LAMAR DID DRAW RESOLUTION FOR STEEL INQUIRY

Secretary of the Anti-Trust League Admits It to the Lobby Hunters.

DIDN'T TELL STANLEY.

Talk in Washington of Asking Whitman to Take Up the Matter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 8.—While the Senate lobby committee has decided that there is no law under which it can cause the punishment of David Lamar, known in some quarters as the "wolf of Wall street," for his impersonation of and misuse of the names of members of Congress, it was stated today that the attention of the New York prosecutor would probably be called to Lamar's amazing story. There is a law, passed by the New York Legislature at its last session, which may be brought into operation against Lamar for his circulation of the charges that the Union Pacific books were falsified to the extent of $2,000,000. Lamar is still in this city, but Chairman Overman of the Senate committee said today that he would probably not be recalled unless Edward Lauterbach, when called again, relates something on which the committee desires enlightenment.

LAUTERBACH WILL BE AGAIN ON STAND NEXT WEEK.

Lauterbach was to have been today's star witness, but when the committee met a telegram from him was read. He stated that he had not received the order of the committee to return here until this morning and that it would be impossible for him to testify until next Tuesday.

Lewis Cass Ledyard was recalled by Senator Walsh to explain what he meant when he told Lamar, posing as Congressman Palmer, that the man who was behind Lauterbach.

"I mean Lamar," replied Ledyard. The witness said that he meant Lamar also when he told the pseudo-Palmer that he knew who had secured the introduction of the Stanley steel investigation resolution.

Ledyard said Lamar had shown the resolution to Henry P. Davison and Judge Gary of the Steel Corporation. Henry B. Martin, secretary of the Anti-Trust League, was then sworn. He said that his work consisted principally in efforts to secure enforcement of all anti-trust laws.

Senators gave Martin a lively examination in an effort to disclose what the "anti-trust league" was and who composed it. Martin testified that H. L. Lockwood of Oklahoma, was originally its president; he was secretary; Carter T. Bristle of this city, was treasurer, and Herman Schultze, also of Washington, was counsel. At one time the "league" depended on Attorney-General Monett, of Ohio, for legal advice, he said.

Martin declined to give names of the league's members, because they would suffer "the anger of the great trusts, who would ruin, blacklist them and secure their discharge from employment."

Martin also declined to disclose the expenditure of about $50,000 by the league, on the same grounds.

"Did Lamar draw resolution for steel trust inquiry?" Further questioning brought out that David Lamar in 1908, when the Wickert-Ham Railroad law amendments were before Congress, had supplied arguments and information that Martin presented to members. Martin thought such information had led to the striking out of the sections to immunize railroads from prosecution.

"Did Lamar prepare the draft of the resolution for the investigation of the steel trust?" demanded Senator Cummings.

"It is my recollection that I asked him to prepare it," said Martin. He added that he had no specific arrangement with any member of Congress for its introduction.

"Was this resolution used in New York as a basis for an attempted reconciliation between Edward Lauterbach

(Special to The Evening World.) PHILADELPHIA, July 8.—The Giants scored two runs in the eleventh inning today, making it four straight games from the Phillies. Herzog's double, Meyers' single followed by Snodgrass' bunt and then a wild toss by Dolan did the damage.

John McGraw watched the final struggle of his champs against the Phillies this afternoon from a box seat in the grand stand, a condition brought about by President Lynch's unique decision in which he found Pitcher Brennan guilty, but also put the Giant manager down for five days. McGraw is highly indignant and says he has been unfairly treated.

"If I was guilty," he asks, "why didn't he fine me as he did Brennan? If I am innocent, which I most assuredly am, I should have been exonerated."

The suspension means that I must miss six games while Brennan will not miss but one, as a pitcher's services are not needed more than once in five or six days. In this decision the innocent party has to suffer the most. There was no need for a compromise in this case. Mr.

BROKER J. T. SILLS HAS HIS WILL MADE THEN KILLS SELF

Writes a Letter to His Lawyer Directing Him Where to Look for His Body.

SUICIDE WAS WEALTHY.

Corpse Found on Staten Island, Where Silks Had Shot Himself.

John T. Silks, a wealthy retired real estate broker of No. 119 East Sixth street, went to the office of his long time lawyer and friend, William Wix Waley, at No. 27 William street, early yesterday. "I have come in to have you draw up a new will for me," he said, and spent considerable time with his attorney, providing for the minute distribution of his large estate, waiting until the document had been drawn up, signed and witnessed.

When the first mail was delivered to him today Mr. Waley found a letter from Mr. Silks. The postmark on the envelope showed that it had been mailed from a letter box near Mr. Waley's office within a few minutes after the signing of the will.

In the letter the wealthy broker told his attorney that he was tired of life; that suffering had broken him down, and that he intended to end his life. He directed the attorney to proceed to a designated spot in the woods of the Silks estate, near Amboy, Staten Island, where he wrote, his body would be found.

