OFFER JOB AND CORSET

Witnesses Say $10 Fee and No
Work Given Too Much for
$1.50 Article.

Miss Beulah Dodge, twenty-two, and Miss Beatrice Snyder, twenty-seven, were arraigned in Yorkville Police Court today on a charge of conducting an employment agency without a license. This is the story as it came out in court: Last June the girls, who live at the Acot Hotel, at Twenty-seventh street and Madison avenue, hired Room 612 at No. 1 West Thirty-fourth street, just opposite the Waldorf-Astoria. Then they began advertising for cloak models and beautiful girls with wonderful figures swarmed into the office. The fee was $10, and with this went a guarantee of a job and a pair of corsets to still more beautify the figure. The girls who received the corsets said that they weren't worth more than $1.50 a pair. But the complaint in that the girls didn't get the promised jobs.

Miss May Halpin, eighteen, of No. 247 Fifty-sixth street, Brooklyn, was among the callers at room 612. She says that she finally persuaded her mother to give her $10, which she turned over to the firm, receiving in return a note recommending her for a position, and also receiving a pair of corsets. She could not get a job, she said, and she could not get back her ten dollars. She kept right after the employment agents and when she couldn't get any satisfaction from them went to Herman Robinson, Commissioner of Licenses. He sent her to his attorney, Herman Holt, and the latter declared that Miss Halpin had a good case. Miss Anna Murphy, an inspector under Robinson, was put on the case and went with Miss Halpin to the room. There they got the names and experiences of other girls, and a warrant was sworn out for the arrest of Misses Beulah and Beatrice.

BEAUTIFUL CULPRIT STAGGERS STOLID POLICEMEN.

Detectives Rein and Bennett, armed with the warrants, went with Miss Halpin this morning to the employment office. Several girls were waiting outside and the detectives opened the door, to find Miss Dodge sitting at a table. The officers passed. They hadn't expected to find anything like this dazzling young creature. But little Miss Halpin, with the air of a Nemesis, stepped forward and pointed a dramatic finger at the interesting young woman. "That's the blonde," she said. The detectives said that they were very sorry, but that they had a warrant for the arrest of Miss Dodge on a charge of conducting an employment agency without a license. Miss Dodge laughed and said that they couldn't arrest her; that she had a license. But they arrested her just the same. Then they returned and arrested Miss Snyder. The two girls still thought it a great joke when they reached the complaint room of the Yorkville Court. Their mood was gay, and later when they were arraigned in court, they seemed to be tickled to death with their little adventure.

About a dozen cloak models were there as witnesses. The models didn't get a chance to tell their stories in court. They told it to the reporters. Miss Anna Vohik, a tall, slender blonde and the bride of a year, living at No. 128 East Fifty-third street, said that she had paid five dollars on account and had received a note to a man who not only did not employ her but attempted to take liberties with her. Miss Grace Russell of No. 242 Covert street, Brooklyn, said that she had paid the fee of $10 and had sought a position in vain.

A clerk in the office of Aaron Levy appeared for the fair prisoners and asked for a postponement of the examination until tomorrow. This was granted and bail fixed at $500 in each case. Right here the girls stopped laughing. They drew long faces. They didn't have any $500 and were ordered locked up. They were annoyed and told the law clerk so. But the case had been postponed, and all the models promised to be in attendance tomorrow morning and to bring more models.

FIREMEN FRIVOL,
DOING CONEY TILL
WEE SMA' HOURS

Visiting Chiefs, Families and Friends See Boats Throw
Streams in Upper Bay.

This, the fourth day of the fire chiefs' convention, is being devoted almost wholly to frolicking. An hour to the agreeable business of inspecting the fire fleet at Battery Park and watching a picturesque demonstration of their spouting qualities as they paraded up and down the lower bay, and the delegates went out to sea in the direction of Coney Island. Among the pure delights of that resort they are expected to remain until midnight.

Pretty near the whole posse of delegates, 1,300 in number, together with their wives and the friends of their wives, were at Battery Park at half-past 11 o'clock, awaiting in the grand stands and taking peeks at the fire fleet moored in the municipal basin. Acting Chief Worth and a corps of assistants chaperoned the visitors aboard the Thomas Willets and James Duane newest of the craft, and showed them through the engine and pump rooms and, if they chose, through the improvised commissary departments. INSPECT FIRE FLEET FROM GRAND REPUBLIC DECK.

When all the visitors had been sent ashore and escorted aboard the Grand Republic, tied up at Pier 1, the fireboats cut loose from their moorings and deployed into the upper bay, the Willets and Duane leading and the little Seth Low at the foot of the class. The ten boats were cleverly handled and made a Republic show as they passed the Grand Republic and proceeded up the North River as far as the foot of Cortlandt street.

At this point they turned and came down the river with the tide, spouting water from each of their ten nozzles and winning many an admiring "Oh!" from the delegates aboard the Grand Republic, which by this time had cut loose from her moorings and moved out into midstream, showing a heavy list to starboard as her passengers crowded the rail to stare at the moving crowds of mist.

The fireboats passed the Battery still spouting their streams of salt water, and came to anchor down the bay, where they came to a stop while the Grand Republic passed on her way to the Narrows. Here is a complete list of the fireboats: New York, Abram S. Hewitt, William L. Strong, Thomas Willets, James Duane, Zophar Mills, David A. Hoody, G. B. McCallan, Cornelius W. Lawrence, Seth Low. THEN ALL HAD GOOD TIME AT CONEY.

The visitors spent an arduous day in surf and sand and the abutting thoroughfares of the Coney paradise. To many of them Coney, the beach, the whole water show, were a complete novelty, and they enjoyed it as only novices can. They had a shore dinner at Releaser's Casino in Brighton Beach and spent part of the afternoon trying to guess what it was they had eaten. At 3 o'clock P. M. the Grand Republic is scheduled to start on her return trip with her cargo of tired and presumably happy humanity.

To-morrow the convention shifts once more to the minor shore. The chief event of the day will be the unveiling of the firemen's memorial at One Hundredth street and Riverside Drive. The procession will form at Fifty-seventh street and Fifth avenue, the band of the Portland Oregon Fire Department occupying a place of honor. In the evening there will be doings on the New York Theatre roof for the entertainment of the visitors.

Cocaine Victim Picked Up.
An unconscious man was found in a doorway at Second avenue and Twenty-third street early today by Policeman Power. Dr. Schaeff took him to Bellevue, where it was found he was suffering from cocaine poisoning. Later he revived and said he was "Dr. Ralph Hall, thirty years old, of No. 272 Tenth street, Brooklyn." His condition is not serious.
