SIXTY CONVICT MUTINEERS IN SHACKLES DEFY GUARDS ON THEIR WAY TO AUBURN

Leaders of Incendiary Revolt at Sing Sing Riot on March to Train.

400 LOCKED IN CELLS.

Close Confinement During Hunt for Firebug Is Warden Clancy's Order.

(Special From a Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)

OSSENING, July 25.—Warden James Clancy scored heavily against the rebellion of the convicts in Sing Sing today when, amid scenes of unparalleled disorder, he shipped the first draft of sixty mutinous felons to Auburn.

Because by sudden shift of strategy he included in this draft twenty-six Class A, or first term convicts, who were the chief firebrands in the week's riot of incendiarism and disorder and who believed themselves secure from inclusion in the removals to the other prison, the Warden gave convincing proof to the caged desperadoes under him that he was master.

400 CLOSELY CONFINED DURING HUNT FOR FIREBUG.

After these sixty, shackled and leashed like vicious elephants in a circus menagerie, had left for Auburn in a special car and under the eyes of State Detective Jackson and five guards, the Warden ordered that 300 of the nearly 1,400 prisoners remaining who were known not to have participated in any of the rebellion of the past few days should be released from their cells and sent to the shops. Later he released more of the rebels until only about 400 of the worst disturbance makers remained behind bars. Tuesday the second draft of 700 to 100 will go to Auburn.

Meanwhile Warden Clancy continued to push his investigation into the origin of the big fire of Tuesday, which wrought $200,000 damage by the destruction of four of the shop buildings, and of the blaze of yesterday, which was discovered in the clothing shop before it had progressed to a dangerous stage. He believes he knows the two men who set Tuesday's fire and the single convict who tried yesterday to fire the clothing shop.

Warden Clancy stole a march on the men of the first draft, who, in anticipation of just what was to happen today, had been indulging in incendiarism and striking every waking hour since last Tuesday. At 7 o'clock, when the usual call for breakfast is sounded and the cell doors are thrown back, nothing happened; not a bolt was drawn.

STOOD BY HUERTA AND GLAD OF IT, WILSON SAYS HERE

Advised Our Consuls to Support Mexican Government, Without Orders.

NO OTHER COURSE OPEN

1,000,000 Bandits in Mexico as "Constitutionalists," Says Ambassador.

Henry Lane Wilson, Ambassador to Mexico, who was summoned home by President Wilson, arrived here to-day on the Ward liner Mexico. Mr. Wilson at the first question on Mexican affairs exclaimed: "Now, I can't talk about that. I can't say anything at this time."

But in an instant he burst out: "I stand pat on all I have done as Ambassador in Mexico City. They accuse me of having stood by the present Mexican Government. Well, I have done so and I am glad of it. I stand pat." Again and again he introduced this phrase into his talk.

ACTED FOR HIMSELF WITHOUT INSTRUCTIONS.

"For one hundred years," he continued, "it has been the custom in diplomatic circles to recognize a de facto government. I followed custom and I am glad. I did send instructions to American consuls throughout Mexico to support the present government by their influence. I received no instructions from Washington. I acted on my own initiative."

"You must remember when you read the garbled accounts of the situation in Mexico that there are a lot of persons who want intervention in Mexico for selfish reasons, and much that you read is inspired. My instructions to consuls were designed to all in bringing about peace and order. I wanted to sustain law and not bandits. They don't understand bandits here. They call them constitutionalists."

"My idea in putting the Federal authority in full control when the rebellion broke out against Madero was to protect the lives of thousands of Americans. It was the only proper course for me. There will be absolute chaos in Mexico if the present Government does not stand. Nearly all the warring factions are bandits. There are 1,000,000 of them in Mexico, where brigandage pays better than work."

"If I had not brought Huerta and Diaz together after the bombardment of Mexico City the whole city would have been in flames."

MRS. MADERO'S CHARGES FOHGED, HE SAYS.

Mr. Wilson became greatly excited when his attention was called to the charge of Mrs. Madero that Wilson was personally responsible for her husband's murder.

"That is all part of a political game," he exclaimed angrily, "and when I get to Washington I will prove it. Mrs. Madero cannot be published letters which are now on file in the State Department which are absolute forgeries."

Mr. Wilson sent a wireless to the State Department yesterday asking for instructions and a messenger met the ship with an order for him to proceed to Washington at once.

Among the other passengers was E. N. Brown, President of the Mexico National Railways. He refused to discuss affairs in Mexico, saying: "I shall have something to say tomorrow."

Reginald F. del Valle, who studied conditions in Mexico by order of Secretary Bryan, also published letters which are now on file in the State Department which are absolute forgeries.

Mr. Wilson's course in Mexico, but he had as many defenders as he had adverse critics.