Mr. Waley hurried to New Brighton and hastily found Coroner William H. Jackson, to whom he disclosed the contents of the letter. The two men entered the Coroner's automobile and drove hurriedly to the woods where Mr. Silks had said his body would be found.

At the very spot where the broker has indicated, they came upon his corpse. He had shot himself twice, the first bullet striking him in the back of the head and being deflected, inflicting only a serious scalp wound. Then, though apparently suffering great pain, Mr. Silks had placed the pistol against his breast and fired again, the second bullet piercing his heart and causing instant death. The body had been lying in the woods all night.

At the direction of Coroner Jackson the body was removed to Reddell's Morgue, in Tottenville, S. I., to await word from the dead man's relatives. Mr. Waley was so excited that he could not tell the Coroner anything of the dead man's relatives or friends.

The suicide took place shortly after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. At that hour Mr. Silks entered the hotel of P. C. Bamberger on the Amboy road and spent a few minutes conversing with Mr. Bamberger, whom he had known for years. At that time he seemed to be in the best of spirits and announced that he had come down to spend a few days in his country home. He left the hotel, going in the direction of the spot where he ended his life.

Mr. Silks, whose wealth is said to have been very large, occupied a suite of rooms in the home of Dr. C. D. Kennedy, a dentist of No. 119 East Sixth street, taking all his meals and spending a major portion of his time at the exclusive Metropolitan Club, at Fifth avenue and Sixth street.

"Mr. Silks was seriously injured in an automobile accident on Long Island about two years ago," Dr. Kennedy said, "losing his arm and receiving a fracture of the skull, which undoubtedly led to mental depression."

Mr. Silks was never married. He is survived by a brother, whose address was not known to Dr. Kennedy or at the Metropolitan Club.

Police Baffled in Their Hunt for the Burglar Who Was Seen by a Maid as He Escaped.

AMONG ARTICLES TAKEN IS $16,000 PEARL NECKLACE

Thief Knew Where Valuables Were as Only Two Drawers Had Been Opened to Find the Loot.

The thief who stole $50,000 worth of jewelry from the home of Henry L. Haas, a New York lawyer, at Norwood and Hollywood streets, Long Branch, N. J., last night had succeeded, up to late this afternoon, in escaping the net that has been spread by the police of this city, Philadelphia, and other large cities in the east. A careful watch on all ferries, boats and trains has been fruitless.

The Long Branch police, aided by private detectives, haven't made much progress of the case of the crime. The theory that it was an "inside job," engineered by a person familiar with the Haas home and the habits of the members of the family, is gaining the officers at work on the case.

Mr. Haas has a home at No. 1 West Seventieth street, Manhattan, and is a well known and wealthy lawyer with office at No. 43 Broadway. His mother, Mrs. Louis Haas, has two residences at Long Branch, and Mr. and Mrs. Haas decided this year to spend the summer with her there.

Before they left New York, five weeks ago, Mrs. Haas had the most valuable of her jewels placed in a vault and took with her only those she expected to wear. These included a $25,000 pearl necklace, a $5,000 emerald ring, several rubies, emerald and diamond rings, three horseshoe diamond pins and a $750 golf mesh bag. There were many pieces not so costly.

Mrs. Louis Haas, who makes her home with her son and daughter, had a $15,000 pearl necklace and many other jewels and Mr. Haas owned a number of rings, stoppins and such things.

All told, the jewelry in the home when the family went for an automobile ride and dinner early last evening consisted of twenty-one pieces worth $40,000, according to the estimate of Mrs. Harry L. Haas, not including a box of heirlooms belonging to her. Her two jewel boxes were in a drawer of her dresser on the second floor and her custom to wear all of them constantly while away from home, some of them in charms bags under her waists.

Both Mrs. Haas and her mother-in-law have always taken unusual precautions against the loss of their jewels. It was their custom to wear all of them constantly while away from home, some of them in charms bags under their waists.

But last night was so warm that they decided to wear only a few pieces and the rest were left in the jewel boxes. It was the first time, Mrs. Haas said, that she was ever so careless with her gems, but she thought all would be safe in a house full of servants.

The family returned about 9 o'clock last night from their ride and found the house brilliantly lighted and police and detectives questioning the servants.

"A man—a burglar—was seen in the house, ma'am," the butler told Mrs. Haas. Mrs. Haas ran straight up to her boudoir, pulled out the drawer where she kept the jewels and found them all gone except the heirlooms. The thief had also left her large bag, some of a few dollars, but took the gold mesh bag containing a $50 bill.

Mrs. Louis Haas found that all her jewels had been taken, that the most valuable of which was the $15,000 necklace. There were many other valuable items which the thief might have taken, but nothing else was touched. It was apparent that the person who engineered the robbery knew exactly what he wanted and where it was to be found.

Lots of Engines—No Fire. Nearly all the fire-fighting apparatus in the lower end of Manhattan Island was moved this afternoon when an alarm was rung in from Nassau and Ann streets. There was no fire. A Fire Department lineman, rewiring the alarm box at that point, accidentally got his wires crossed, and before the damage could be repaired an alarm had been sounded.
