

BLACKMAIL HINT IN MRS. JENKINS' SUIT DENIED BY LAWYER

Mr. Marshall, Representing Millionaire Allen, Says Client Was No Dupe.

EMPTIED HER VAULT.

Now She Wants $218,000 for Valuables She Says Were Stolen from Her.

According to Lawyer Marshall of O'Gorman, Battle & Marshall, No. 37 Wall street, it is entirely untrue that millionaire Nathan Allen, who recently paid the Government a fine of $100,000 for smuggling and who has just been sued by Mrs. Helen Dwellie Jenkins for $218,000, is a dupe. He also denies that the millionaire paid over a million in blackmail to the Jenkins woman. Mr. Marshall, who is representing the Wisconsin leather manufacturer, says his client is in Europe.

"If any one says Mr. Allen paid so much as a half-cent blackmail to any one for fear of disclosure of any fact they are what is untrue," said Mr. Marshall. "The matter, of course, crops up at this time because of the filing of the suit by Mrs. Jenkins yesterday."

It was Mrs. Jenkins, for whom the Jewels were smuggled by Allen and John F. Collins, who exposed the smugglers. In her suit she says she once had a comfortable fortune, represented by her deposit in the vault of a Chicago bank. That was while she and Mr. Allen were friendly and when they went to Europe as a "family party."

ALLEGED ALLEN'S DETECTIVES TOOK HER SECURITIES.

Later, she alleges, Mr. Allen sent detectives to the vault and took her securities away. They amounted to $218,000, appraised as follows: Stock, $1,000; notes from Collins, $6,000; oil painting by Schreyer, $10,000; pearl earrings, $10,000; and a pearl necklace valued at $2,000. Her other property, Mrs. Jenkins did not explain. She told how it was removed and named the detective firm of Mooney & Boland as co-defendants in the suit.

When the relations of Mrs. Jenkins and the millionaire were cordial, she lived in style at the Hotel Loraine, and when in Chicago at the Hotel Stratford, in Michigan avenue. In 1909 Allen, however, learned of the relations and was instrumental in bringing about a break.

Then Mrs. Jenkins asserted that valuable jewels had been stolen from her apartment. Government detectives scouted smuggling, and since her friendship for Allen was over she told everything.

TRIP TO EUROPE COST HIM A FORTUNE.

Before meeting Mrs. Jenkins—or as she calls herself in the suit, Helen Paul Dwellie—the millionaire was attentive to business and to his wife and family. The trip to Europe cost him a fortune, outside of the possibility of blackmail. When he was summoned to appear before the Federal Grand Jury in New York, Mrs. Jenkins attempted to serve him with papers in her suit. It was decided he was immune from service because he had come at the invitation of the Grand Jury. This decision was later reversed and the present suit is the result. Should Mrs. Jenkins win the suit the acquaintance will have cost Allen more than $200,000. He paid fine of $100,000 on his indictment for smuggling, and settled a suit brought by the Government for $100,000.

The reason for settling the suit and the attempt at serving the suit was the age of his mother, who died several days ago in Kenosha, Wis., at the age of ninety-two, and her ignorance of the case. It is now believed Allen will show the hand he has been concealing and sensational developments are expected at the trial.

PIERRE LOTI COMING HERE.

French Author to See New Play, But May Write About It Too.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—Pierre Loti, author of "The Daughter of Heaven," sails for New York today on the French liner La Savoie. It is expected that Mr. Loti's heart, as he expresses it, may write something about it. What interests him most is the forthcoming production in New York of his play. Loti has been in Paris only a few days, and has devoted most of his time to eluding newspaper men. He will stay in America ten days or two weeks, less if he does not like his reception and American ways, and a longer time if he does. He sails alone, and after his American visit will go to Constantinople.

produced more great men than any other province in Japan.

ATTENDED FUNERAL, THEN ARRANGED SUICIDES.

The Countess Nogi was the fourth daughter of Yuchi Sadayuki, a Samurai of the Kagoshima clan. She knew the outside world from her experiences at Yassai, where she was graduated. The couple had attended the funeral ceremonies in the Aoyama Palace yesterday and then withdrew to their home at Akasaki. There they secretly made preparations for the crowning act of their lives. Both dressed themselves in the ancient Japanese costume, drank ceremoniously of sake from cups given them by the dead Emperor, left a sealed letter for the new Emperor Yoshihito and then sat down beneath Matsuhito's shrouded picture to await the signal.