Broker Kills Self Like Wife Did When Child Wedded Bogus Baron

Robert Schroeder Third Suicide Victim Following Romance of Daughter.

HUSBAND ENDED LIFE.

Adventurer Squandered $200,000 and Then Took Fatal Dose of Poison.

Robert Schroeder, a wealthy retired malt broker and brewer, killed himself by inhaling gas in the bathroom of his handsome home at No. 46 West Sixty-ninth street to-day. His death completed a cycle of tragedies in the family, of which his was the third death by suicide.

Mr. Schroeder took his life in the same bathroom where his wife had committed suicide in the same manner about three years before. Richard Arkovy, a Hungarian, who styled himself the Baron von Arkovy and whose marriage with Elias Schroeder broke the mother's heart and led to her suicide, killed himself by poison at the Carlton Hotel in London April 18 of this year.

The whole cycle of tragic deaths had its inception with the runaway marriage of Elias Schroeder, a beautiful girl of the blonde Teutonic type, who met Arkovy in a vaudeville theatre when she was little more than a girl, and was induced by him to marry through the magic of golden tales of a title and castles in Hungary. Arkovy was a clerk in a cigar store at the time he met Elias Schroeder.

Within a very short time of her daughter's marriage, Mrs. Schroeder, who had grieved over the girl's unfortunate match, went to the bathroom of the expensively furnished home on West Sixty-ninth street and turned on the gas. She was dead when found.

By Mrs. Schroeder's death Elias inherited stocks in the Jacob Hoffman Brewing Company worth $200,000. Income and principal went largely to Arkovy and the pair gravitated between New York and Paris, living in great state. Robert Schroeder refused to recognize his son-in-law, nor would he see his daughter until she had given up her spendthrift husband. This she did when the crash of all her dreams came.

SAID HER TITLED HUSBAND COST HER $200,000.

She returned to New York in December, 1911, declaring that her "titled" husband had cost her $200,000 and that she did not intend to support him longer. She had discovered that instead of being of a noble family he was the son of a dentist in Budapest, Hungary.

After Elias Arkovy's return a reconciliation between her father and her self was effected by friends, and she went to live with her father in the home she had deserted at the time of her marriage.

Mr. Schroeder's death was discovered to-day by Gertrude De Bruin, one of the household servants. When the master of the house did not appear for breakfast at his usual hour she went upstairs to investigate. She traced the odor of gas to a locked bathroom door on the second floor.

Unable to break down the door, she climbed onto a fire-escape and thus reached the bathroom window. She saw Mr. Schroeder lying, partially dead, on the floor by the half-filled tub. He had a rug covered over him and pillows under his head. Gas was found, subsequently, to be flowing from the open coals of a small gas radiator in the bathroom.

Dr. Drury of No. 112 West Sixty-ninth street was summoned, but he said that Mr. Schroeder had been dead more than an hour. Mrs. Arkovy was progressing

ELLIOTT ELECTED PRESIDENT OF THE NEW HAVEN ROAD

He Will Assume Charge of His Office on Sept. 1, Succeeding Mellen.

Charles Elliott was to-day elected President of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, to succeed Charles B. Mellen. Mr. Elliott, who is now President of the Northern Pacific, was to-day elected to the board of the New Haven road. This announcement was made shortly before 1 o'clock, immediately after the adjournment of the meeting of New Haven directors.

Mr. Elliott will assume charge of his office on Sept. 1. In the mean time Mr. Mellen will continue to act as the executive head of the New Haven system.

The special committee further recommended that the office of the Chairman of the Board of the New Haven Railroad be created.

Also that the several states in which the New Haven system operates be adequately represented by directors who shall look after the interests of their respective States.

The legal department, it was recommended, should be amplified, and that efforts should be made to obtain uniform railroad laws for the territory covered by the New Haven.

Mr. Elliott's idea of a railroad administration is that the patrons of the road, whether in the passenger or freight department, have at least the right to state their grievances to the management. The New Haven directors, in view of the volume of complaints (some of them based on ghastly disasters), have expressed through their spokesman, Theodore N. Vall, that the New Haven needs a head of the kind to carry out this policy.

According to members of the New Haven Board, a new office will be created for Mr. Elliott as soon as a meeting of the stockholders will change the by-laws of the corporation. The stockholders, who yesterday saw the market price of the New Haven fall lower than ever in the history of the company, are generally supposed to do almost anything that will make their investment more reliable.

When Mr. Elliott becomes chairman of the board he will be asked to pick out a titular president of the New Haven Railroad for several days of the month controlled by the capital of the New Haven group of financiers.

and to pick out a body of vice-presidents to take over the details of the management of the road and its allied lines so that it shall cease to be regarded as the general enemy of all those who come into contact with it from outside its own organization.

