

21 DREADNOUGHTS WILL BE ADDED TO BRITISH NAVY

Admiralty Lord Tells Parliament Germany Must Be Headed Off in Every Move.

RIVAL ON WAR FOOTING.

Plans for Next Five Years Include Also Many Smaller Ships and Heavy Sea Guard.

LONDON, July 22.—Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, in introducing the supplementary naval appropriation of $5,000,000 in the House of Commons this afternoon, said the direct cause of the increase in expenditure on the British Navy was to be found in the new German Navy law, the main feature of which was the increase in the striking force of ships of all classes. The effect of the new German Navy law would, he said, be that nearly four-fifths of the entire German Navy would be maintained in full permanent commission and instantly ready for war. The First Lord continued: "Such preparation is remarkable and as far as I am aware finds no example in the previous practice of modern naval powers."

Mr. Churchill then announced the British shipbuilding programme for the next five years, saying that five dreadnoughts were to be constructed next year and four in each of the following years.

MUST MATCH FORMIDABLE FLEET OF GERMANS.

Under the new German law, the Admiralty Lord said, the ultimate scale of the German fleet would be forty-one battleships, twenty large armored cruisers, forty small cruisers and smaller craft in proportion.

"That will be an extremely formidable fleet," Mr. Churchill said, "and the only way to meet it is by cool, steady and methodical preparation prolonged over successive years."

"There is no use singing money about on the impulse of the moment," the First Lord continued. "The strain which Great Britain will have to bear will be long and slow, and no relief can be gained by impulsive or erratic action. We should learn from our German neighbors the way of the policy which marches unswervingly to its goal."

"The supplementary estimate to meet the extra German expenditure," Mr. Churchill said, "is only a small instalment and the new shipbuilding programme of the next five years will be raised to five vessels next year and four boats each year thereafter instead of three in 1913, four in 1914, three in 1915, four in 1916 and three in 1917, the number I had hoped we might stand at."

Mr. Churchill went on to point out that the increased fighting power of the German fleet involved the reorganization of the British forces in order that a necessary margin of safety might be maintained. The First Lord then announced that he intended to raise the number of battleships in full commission from twenty-eight to thirty-three by 1914. From 1914 onwards Great Britain will have three battleships against Germany's twenty-nine. This might not be considered a satisfactory proportion, Mr. Churchill declared, but, having in regard to the fleet what you need, and the sale prices will convince you that you cannot do better than to buy a plentiful supply.

Girl Disappears in Same Way as Dorothy Arnold

ment ring. She said that she would buy some shoes and some dress goods and that she would be home some time early in the afternoon.

Two acquaintances saw Miss Snodgrass as she was leaving Grand Central Station and begged to her, but she did not stop to converse. Since that hour—10 o'clock last Wednesday morning—all trace of the strikingly handsome Mount Vernon society girl has been lost.

When she did not return that night the Crider's grew alarmed, called in Mr. Schmidt, Dorcas's fiance, and began a search of Mount Vernon. On the following day Mr. Crider laid the facts of the girl's disappearance before a detective agency, as the family of Dorothy Arnold did in a similar instance, and the search for the missing girl was quietly pushed through New York. DID NOT HAVE ANY FRIENDS IN THIS CITY.

Miss Snodgrass did not have a friend, so far as her sister and brother-in-law know, in all New York. There was no place they could think of she might have visited. The tour of the hospital, where it was thought Miss Snodgrass might have been taken suffering from heat prostration, yielded no results. After all the remaining days of last week passed in the fruitless search the Crider's decided today to call in the Mount Vernon police and through them the force of New York detectives.

Dorcas Snodgrass is described by her friends as possessing the "striking" type of beauty. She is a very pronounced brunette, five feet five inches tall and weighing about 135 pounds. Her hair is a very dark brown and her eyes match her hair. Her sister said today that she does not know whether Dorcas carried any visiting cards or other aids to identification when she came to New York.

The only explanation for her disappearance that we can give," said Mrs. Crider, "is that she temporarily lost her reason, or her memory maybe, and that she wandered into some harm. Dorcas was happy in her preparations for our trip West, was whole hearted-by in love with the man whose wife she intended to be, and did not have a care or worry in the world."