Gen. Nogi's contempt of death was well known. His training to this end began when as a child his father carried him to see a decapitation. The child could not repress an involuntary shudder at the gush of blood which followed. For this exhibition of weakness he was severely reprimanded, and all the rest of the day was spent in reminding him in a hundred ways of what he had seen. Even the fruit he was given to eat was strewn with red juice.

In the Russo-Japanese war Gen. Nogi prayed for death. He was deeply chagrined when the sublime honor of dying for the Emperor was bestowed only on his two sons, but their loss only heightened the intensity of his patriotism.

When the first gun reverberated from the palace Gen. Nogi and his wife performed their sacramental act. He considered it his duty to the Emperor, she her duty both to the Emperor and her husband. London had not shaken the General's beliefs, nor Vassor those of the Countess. They fell dying and were discovered still gasping by a student who lived with them. Both were dead before help arrived. The General was sixty-three years old, his wife fifty-two.

Harsh as the act of self-immolation was forbidden in Japan in 1868, but the custom has persisted. Those professing to know say that more than 100 voluntary suicides of this nature are committed there annually, and the ceremonial process, the sab in the left side and the drawing of the knife to the right and upward, is part of the knowledge of all the gentry. With Gen. Nogi's death, it is recalled that during the Russian war, when hundreds of Japanese soldiers committed suicide rather than submit to capture, it was by the method of the sab.

The double suicide was not mentioned last night at the Carnegie Lyceum meeting in memory of the dead Emperor.

MAGNIFICENT ACT OF PATRIOTIC DUTY, IS JAPAN'S VERDICT

TOKYO, Sept. 13.—The dramatic death of General Count Matsuhito Nogi, the soldier-hero of Japan, and that of his wife, the Countess Nogi, who yesterday coincidentally with what was considered the supreme moment of the nation—the departure from the capital of the body of the late Emperor Matsuhito for its final resting place at Monoyama—mattered outside the General by gashing his throat with a sword and the Countess by hara-kiri is regarded by the great soldiers of Japan and by the general other countrymen as a magnificent act of patriotic duty.

But the nation being in the deepest mourning and the new Emperor being forced into seclusion by the death of his father, it is impossible to confer the

MOTHER WAKES IN TIME.

East Thirteenth Street Beauty's Brother Has Been Ejecting Youths.

Because he was not permitted to pay his attentions to pretty twenty-two-year-old Caterina Raffo of No. 524 East Thirteenth street, the belle of the neighborhood, an unidentified admirer is suspected of having attempted the death of the whole family early to-day by gas poisoning.

The Raffos, who are well to do and thrifty, live in a flat on the top floor of the six-story building, Pasquale Raffo, fifty years old, and his wife, Cristina, forty-six, occupy a bedroom whose only window is a 12d aperture into the hall. In an adjoining room sleep Caterina and Josephine, the latter nine years old, and in a third room the big brother Paolo, who is twenty-two.

Caterina has had dozens of suitors, which did not please her father and mother, and after a family conference recently Paolo, who is a husky lad, was deputed to eliminate the undesirable. This Paolo did. Some he fought with on the street, and two or three he threw down the stairs.

One, according to the family, was so persistent, and several were so violent in their threats that they would spoil the girl's good looks that for ten days pretty Caterina has been accompanied back and forth to work by her brother and would never leave her shirt waist factory in the evening until he came to escort her and interpose his big shoulders against any display of ugly temper by the one-time suitors.

MOTHER WAKES IN TIME TO SAVE FAMILY.

About 3 o'clock this morning Mrs. Raffo awoke with a choking sensation. She was barely alive enough to arouse her husband and help him stagger into the girl's room. The whole apartment was filled with gas. The mother and father were almost fainting, and the two girls were in only slightly better shape. The mother, awakened by the groans and confusion, fired his revolver from a window and brought Lieut. McCarrick of the Fifth street station.

While the family were being resuscitated by a neighboring doctor, McCarrick found that an attempt had been made at murder.

An intruder, gaining access to the hall, had cut out a small fragment from the little window and inserted one end of a piece of rubber tubing fifteen feet long, the other attached to a gas bracket in the hall. He had then stuffed the aperture with rags, turned on the gas and fled.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Raffo are recovering, and neither of the girls was found to be in serious danger. Detectives from the Fifth street station are cataloging Caterina's admirers.

MIKADO LAID TO REST IN THE IMPERIAL TOMB AT MONOYAMA

KIOTO, Japan, Sept. 13.—The last solemn function in the funeral ceremonies which began at Tokyo yesterday morning of the late Emperor, was the burial of the body in the imperial mausoleum at Monoyama.

