DETECTIVES GUARD GUESTS OF HOTELS FROM POISONING

Rich Patrons Frightened by Suggestions of Leaders of Striking Cooks. ASK AID OF WHITMAN.

May Prosecute Ettor and Giovanitti, Whom Police Will Watch at Meetings.

The hotel and restaurant keepers of New York are thoroughly in earnest, they said today, in their desire to have Joseph J. Ettor and Arturo Giovanitti, the Industrial Workers of the World agitators...

Charles J. Campbell, attorney for the Hotel Men's Association, had a brief conference with District Attorney Whitman today. Afterward he said he wanted to get affidavits from persons who heard Ettor advocate poisoning...

These rich men are many of them financially interested in the large hotels. The alleged speech of Ettor suggesting poisoning the food of millionaires has been taken by them, apparently, as a personal menace and a personal insult.

It was announced at Police Headquarters that hereafter detectives who are familiar with the language of the speakers will be present to listen carefully to all speeches of the labor leaders.

Senator Robert W. Archibald, guilty or not guilty of the charge contained in this article. The order adopted by the Senate provides that each Senator should rise in his place as his name was called and answer "guilty" or "not guilty."

Following the formalities, the clerk in a loud voice read the charge embodied in Article I. The spectators in the gallery leaned forward, whispering to each other.

Archibald's attorneys marking the ballot carefully as the roll went on. Attorney Worthington closely followed the roll and ran his fingers nervously over his face.

There was not a sound in the great chamber as the roll called the names. The Senators sat there in sharp decided tones and either almost in whispers.

Senator La Follette, when his name was called, rose and said for a moment, "guilty," he said, and when Senator Stewart's name was called, all heads turned toward him.

Following the verdict on the first article a murmur arose over the chamber and there was considerable disorder in the gallery.

Ettor and Giovanitti, Whose Advice to Cooks On Strike May Result in Their Prosecution

Joseph J. Ettor became conspicuous as an agitator during the strike in the Lawrence, Mass., mills last summer. He is twenty-seven years old and was born in Italy, the son of a chemist. He lived in Halifax and Montreal after he came to this country...

Arturo Giovanitti, who was acquitted of murder after the Lawrence strike, is thirty years old. He was born in Italy, the son of a chemist. He lived in Halifax and Montreal after he came to this country...

The fact that you laboring men are not in jail is the best proof that you have not done much for the cause of labor. Damn the capitalists and their system and damn the police department.

Ettor was a sheet-metal worker before he became a professional agitator. "The waiters in Paris won their strike by subtle means. Where in a certain relish a pinch of salt was required they put it in a handkerchief. Where a mere snuff of pepper was needed they put it in another handkerchief."

Many left their work in the best evidence that conditions in the hotel kitchens of New York are intolerable. We are not in a sweet temper. The men can hit the hotels by making the food unfit to eat...

Lawyer Charges Hearst Employees with Kidnapping. Moving picture Indians were to have fought with sturdy old New England forefathers at New Rochelle, this afternoon...

Arturo Giovanitti, the comrade and associate of Joseph Ettor, the agitator in chief of the Industrial Workers of the World, made a speech last night, in which he advised the striking hotel cooks and waiters...

"The waiters in Paris," said Giovanitti last night, "won their strike by subtle means. Where a pinch of salt was required they put it in a handkerchief. Where a mere snuff of pepper was needed they put it in another handkerchief."

Stewart said he threatened to sue the Hearst people for damages. Lawrence and Polachek laughed at him. "The men who kidnaped him," he said, "told him that his policemen exhibited what purported to be warrants and attempted to make him believe the Examiner office was a police station."

It was estimated the total damage would reach $150,000. A New Rochelle insurance man said that the Thanhauser company would have had difficulty in renewing their insurance on the plant.

At the request of Mrs. A. Ralsman of No. 73 West Eighty-eighth street, the police in the West One Hundredth street police station have sent out a general alarm for Kate Stefanski, eighteen years old, of that address, who disappeared yesterday morning.

HUNT WILD STEER WITH AUTO TRUCK ON FIFTH AVENUE

Bumped and Battered in Long Chase, Animal Is Finally Captured. BUTTS AT LIMOUSINE. Roped, Steals City Fence and Is Shot While Trying to Get New Start.

A roundup that had many features of the real wild Western article aroused parts of aristocratic New York before dawn today and gave a dozen or more policemen the liveliest time they have had in many moons.

The animal was wary, and made several laps around the iron fence over the tunnel between Seventy-second and Seventy-sixth streets before Policeman Fitzpatrick ran up and turned him north. The steer reached Seventy-ninth street ahead of the auto and gave them another chase around the iron fences in the middle of the street.

There was nothing in sight except a big wrecking auto truck. It was commanded, and Ed Barrett, the chauffeur, was told to see if he could overtake the steer.

The animal was wary, and made several laps around the iron fence over the tunnel between Seventy-second and Seventy-sixth streets before Policeman Fitzpatrick ran up and turned him north.

