

THE MINUTE MEN OF ARMAGEDDON.

DAN HANNA G.W. PERKINS. FRANK A. MUNSEY

Senator Dixon swore that when he was "desperately hard up" he would appeal to Perkins, Munsey and Hanna for more money. He always got it.

Morgan Accustomed to It.

Senator Payner—Weren't you surprised that, after making the $100,000 donation, they wanted $50,000 more? Banker Morgan—I had grown accustomed to it. Senator Payner—Were they pleased at the $50,000 additional? Banker Morgan—Gratitude was rather scarce.

greeted the Morgan party with a handshake and a mild smile. The door was snapped shut while the financier and the Senator had a private talk. With Morgan as attraction the committee room was jammed an hour before the time for convening. Every seat was taken and a swarm stood outside in the hall, craning and shoving for a peek at the famous "Money King."

The Committee came in with Mr. Morgan at 10:30. The banker took a seat at the side of the room with his companions until he was called to the stand. He glanced around the crowded room nervously. He evinced some annoyance at being eyed by the crowd, which strained and gaped at him in a fever of curiosity.

Mr. Morgan was sworn by Senator Clapp. "John Pierpont Morgan, No. 29 Madison avenue, New York, banker," was his first answer to an inquiry. "On the second of September there appeared in the New York Times a statement by Charles Edward Russell saying: 'I now charge that Roosevelt commanded that J. P. Morgan raise $100,000 more in 1904,'" said Senator Clapp.

Senator Clapp read Russell's statement in full, including the allegation that Morgan talked over the telephone to Washington a half hour, and also the statement that Morgan called Roosevelt "that old man in the Yankee hotel." "Do you recall a visit with Wayne MacVeagh?" Senator Clapp asked. "I do not," the witness answered positively.

Q. Did you ever talk to President Roosevelt over the phone? A. I never talked with President Roosevelt so far as I can remember. That circumstance of the telephone conversation is absolutely made out of whole cloth. I never had any communication by mail, telegram or telephone with Mr. Roosevelt at the White House or with his secretaries either.

Q. Did you contribute to the Republican campaign in 1904? A. In October I contributed $100,000, and on the first of November $50,000 additional. Q. Did you contribute any more? A. No, not that I know of.

Q. To whom did you make these contributions? A. I assume to Mr. Bliss. I do not recall the actual payment, but my records show it that way. The payments were made in money. BELIEVES $50,000 WENT TO ODELL, HE SAYS.

Q. Did Harriman solicit any contributions? A. I don't think Mr. Harriman ever made any solicitation to me. The first solicitation was made by Mr. Bliss. I don't know who made the second, but I think it came from Mr. Morgan, stopped hesitatingly as though searching his memory—Well, Bliss was one of them; Mr. Odell was another. My impression is that the money was paid to the National Committee, but that a good deal of the $50,000 item went to New York, to Mr. Odell.

Q. How often did you talk with Mr. Bliss and Mr. Odell? A. I do not recall. Q. Did you talk with Mr. Harriman? A. Very likely I did. Q. Did you talk with any of the insurance companies about politics or contributions? A. That was a difficult question to answer. I suppose a thousand persons came to my office to discuss the political situation.

Q. Was there any conference at any time in 1904 touching the subject as to who should be supported? A. No, no sir. Q. When was it first determined that the interests of the country were being tried to the Republican campaign fund? A. I never conferred with anybody on that subject.

Q. Did you talk with Bliss about other subscriptions to the Republican fund? A. Very likely. I probably gave him some advice. Q. Was Mr. Odell's name mentioned? A. Possibly. I don't remember. Q. Was Mr. Bliss raising any special fund? A. That payment on Oct. 30 was promised long before.

Q. Did you know of any other contributions in 1904? A. I do not. Q. Did you make any Congressional contributions in 1904? A. I don't remember. Mr. Morgan read from a prepared list his account of contributions.

"In 1904 the only contribution I made was the $100,000 I paid to Mr. Sheldon," said Mr. Morgan. "The only memorandum I find is $10,000 in cash. I don't remember the details—whom or how, I'm only taking items I find in cash—paid in cash. On the 31st of October, 1904, was the item of $10,000. I don't remember any contributions to the Congressional campaign in the campaign in 1904. Mr. Sheldon called to see me once. If I did contribute it was moderate, nothing of any consequence."

NOT A DOLLAR TO PRE-CAMPAIGN THIS YEAR. Q. Did you contribute to the 1912 pre-convention campaign of any candidate? A. No, sir. Q. Did you associate? A. No, sir. Q. Or any one in your behalf? A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recall in the fall of 1904, any one in New York calling on you by phone, regarding a contribution? A. I do not. Q. You know of no instance, then, that could be the basis of this telephone conversation? A. I do not.

Mr. Morgan evidently did not relish the picturesque language with which Russell had described the alleged telephone conversation. During the reading of the article, with its descriptive phrases about a phone conversation which "leaked out of the telephone booth" and which suggested profanely, the financier looked extremely uncomfortable. All his responses were given in a quiet, even voiced tone.

