

NO DEAD ON CARPATHIA.

Countess Told That Three Had Been Buried at Sea.
 Countess Hotzhauser, Winterbottom and Hohenstein, and Countess' Physician Albert T. Weston were at the pier when the Carpathia arrived, but when they learned that none of the Titanic's dead had been brought into port they hurried away.
 Countess Winterbottom said that Capt. Rosemont told him two men and a woman had been buried at sea. He said that if any of the survivors die in this city White Star Line officials will be subpoenaed for examination.
 He added that Capt. Rosemont told him seventy-five per cent of the women saved had been viewed by the sinking of the Titanic.

 Waldorf Hotel Committee's Work.
 A relief committee from the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel went to the pier with blankets, brandy and hot soup originally intended for the relief of the fifty survivors who had rooms reserved for them at the hotel.
 This committee in charge of H. L. Stewart, manager of the Waldorf, rapidly turned their attention to all who came off the Carpathia distributing the blankets and food mainly to women in the steerage. Of those who had rooms reserved for them, attention is at the Waldorf now. The other went on the Widener special to Philadelphia.