Knocked down, but just wouldn't be hog-tied. The animal next took a sprint through Madison avenue to Sixty-eighth street. By this time the autotruck was loaded with policemen, fully a dozen being in the chase, including several afoot.

The steer switched to Fifth avenue then, awakening people all along the line. At Seventy-fifth street the policemen in the heavy truck ordered the chauffeur to ram their quarry. He did, and the steer went down. One of the ten cops who jumped from the machine said he was an old cow puncher and would show them how to hog-tie the captive.

He sat himself down on the steer's head while efforts were made to get a rope from the truck. There was a series of still louder snorts and bellows, a straining at powerful muscles and the steer was on his feet again.

The policeman had forgotten his cow-puncher days, for the steer, true to its kind, had got up tall first, and dumped him to the street. Simultaneously it kicked Policeman Saylor in the stomach and sent him over to the park wall to recover his breath.

The policemen piled into the truck again and told the chauffeur to hand the beast another wallop. Barrett put on all the power he had and a second blow sent the steer over. Before it could recover a rope was tied to its neck. ROPED BUT NOT STOPPED, HE WAGN'T.

It pulled the other end from the hands of the policeman and ran another block. The police overtook it again and after some effort got it "hog tied" and threw it bodily into the truck, bellowing louder than ever.

When the policeman on the seat of the machine and a footguard consisting of others and divers curious citizens, the noisy procession went to the East Sixty-seventh street station.

Lawt. Howe ordered the steer tied to the fence in front of the station house, and its blattling time took the firemen on duty at Fire Headquarters next door out in the street.

Howe telephoned to every abattoir in the city, but no one had lost a yearling—so they said. About the time the last one was heard from the steer recovered his wind and made another break for liberty. The time he took the automobile concern's rope and part of the station house fence. The theft of city property was too much for the lieutenant.

When he saw the animal disappearing down the street with a part of the fence and noticed what a bedraggled appearance some of his best dressed men had, he ordered the reserves to shoot the enemy.

HELP RECEIVED JUST WHEN HOPE WAS GIVEN UP

Had Begun to Think that Nothing Could Ever Do Him Good. TONA VITA RELIEVES Peter Kelly, of This City, Tells How New Tonic Has Helped Him.

Experience is the best teacher in the world, but sometimes it is better and cheaper to benefit by the experience of others than to be experimenting your own.

Peter Kelly, of 200 West 42nd Street, New York City, made the following statement after taking a bottle of this tonic: "I had been ailing for some years. I was not so sick that I had to keep to my bed, but I was ill enough to feel run down all the time. I tried all kinds of remedies without any success.

"I had been ailing for some years. I was not so sick that I had to keep to my bed, but I was ill enough to feel run down all the time. I tried all kinds of remedies without any success. For a long time I realized that the only hope I had to enjoy life was to regain my health. But since neither the doctors nor the medicine afforded me any relief, I just gave up hoping.

"A little while ago I read about the new tonic, Tona Vita, and I purchased some of it. The effect was remarkable. After the first few doses I began to feel better and continued to improve each day. Now I can sleep well and can enjoy that I eat. In fact I can, for the first time in many years, say that my food agrees with me.

"I no longer suffer from that dull, tired, listless feeling which I had suffered from constantly since my illness first began. I feel more vigorous and energetic in mind and body, and know that I can work twice as well as I used to. "I know of several other people who are taking this new tonic and who are benefiting by it greatly. So far as I am concerned, it is the best tonic that I have ever used, and the only thing that has ever helped me.

Many others who are taking this new tonic have made similar statements. These people are those who are afflicted with the modern complaint, nervous debility, which is the result of conditions of life in the larger cities.

Owing to the strenuous rush of life nowadays, one out of every five of the population of Greater New York are afflicted with this complaint. They have uneasy sleep, little ambition and become easily exhausted. They suffer with timidity, have no initiative, are droopy, and listless, and have not enough self-reliance. Their nerves are impoverished to an extent that makes them imagine they are suffering from various diseases. That is nervous debility, and it is to conquer this condition that Tona Vita, the great national tonic, has been put on the market.

Tona Vita is now on sale at all druggists in New York, and any worn-out, nervous man or woman who takes this tonic for one week will certainly admit it is a wonderful preparation.

Thanhauser Factory at New Rochelle Burns as Production Is About to Be Staged. Moving picture Indians were to have fought with sturdy old New England forefathers at New Rochelle, this afternoon, but at three o'clock, when the battle should have been at its height, the Thanhauser film factory was a mass of flames from cellar to roof—a distance of one-story—and redskins and settlers were doing a fire-fighting act, with not a single idea to record their efforts.

The men who kidnaped him, he said, told him that his policemen exhibited what purported to be warrants and attempted to make him believe the Examiner office was a police station. Stewart said he threatened to sue the Hearst people for damages. Lawrence and Polachek laughed at him.

It was estimated the total damage would reach $150,000. A New Rochelle insurance man said that the Thanhauser company would have had difficulty in renewing their insurance on the plant.
