

AWAY PRINCESS GOING RIGHT BACK TO LAND OF CZAR

as Olga Puts It, She Will Return to "Prison of Stranded Ambitions" WILL SAIL THURSDAY. Royal Charge Consents to Plan After Talk With Friend From Washington.

"I'm going back to my prison of stranded ambitions. Probably I'll sail Thursday or Saturday for London. It's not my wish, but I'm going." Princess Olga Golitsina, who came to America to be an actress but was invited to go home by the czar, flashed in brief interview to an Evening World reporter at the Holland, No. 86 West forty-sixth street. She was going to more but a meddling "phone operator" urged the line out.

When the runaway princess reached the Holland at 10 o'clock Monday night from whence no one acquainted with her will venture to say, two men, presumably detectives, were dogging her steps. The young woman left a taxicab which drew up in front of the apartment house and walked in. She carried her grips and, darted into the elevator and was up to the third floor, where she had a room in the rear of the house. Detectives walked into the house a minute after she had ascended the elevator. One took a seat in the lobby and the other went out and camped on a doorstep across the street. When morning came he was still there, with his eyes fastened on the Holland entrance. The other man had left.

SIX MILITANTS SENT TO PRISON FOR CONSPIRACY

Miss Annie Kenney Gets 18 Months and Mrs. Saunders 15 Months.

LONDON, June 17.—Six of the most prominent leaders of the militant Suffragettes organization and one of their able supporters were today found guilty at the Central Criminal Court of conspiracy to commit malicious damage property. The trial had lasted several days. The women were officials of the Women's Social and Political Union and friends of Mrs. Pankhurst. They were Miss Rachel Barrett, Miss Agnes Lake, Miss Annie Kenney, Mrs. Beatrice Saunders, Miss Annie Kenney and Miss Laura Lannon, while the man was Edwy Clayton an analytical chemist. Justice Phillimore passed sentence on the militant Suffragettes as follows: Miss Annie Kenney, eighteen months; Mrs. Beatrice Saunders, fifteen months; Miss Rachel Barrett, twelve months; Miss Agnes Lake and Miss Laura Lannon, six months each; Edwy Clayton, the analytical chemist, twenty-one months. All the women were committed to the third division, which entails hard labor.

HOW TO BE ATTRACTIVE Sixth Article of a Series

"Unattractive Women Should Never Marry; They Are Better Off Single," Says a Reader

"While Women Are Progressing They Are Losing Their Charms, and When They Fail to Charm Men—Look Out!" Warns a Woman Who Signs Herself "Past Sixty."

Mrs. "P. R. F." Makes Herself Attractive by Giving Her Husband a Powder the Morning After He Has Had a Drop Too Much.

By Nizola Greeley-Smith.

"I am an old lady, and while I believe that the world is getting better and women are progressing, still they are losing their charms. And when women fail to charm men—look out! When a man agrees to pay a woman's board for life he must get out and hustle, and a woman should be lovable, charming and his 'pal.' Unattractive women should never marry. They are cold, unemotional, deficient in charm. This applies particularly to those of the mental temperaments. They are better off single."

"When the sun grows cold and the stars are old and the leaves of the Judgment Book unfold," women will cease to be charming to men and men will cease to monopolize woman's attention. Neither can I agree with the view that cold, unemotional persons should never marry. One might as well abolish the whole year should sizzle with its present fervor as to insist upon a race without cold and unemotional members. They are needed to strike a balance. But if our very interesting old lady really believes that brain power and charm are incompatible, she should study the lives of men and in history, and I think she will change her mind.

An old question is revived by the letter of another reader, a widow, who describes the wife he has lost as his ideal of feminine attractiveness and who proclaims his belief that "true love comes only once in a lifetime." I really don't know whether this is true or not. From the frequency with which bereaved men and women remarry, one is led to doubt it.

WHY ARE THEY BETTER OFF SINGLE? It is difficult to understand the point of view of a person who says "women of the mental temperaments are better off single." The brilliant man who marries an inferior woman deliberately cuts in half the intellectual inheritance of his children, and the masculine tendency to prefer brains to beauty when both are not attainable in a wife has of course a depressing effect on the intellectual average.

