then many have come to breathe the balmy air of the Riviera and to feast their eyes upon the classic landscapes hereabouts.

But the majority have not come for the beautiful air and the lovely view alone, as is amply testified in the fact that the management of the famous gambling palaces has issued 100,000 cards of admission to "guests" since the first of the year.

The writer managed not only to obtain a card of admission to the public gambling tables, but also, through the courtesy of the Societe des Bains de Mer et du Cercle des Etrangers a Monaco, the stock company operating Monte Carlo, managed to secure admission to the private rooms of the Casino, established a year ago for the nobility and the very rich, who do not care to brush elbows over the tables with their servants. Then there is the Monte Carlo Sporting Club, another exclusive adjunct of the big outfit, which is reached through an underground passage from the Hotel de Paris. The club runs throughout the twenty-four hours of the day and night, and when the open gambling palace closes at midnight it accommodates the overflow.

It does not take very close observation to ascertain that the 52 per cent. dividends upon the 10,000,000 of stock and the carrying charges upon 14,000,000 of bonds issued by the Societe des Bains de Mer, as well as the daily expenses of 100,000 francs, are not being paid out of the pockets of Americans by a tremendous margin.

Small merchants of France, wintering in the pensions of Nice, and clerks down from Paris on a holiday, share the expense of the whole proposition with visitors from Russia and Germany, Austria and England. Singularly enough, the nobility of England are strongly addicted to the gambling fever, crowding the private rooms with the hot-blooded youth of Russia and France. More than two-thirds of the habitual players are Americans.

AMERICANS DON'T LOSE THEIR HEADS WHEN THEY GAMBLE.

"If we had to depend upon Americans for our patronage, or put it, if all our patrons were Americans, we would have closed our doors long ago," said M. Blanc, a descendant of Francois Blanc, who founded Monte Carlo upon a prosperous gambling basis in 1857. "They are very cool when they are placing their stakes, look upon gambling as a whose yacht anchored in the harbor of Cannes close by, paid Monte Carlo a brief visit. Prince A. Dolgorouid of St. Petersburg, who figured as a friend of Lina Cavalleri in the winding up of the opera singer's marriage to "Sheriff" Bob Chamber of Dutchess County, has been daily at the private gambling tables since the season opened. His losses are said to be tremendous.

MANY NEW YORKERS HAVE VISITED MONTE CARLO.

Other Americans from New York observed in the beautiful grounds of Monte Carlo, this year, are Mrs. William E. Leeds, Mrs. J. H. Smith, Francis E. Drake, formerly associated with the late John W. Gates; Frank T. Ivelin, Admiral Rodgers, and Miss Rodgers, Mrs. Paul Morton, Mrs. Jefferson Seligman, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Carnegie, Dr. Charles Paterno, and family, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. E. Tuohy, Mr. A. Martens, Dr. Stanley Ward, Mr. and Mrs. S. Dana-Kittredge, Miss A. E. Edgcombe-Kittredge, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Partridge, Perovai Kuhn and Miss Kuhn, Mrs. Edward Cruise, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Fisher, Harris A. Elgar and family and many others.

Arnold Bennett and Haddon Chambers, both English writers of books and plays, and just returned from America, are centre of interest. Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Waterhouse, the St. Louis brewer and clubman, has been greatly in the company of Mr. Chambers. Then there has been Mastelink, the Hon. A. J. Balfour, the defeated leader of the English Parliament; Lord Falconer, Lady Waterlow, and a long list of titled men and women, and J. Pierpont Morgan, Ellis Wainwright, the Hon. A. J. Chamberlain for a half day on his journey to Egypt. The famous Ciro restaurant is now conducted by a popular former matinee de hotel named R. R. R.

GAMBLERS PAY ALL EXPENSES OF THE PRINCIPALITY.

The present Casino is a magnificent marble building, flanked with two towers 115 feet in height, surmounted by two elegant domes, and having one of the facades dominated a fine terrace overlooking the sea. Sarah Bernhardt and Gustav Dora decorated the large balcony of the Casino. At one of the sides is the private entrance reserved for Albert, the hereditary Prince of Monaco, who gets $2,000,000 a year for the gambling concession from the Societe des Bains de Mer, which does not expire until 1933. The Prince lives in a private palace at Monaco two months of the year, the rest of the time in Paris, where he has more trouble getting rid of his wealth than Andrew Carnegie. So this year he spent $2,000,000 of his annual rent upon his own people in public improvements.

No inhabitant of the principality of Monaco is allowed admission to the gambling rooms. An exception is made to members of certain recognized social clubs. Thirty-five years ago there were two hotels, and now there are more than fifty. Instead of eighty persons making a living through letting apartments there are now seven hundred. There are rates or taxes or customs in the principality. The losses of the players in the casino foot the whole bill—public works, road-making, police, schools, churches, and even the charities.

Within the last twenty years more than 10,000,000 strangers have visited Monte Carlo. The backing the wrong numbers has been the means of enriching and providing employment for thousands of people. Those benefited by the gambling have not played at all.

HELD UP THIEVES GETTING AWAY WITH PLUNDER

East Orange Cop, Not Trained in New York, Halted Burglars With Gun.

Policeman Thomas G. Ward, one of the new members of the force at East Orange, N. J., peeped into the kitchen window of the home of Mrs. A. E. Diabrow, a wealthy widow, early to-day and saw two men peering into suit cases what looked like the entire assets of a silverware shop. A candle dimly lighted the kitchen.

Ward waited outside of the window for the men to emerge.

When they came they brought three suit cases, heavily laden. The policeman drew his revolver and covered the men. They dropped the suit cases and with "hands up" were marched to the police station.

In the suit cases the police found $1,000 worth of silverware, several sealin garments and other valuables. The men had articles in their pockets that led the police to believe that they had operated in New York and other cities. A knife, with its blade so cut as to make it serve the purpose of a jimmy, a chisel and an iron bar made up their tools.

The men said they were Harry Connors, of No. 233 Wabash avenue, Chicago, and Harry Condit, of No. 74 Seventh street, Harrisburg, Pa. They were charged with burglary and Mrs. Diabrow will get all her property just as soon as she comes home.

P. S.—East Orange is more than ten miles from New York and the New York police don't look after that region.