On arrival at Monoyama the coffin was removed from the train and placed on a funeral palanquin for conveyance to the imperial tomb by hereditary bearers selected from the vicinity of Yase village.

Prince Kanin, representative of Emperor Yoshihito, together with the Princess, representing the other members of the imperial family, and Prince Fushimi, headed the procession which walked behind the palanquin.

Amid the offering of prayers and the chanting of sutras the body was then carried to the burial hall and placed in the tomb.

The imperial funeral train bearing the body of the late Emperor Matsuhito, which left Aoyama early today, following the conclusion of impressive ceremonies in the great funeral hall here, arrived at Kioto this afternoon.

During the 350 mile journey the train made several stops to permit the people of the country districts to pay their last respects to the dead sovereign. Thousands gathered along the route and bowed their heads as the funeral train passed. An imperial salute was fired by the Japanese warships in Tokyo Bay as the funeral train passed along the coast toward Yokohama.

The casket had been left in the funeral hall at Aoyama by the imperial family in charge of the Shinto rituals and representatives of His Majesty.

The second division, comprising almost exclusively Bohemian, Russian and Slavonic workmen, formed at Seward Park and joined the first division at Thirty-second street and Fifth avenue.

It was announced that John A. Wall, a wealthy candy manufacturer and cousin of District-Attorney Whitman, was to be Grand Marshal of this parade, organized by the Industrial Workers of the World, but at the last minute Mr. Wall changed his mind.

Out in the street before the Labor Temple was Rose L. Lewis, a pretty young girl who is secretary of the Lawrence Defense Conference, the busiest person of all those organizing the unwieldy divisions of the labor unions to line up before the start.

The second division, formed at Seward Park, comprised the United Hebrew Trades to the number of several thousand, and the women of the Ladies Tailors' Union and the Shirtwaist Makers' Union. Sol Metz headed this division until it merged with the one from uptown. Near the head of this portion of the parade marched twelve young men, holding a large canvas square between them which was designed to catch the offerings of the crowd for the defense of the two Lawrence agitators. Coins were not plentiful.

POOR PEWEE HE'S IN AGAIN

Nicholas Speranza, known to the underworld as "Pewee" because he is a midget in size, was receiving the congratulations of his friends in the West Side Court corridor to-day on being turned loose by Magistrate Cornell after detectives had been unable to prove that pawn-tickets stolen in his possession represented stolen goods.

Samuel Leavitt also gave out a translation of one letter written by George Teichmann to the Menschiks in Vienna under date of July 29 which read: "Your sister has disappeared. I will investigate it and report in a few days. Several times she told us about a lawyer who was a fervent suitor and wanted to accompany her on her trip to her relatives, whom he wished to meet."

SEEK TO TRACE $7,100 HE TOOK FROM BANK.

Agents of the Austro-Hungarian Consulate, which is trying to remove Joseph Zuckerman, another lodger in the house at 100 West 100th street, have learned the name of the bank in which Gibson deposited $7,100 of Mrs. Szabo's funds as executor.

He opened an account Aug. 7 under the name of "Estate of Susanna Menschik Szabo" and made three deposits—one that lay, one sent and one Aug. 13. He withdrew $7,100 of it—$200 Aug. 7, $500 Aug. 8, $2,800 Aug. 10 and $3,800 Aug. 13. There remains to the credit of the account $297. All the checks were made payable to "Burton W. Gibson, Executor."

They were signed "Estate of Susanna Menschik Szabo," by Burton W. Gibson, Executor, and indorsed on the back by Gibson as executor. The investigators have been unable to find out what was done with the money. Aug. 19 Gibson left the book at the bank to be checked, and got back with it. He checked, so the bank has traced the money for the Consulate has asked all banks to advise them if Gibson has deposited money in them. They will regard the information as confidential and believe bankers should take an interest in the case in the cause of justice.

Thomas P. As discreet as he is merry and as wise as he is tactful, his illness brings concern to thousands of his friends and neighbors.

Judge Dinnean was taken ill several months ago and took a long vacation in the South. He returned in a few weeks looking thinner than anybody remembered to have seen him before, but cheery and apparently quite recovered.

He had a relapse last Thursday, accompanied by a hemorrhage, and this afternoon his condition was reported as critical.

How he came to fall is not known. Joseph Zuckerman, another lodger in the house at 100 West 100th street, and found Parker at the bottom of the airshaft. Dr. Morrison took the injured mason to Brooklyn Hospital.