There is a good old tradition, of course, that woman is merely the aftermath of creation; that such brain as she has should serve merely as a sort of intellectual chaperon for the heavier, more stimulating mind of the male. Our interesting Vice-President put this view to some girl graduates the other day when he announced to them that "woman was created to co-ordinate the mind and heart of man."

men by their charms, but they do not let men know it. PAST SIXTY. MAKES HERSELF ATTRACTIVE BY USING A TYPEWRITER. Dear Madam: If you care to hear the opinion of a happily married woman on how to be attractive, you may peruse my offering.

I have been married seven years. My husband is a darling. He gives me practically full charge of his finances—meaning that I know his income and how it is spent. The amount I spend on clothes he never questions, and I have a beautiful home, with nothing to do but what I choose. Now, here is what I choose to do: I devote my time to my husband and our home. I mend his underwear, cook our breakfasts, attend to the buying of all his clothes, with the exception of his suits; and as he has a rather extensive business, I asked him to send a typewriter to my home that I might have the pleasure of his company on days when the only demand on his time was the writing of letters. Yes, he has a stenographer in his office, but why not spend the day with me, an amateur, and as he has a good education, and am only too glad to be of service to him? In return, he has banked all our savings in my name, thereby proving his confidence in me. He is a golf fiend if ever there was one, but I do not begrudge him his pleasure, and when he comes home at 8:30 P. M. instead of 4 P. M., I have dinner ordered and waiting for him. If he has had one highball too many I give him a powder the following morning. We are happy beyond words. P. R. F.

ATTRACTIVE BECAUSE SHE WAS A TRUE WIFE. Dear Madam: I had the good fortune to be happily married to a woman who knew how to be attractive. I have not known before or will again experience perfect happiness, except during the five years she was left with me. Though only a few years in the country, she made $25 a week as an expert on infants' wear, etc., which position she gave up to be nearer that amount at the time. She combined all the best qualities of her race, with none of her failings. A true wife and devoted mother. The longer she is dead the more I miss her, and the more I realize that it would be impossible to replace her, as true love, only comes once in a life; and if either one of the lovers die the living one should bear his or her cross during the remainder of life, no matter how hard that cross is to bear. Devotion, "the last love of woman," I had on her deathbed. What more can any man ask for? No long as the world produces such women there is no fear for the race. WIDOWER.

Out of Work, He Ends His Life. Despondent over his futile three months' search for work as a knitter, Morris Gottesman, twenty-six years old, of No. 116 Attorney street, shot himself through the heart early to-day. He was found by Mrs. Philip Cohen, with whom he lodged, when she went to see why he was so burning.

Views of a Woman Who is Sixty Years Young. Dear Madam: I am an old lady, and while I believe that the world is getting better and women are progressing, still they are losing their charms. When women fail to charm men—look out! When a man agrees to pay a woman's board for life he must get out and hustle, and a woman should be lovable, charming and his "pal." Women should cultivate charm, for it is woman's greatest weapon. It is surprising to see the amount of single men who are confirmed bachelors. Some unattractive women should never marry anyhow. They are cold, unemotional, deficient in charm; this applies particularly to those of the mental temperaments. They are better off single. Clever women can always re-

SLEEPING BEAUTY ON PARK BENCH A WOULD-BE SUICIDE

Richly-Gowned Woman Is Found Unconscious in Washington Square. STUDIED FOR STAGE. Despondent Because Penniless, Says Woman Who Helped Ambitious Girl.

Patrick Brannigan, a laborer in Washington Square Park, stopped and stared in open mouthed wonder at 8 o'clock this morning at what he saw on one of the benches on the north side, near University place. It was a beautiful woman, apparently asleep.

Brannigan has been many years in the park, and is familiar with the down-and-outs who make it their summer lodging apartments. But nothing like this had he ever seen. The woman was young and handsomely dressed. She wore a black satin skirt, a blue broadcloth coat and a little black chipped straw hat. A string of pearls hung about her neck. The old man was nonplused. He didn't like to awaken the sleeper and he knew that if she were left alone some of the regular tenants of Washington Square's out-of-door dormitory might not be so kind. Hiding one of the occupants of another bench to keep an eye upon the sleeping beauty, Brannigan went on his way. But the girl was on his mind. He couldn't fathom the mystery of her appearance in such a place, and he returned in ten minutes.