The "Baron von Arkovy" held front page in all the papers for several days of the month controlled by the capital of the New Haven group of financiers.

July 8, Jarren, then Chancellor of the Cuban Government and Vice-Consul in New York, charged the "Baron" with the theft of two platinum crucibles valued at $100. When Arkovy was searched, a pair of brass knuckles with spikes like those on a dog's collar were found in the pocket of his fur overcoat.

BLOOD TRANSFUSION FOR MRS. PANKHURST; IN GRAVE CONDITION

Doctors Take Radical Step in Rallying Strength of the Suffragette Leader.

LONDON, July 25.—The consulting physicians in attendance on Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who was yesterday released from Holloway Jail, take such a serious view of her condition that they ordered to-day the immediate resort to a transfusion of blood. Mrs. Pankhurst's weakness and inanition from the effects of her "hunger and thirst strikes" are so extreme that great apprehension is felt by the doctors as to the outcome.

Dr. Flora Murray, one of the physicians attending Mrs. Pankhurst, said late to-day that her condition had improved slightly since morning, when the blood transfusion operation was performed. The transfusion was successful, said Dr. Murray, and without complications. Mrs. Pankhurst is expected to get better.

Since she was sentenced to prison early in the summer for three years, Mrs. Pankhurst had not eaten a mouthful of food in jail. Time after time she has starved herself into a helpless and precarious condition, forcing the Home Office to release her on ticket of leave.

Each time she has been at liberty the woman has ventured out to some public meeting before her health was restored, and has been sent back into jail by Scotland Yard.

Lady Sylvia Smith, daughter of the Earl of Antrim; Mrs. Patrick Lawrence and Miss Evelyn Sharpe were sent to prison to-day for a fortnight on a charge of disorderly conduct during an attempt to hold a militant suffragette meeting at the entrance to the lobby of the House of Commons yesterday. All the accused refused to find sureties for their good behavior and as an alternative were sent to jail.

NEW LACE MYSTERIOUSLY BECOMES OLD RAGS

Brooklyn Girl Charged With Changing Contents of Package Sent C. O. D.

Miss Ethel Jahrens, who said she lived at No. 24 Schermerhorn street, Brooklyn, was before Magistrate Voorhees in the Adams Street Court in Brooklyn to-day, to explain a charge of getting $17.50 from Lord & Taylor by substituting worthless stuff for lace sent to her C. O. D.

Miss Jahrens, when she had heard the complaint, said that she had not bought the goods. A sister, who since had departed on a long ocean voyage, must have been the purchaser, she suggested, and she said this sister would not return until September. Magistrate Voorhees adjourned the hearing until Aug. 1 and paroled Miss Jahrens.

POLICE HINT OF SUICIDE RIDICULED BY DR. WUEST

Known to Have Borrowed Revolver Found Near Body, but Couldn't Have Killed Himself.

Following an official report by Second Deputy Commissioner Dougherty, intimating that Policeman James E. Cahill, found dead in the yard of St. Matthew's Church, Utica avenue and Lincoln place, Brooklyn, early Monday, was not murdered by church burglars, but killed himself, came a statement to-day from William J. Plander, a cousin and foster brother of the dead policeman's wife that Cahill was murdered by a "brother officer" of the Police Department.

Cahill was unpopular, according to Plander, because he constantly criticised fellow-policemen for shirking danger and responsibility, even though his censure was in the presence of higher officers of the department.

Deputy Commissioner Dougherty's report, which was taken as a conclusion by the officials of the department that Cahill had killed himself, was, in brief, based on the following information:

The cut on the left breast was by the same authority "a very faint scratch on the surface over the left nipple 1-4 inch in width and 1-4 inch in depth; the cut on the hip was 1-4 inches in depth and 1-4 inch in width."

A great part of the report was devoted to proof that the revolver found near Cahill's body (his present service revolver was found in the holster in his pocket) was one which had been loaned or given to him by his wife's foster father—who is her uncle—Frederick Plander of Uniondale, L. I., before Commissioner Bingham insisted on a uniform type of heavier revolver for all policemen.

SEVERAL TESTIFY CAHILL BORROWED REVOLVER.

William J. Plander, a New York City freeman, who was a table boarder with the Cahill's at No. 120 Chestnut street, and others testified that Cahill went to Uniondale on Sunday and borrowed the old revolver which he had formerly used, complaining that his new revolver was too heavy for summer service and needed to be repaired, anyway. Mrs. Cahill and their five children were staying with Frederick Plander, the foster father, at the time.

Cahill, according to the witnesses cited by Mr. Dougherty, tried to get cartridges from the Plander family to fit the old-fashioned weapon, and, being unable to do so, found that the cartridges intended for his weapon