Senator Oliver was offered a chance to question Mr. Morgan, but declined. Then the witness was turned over to Senator Payner. Q. You say Odell and Bliss were present at the 1904 conference? Was any one else present? A. Mr. Sheldon may have been there. Q. Was Mr. Cortelyou there? A. I don't remember. Several other persons were present. It was an exciting day. Extreme and unbecoming political remarks Payner's attitude toward the witness.

Q. Did the $100,000 represent a personal contribution? A. It was made by the firm; the $50,000 was made the same way. Mr. Morgan said the necessities of the New York State campaign provided his extra $50,000 donation. Senator Payner insisted on knowing whether Bliss or Odell sought this contribution to aid the National Committee. The witness said that was his impression.

Q. Was Cortelyou present at those interviews? A. I had a great many meetings with Mr. Cortelyou, but don't remember if he was present when I made the $100,000 gift. My relations with Mr. Bliss were of a very close character. When they wanted anything they always sent Mr. Bliss to me.

Q. Did you talk with Mr. Cortelyou? A. Yes, but we didn't talk contributions. Q. How often did you have conversation with Mr. Cortelyou in regard to 1904 subscriptions? Senator Pomeroy then took up the witness's examination. Mr. Morgan left the witness chair, so he could get right up close to the Ohio Senator and hear his questions more readily and sat there a while, within arm's length.

They Always Sent Bliss.

Senator Payner—Was Cortelyou present at those interviews? Banker Morgan—I had a great many meetings with Mr. Cortelyou, but don't remember if he was present when I made the $100,000 gift. My relations with Mr. Bliss were of a very close character. When they wanted anything they always sent Mr. Bliss to me.

No Record of Archbold's $100,000, Says Treasurer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—Former Judge Duell, who, in 1904 was assistant treasurer of the Republican national committee, in his examination by the Clapp committee to-day, said he knew of no contribution by John D. Archbold, under that name. He knew there had been several contributions of $100,000 each and that the insurance companies each had given $50,000.

Q. Did you know of any other funds which were subscribed to the Republican fund in 1904? A. I do not. Q. Do you know the amount the Republican National Committee was trying to raise? A. I never knew about it; I didn't know what they wanted. My interest was gone when I gave them my share.

ROOSEVELT RESTS AT SAGAMORE HILL AFTER LONG TOUR

Confers With Friends To-Night and Then Goes to Washington to Testify.

The Bull Moose is at bay—at Oyster Bay. Returning from his 10,000-mile campaign he expressed himself as feeling in the best of health—out of sight. He's kept out of sight all day and is taking the rest cure after the strenuous tour.

The program for the present is to have the Colonel leave for another tour on Monday. His itinerary will include Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin and Michigan. These plans are tentative and may be changed at to-night's conference.

Another 50-page magazine next Sunday. Don't fail to get it. Order next Sunday's World in advance. See your newsdealer to-morrow morning.

LEAGUE NOW BALKS AT ENDORSEMENT OF OSCAR S. STRAUS

Old Hearst Leaders Are Favoring Sulzer and Convention Takes a Recess.

The Independence League Convention, which met at Adelphi, N. Y., at 10 St. Marks place, this afternoon to nominate a State ticket, found itself in a snarl as soon as the delegates assembled. It had been supposed that the convention was to endorse Oscar S. Straus, the Bull Moose candidate, who has been much lauded in Mr. Hearst's newspapers.

Soon after the delegates got to talking before they were called to order persons who usually spread the personal views and wishes of Mr. Hearst in Independence League conventions began to circulate arguments against the nomination of Mr. Straus, saying that Mr. Straus had never distinguished himself by sympathy or approval for Independence League doctrine, whereas William Sulzer, nominated by the Democrats, had always been an eager advocate of Hearst doctrine and had done everything for the Independence League which he could do consistently with his loyalty to the Democratic organization.

YOUNG NURSE SOBS FULL CONFESSION AFTER YEAR IN JAIL

Older Mr. Devereaux and his son, W. B. Devereaux Jr., little could be done for Mrs. Devereaux, who was unconscious most of the time, and the nurse had many hours alone with the aged woman in her room.

Five days after the nurse's arrival Mrs. Devereaux died, Helen Watson at once packed up her belongings and left. In their grief Mr. Devereaux and his son did not give much attention to the state of things in the dead woman's room. When they heard of the arrest of Helen Watson they were informed that the young nurse had displayed dresses and jewelry worth $1,500 to friends after leaving the Devereauxs home. These, she had said, were the dying woman's gifts.

It occurred to young Mr. Devereaux that his mother, unconscious for the most part toward the end, could not have given the valuables to her nurse, of whose presence, in fact, she was probably never aware. He then got a warrant for her arrest, but the other charges on which she was sentenced took precedence.

When she was arraigned in Mount Vernon to-day, Judge Platt assigned Lawyer Maurice Zuckert to represent her. She will be sentenced to-morrow.

Strike Against Auto Trucks. CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—A strike that may eventually determine the attitude of teamsters in this city toward the auto truck was begun to-day when thirty drivers of the Chicago Consolidated Bottling Company refused to take out their teams. The company recently purchased six auto trucks. Union officials declare they want the work of the trucks restricted to the work formerly performed by one team.