VIAL FALLS FROM SKIRT; REVEALS SUICIDE ATTEMPT. The woman had slipped from the bench to the ground, and as Brannigan bent over her, a vial fell from the folds of her skirt to the ground. It had contained a 5 per cent. solution of carbolic acid.

Brannigan sent one laborer for a policeman and another to send in an ambulance call to St. Vincent's Hospital. He himself ran for a milk wagon which he saw just outside the park. He grabbed two bottles of milk. Without ceremony, he opened the mouth of the unconscious woman and poured milk down her throat. He had expended nearly all the contents of both bottles when Policeman Rich of the Mercer street police station arrived and at his heels came Dr. Riley with the ambulance from St. Vincent's Hospital.

He Contends Claims Which He Never Made Were Attributed to Him. Dr. Friederich Frans Friedmann, who came to this country in January to exploit his method of treating tuberculosis with a vaccine compounded from cultures taken from a turtle, sailed on his way to his home in Berlin to-day on the Kaiser Wilhelm Lloyd line. He gave out to reporters a typewritten statement which was in part as follows:

"I originally intended to leave this country much earlier, but circumstances kept me here. A great many exaggerated and extravagant claims have been imputed to me which I never made. The actual claims I make for my remedy and treatment are contained in a report submitted by President Taft to the Senate of the United States (Washington Government Printing Office, Jan. 13, 1912).

"I repeat those claims word for word and I have no doubt that the medical fraternity will acknowledge and recognize them. "I am thankful for the courteous shown to me here, and am only sorry that when I first arrived, not knowing the language and customs of the country, I came into bad hands, but I am pleased to state that I leave my treatment here in the best of hands, in the hands of those who will follow the work from a scientific standpoint.

"There has not been time to prove all my claims, and of course, I do not consider any of the cases I have treated in this country closed, the statements of certain members of the medical profession notwithstanding." Dr. Friedmann said that Dr. Mannheim's report of the patients treated under his supervision—though he said he did not care to mention the physician by name—was of no value. The Mannheim patients, he said, had only one treatment out of the two or many more which were essential. He asserted that every patient who had been instructed by physicians here who had been instructed in the Friedmann method.

SHERBROOKE, Quebec, June 17.—Mrs. Theodore Bloudeau was killed and Miss Bloudeau, her sister-in-law was wounded to-day by a bomb received through the mails. The house was wrecked. The package arrived about noon and the two women were bending over it, untying it string, when it exploded. A search of the room revealed pieces of a letter which had evidently been inside the package containing the bomb. The writing upon these pieces is in French.

ROYALTY AND COURT DRIVE IN STATE TO SEE ASCOT'S RACES

Entire Course Under Surveillance to Prevent Raid of Suffragettes. LONDON, June 17.—The Ascot Station, the 12,000 crowd of the royal race meet at Ascot Heath was won this afternoon by Lord Carnarvon's Royal. The Suffragette's Comet was second and St. Martin's Juniper was third. Twenty-two horses ran, including one from the King's stable and several horses owned by Americans.

The Ascot season opened to-day amid scenes of great brilliancy, King George with Queen Mary and the entire court driving in state from Windsor Castle. In open carriages drawn by six horses, with footmen in the historic Ascot livery and scarlet coated grooms, they majestically and their entourage made the six-mile journey through Windsor Great Park.

The royal entourage was patrolled by elaborately gowned women and sprightly attired cavaliers. In view of last year's scandal involving the sale of tickets to sporting social circles, and the possibility of suffragette raids on the racing, the entire course was under rigid police surveillance, and entrance to the enclosure was rigorously controlled. Nothing so negligible as a straw hat may be worn at Ascot, with hats and morning coats being necessary. Every person admitted to the enclosure had to pass the scrutiny of two or three of the Lord Chamberlains, as well as numerous Scotland Yard detectives. St. Hulton's Sea Gun was the Gold Vase trophy, carrying $5,000 each. St. Hulton's Sea Gun was second and St. Hulton's Sea Gun was third.