ENGLISH CHAMPION NERVOUS AND WEAK.

Forty-one back for both under such pressure was going some. Hilton, as at Chicago last week, was nervous and weak on his short putts, often making an impatient exclamation when things went wrong, something unknown to him last season. His direction, while better than that at Chicago, was not of stellar calibre. Naturally he was crestfallen for his usual level of play had been a failure after cutting a world swath last year.

HILTON IS BEATEN ON 19TH HOLE IN GOLF SEMI-FINAL

Englewood Veteran Player and Herreshoff Now Finalists in National Tournament.

(Special to The Evening World.) SOUTHAMPTON, L. I., Sept. 14.—Harold Hilton, the British golf champion, who was supreme on the American links last year, winning the National championship from Fred Herreshoff, met his second defeat for the season of 1912 to-day when he was beaten on the nineteenth hole by E. Morfitt Barnes of England.

Hilton started at a killing pace as if he was determined to snuff out Barnes at the outset and on the first four holes equalled the seemingly impossible par.

Barnes got a birdie 2 to the regulation 3 on the sixth and that started Hilton down the toboggan. He lost the Sheepshead Bay fishing fleet as commander of his yacht, the Nomad, wit, raconteur and known everywhere as "Tommy," is gravely ill at his home in Sheepshead Bay.

MATCH WAS SQUARED THREE TIMES.

Hilton had done 45 to 37 by the over all record and 45 for Barnes. The plot thickened when the two were paired for a match. Hilton's 5, squaring the match. Fired by his chances Barnes tore off the eleventh and twelfth in par 4, while Hilton took 5 on each. Then each halved the thirteenth in an excellent 3. Hilton, now thoroughly alarmed over being 2 down, braced himself and squared matters again by winning the next two holes.

Barnes was twice on the brink of disaster at the eighteenth. On his drive came within three inches of the edge of a deep trap. While upon reaching the green he was less than a foot from the edge of the sandy bluff that towers above Peconic Bay. Less than a foot more and the where would have plunged over, probably into the blue water. The hole was halved in 6 to par 5.

The extra holes Hilton got into the crevice at the rear of the terraced green, a miserable place to escape from. Barnes was at the side of the green where he had an uphill stroke. Hilton needed 2 more for the hole, while Barnes by great deliberation and steadiness holed out on his second, thereafter by getting a seven putt.

MERCHANT KILLED AT CROSSING BY FLYING EXPRESS

Julius Harris, a wealthy retired merchant of No. 33 Cleveland street Orange, N. J., was instantly killed to-day at the Lincoln avenue crossing of the Lackawanna Railroad when he got in the way of the South Orange express.

The gates were down when Mr. Harris attempted to cross the tracks. Two trains were approaching from opposite directions. The crossing is on a sharp curve, and as the man stooped and went under the gate he could not see either of the two trains.

The South Orange express had passed the Orange station above the crossing a thirty-mile-an-hour rush. A local train was heading for the station and had not begun to slow down. Mr. Harris crossed the westbound track and had stepped over the rail of the eastbound track when the express turned the curve and struck him. He was picked up by the cowcatcher and hurled through the air, striking against the side of the locomotive of the local train. His skull was crushed, his right arm torn off and his back broken. Death came with the first shock.

Only two days ago a woman was killed on the same crossing. It is known as the "Death Trap Crossing," and there has been much agitation in the Oranges recently to have the Lackawanna Railroad compelled to abolish all its crossings.

The latest victim of the grade crossing slaughter in the Oranges is survived by a widow and four children. There are two sons, Myron Harris, a Newark lawyer, and Dr. H. Harris. The daughters are Mrs. Tille Davis and Miss Mabel Harris. The father was sixty-five years old.

PIMPLES WOULD ITCH AND BURN

On Hands and Arms. Then Came in Blisters, Broke and Sometimes Bled. Nothing Cured Until Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

Rushford, N. Y.—"My trouble began about twenty years ago, by breaking out in little red pimples and running together just on my hands and arms. It would itch and burn and was very disagreeable. About one year ago it took a different form, coming on my face and hands in blisters. The blisters were on my upper arm and chest and were filled with water, would break and then sometimes would bleed. They were rather ugly. They itched and smarted and burned until I nearly went wild. I used various remedies but nothing seemed to cure them. I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I have not had any sign of the trouble since using Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I can surely give them a great recommendation." (Signed) Mrs. O. M. Persons, Dec. 28, 1911.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, moist and other unwholesome conditions of the skin.
