NEW LONDON, Conn., June 20.—Harvard's varsity eight rowed away from Yale on the Thames this afternoon, scoring the third straight win of the day with the utmost ease. It was such a crushing defeat for the Blue that no doubt English coaches will be tabooed at New Haven in the future.

Harvard and Yale varsities came to the start and lined up to the point at 3.35.

The referee's boat ran down river a little way to chase away a launch that was running near the course. Yale's boat had the outside course at the start. Harvard lying close to the west shore. While the crews waited patiently the referee's launch circled a quarter of a mile up river and turning drifted slowly toward the starting point. The sun was shining, not even a breath of air stirred the burnished surface of the river.

CREWS LEAVE STARTING POINT ALMOST ON A LINE.

The smoke from the locomotives on either shore rose straight up and slowly dissipated in thin air. Across the silent river from side to side dotted the long cheers of Harvard and Yale rowers in the observation train. At last the official launch came down to the mark. The crews grew silent. Silence followed. One could have heard the buzzing of a mosquito.

Across the river floated a faint pistol pop, a sudden splashing and both crews were away from the mark together. Both stroked 26 at the start as they swept down to the half mile flag, bow to bow, neither with an inch advantage. Harvard increased the clip to 25. Yale was still doing 24.

After the half mile mark Harvard began pulling slowly ahead an inch at a time. It was only by a yard or two. At the mile the crimson had made it ten feet. A moment later it was half a length. Harvard settled down to a steady 26 to Yale's 25 and the Cambridge boat walked away faster. At a mile and a half Harvard had over a length and a quarter further on had made it two. It was a walk away, a demonstration of speed and skill that will encourage American college to stick to good old American methods.

YALE'S ROWING METHOD APPEARED TO BE OUTGLASSED.

At two miles Harvard was speeding up a little, and the poor Blue was splashing along three full lengths behind. The referee's boat had an outside

U. S. NAVY AVIATOR KILLED IN PLUNGE OF 1,600 FEET

Airship Collapses and Ensign Billingsley Drops Into Chesapeake Bay.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 20.—Ensign William D. Billingsley of Mississippi was instantly killed to-day and Lieut. John H. Towers of Georgia was injured seriously when the biplane in which they were manoeuvring over Chesapeake Bay, in the vicinity of Kent Island, collapsed and threw both men into the water.

JUMPS FROM BRIDGE ON DARE OF FRIEND.

Policeman Stepat was on the roadway under Washington Bridge this afternoon when he saw a man pose on the parapet of the bridge and dive into the river. Stepat rushed for a boat and rowed out toward the man, who had whirled over an over before he struck the water, but who had risen at once and had begun to swim. As Stepat pulled him into the boat the man kept exclaiming hysterically: "They said I didn't have the nerve, but I showed them."

There was a cut on the man's head and his body was bruised, but Dr. Culluso, who came from Fordham Hospital, said there was nothing else the matter with him and he was looked up in the Highbridge station.

DR. MAYO TELLS OF CANCER CURES; 378 OUT OF 1,000

Expert Also Describes Results in Giving Relief to 246 Other Persons.

ROCHESTER, Minn., June 20.—"Cancer is curable!" This was the assertion reported to-day by Dr. William J. Mayo, following his talk on treatment of cancer of the stomach made before the American Medical Association in Minneapolis on Wednesday.

In his address before the association Dr. Mayo ran counter to the accepted theory of the medical world. "After eighteen years of special investigation of cancer of the stomach we are assured that it is a curable disease. Nearly one-third of all cancers occur in the stomach, so our investigation proves that cancer is a curable disease.

PAID 10 POLICEMEN GRAFT, SAYS HEAD OF ROBBER GANG

Confesses Thefts of Many Trucks With Goods and Says He Shared Proceeds.

DETECTIVE GO-BETWEEN Negotiated Return of $3,000 Loot, Says Rader, Then Held Out $500 Reward.

Before Rader of No. 130 South Second street, Brooklyn, who has been awaiting sentence upon conviction on a charge of having stolen a truckload of goods from the Burns Express Company, completed before Judge Swann in the Court of General Sessions this afternoon a lengthy confession which sets forth in great detail the criminal alliance Rader says he had with policemen and Central Office detectives.

Between seven and ten such police officers are named in Rader's confession, which was sworn to before Assistant District Attorney Moscovitz and Judge Swann in the latter's chambers. The statement made by Rader specifies the names of the policemen and detectives, gives dates, instances and the amounts of blackmail he was forced to pay to his protectors on each occasion.

KEPT "FENCE" UNDER PROTECTION, HE DECLARES.

The Assistant District Attorney has been several weeks verifying and preparing for criminal prosecution the police named in Rader's exposition of his criminal alliance. Not until verification of nearly all the details in the thief's story was made did Mr. Moscovitz make public to-day the completion of the task before Judge Swann. The confession covers seven typewritten pages.

Rader says that for a long time he has been at the head of a gang of youths who stole for him and that he, occasionally, turned a trick himself. He had a store on the east side where all stolen property was taken and from which it was sold under the protection of the police. He and his gang confined themselves only to big jobs, such as driving off with whole truckloads of merchandise and encircling the horses and harness.

The American Woolen Company, Marshall Field & Company, the George Borgfeld Novelty Company and other big wholesale and retail firms were listed in Rader's confession as having been the victims of his enterprises.

Rader cited the theft of a truckload of goods, valued at $10,000, from one firm. He said he had to pay a Headquarters detective $150 to avoid arrest after the theft had been traced to him. In another instance cited when a truckload of goods consigned to the Cleveland Dental Company and worth $2,000, was stolen by one of Rader's agents and taken to his store at Columbus and Livingston streets, Rader had difficulty in selling the stolen stuff because of its peculiar character. Out of that difficulty arose a novel experience with the police.

SAYS DETECTIVE GO-BETWEEN HELD OUT ON REWARD.

A reward of $500 was offered for the goods. Rader read of the reward and, not daring to claim it himself, told a detective of his possession of the goods. The detective, who is named in the confession, went to the Cleveland Dental Company, verified the offer of the reward and then brought back to them the stolen goods.

He got the $500 and he refused to "split 50-50" with the thief. Rader says in his affidavit that he was not allowed to "do business" unless he paid preliminary hush money to the police who had their eye on him and that often he would have to pay more after he had "pulled off" a robbery. Some of the youths in his employ were stool pigeons, he said, and even his brother, Moe, was a stool pigeon who made his headquarters at the Clinton street police station.
