

FIFTY-FOUR SEAMEN FROM BURNING SHIP BROUGHT TO PORT

Johnston Liner With Blazing Cargo of Cotton Sank at Sea.

WIRELESS MAN A HERO.

Captain of Rescuing Steamer Brought in Shipwrecked Crew Once Before.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 8.—When the Hamburg-American line steamer Arcadia reached port yesterday, inaugurating the service of that line to this port, she brought with her fifty-four shipwrecked seamen—Capt. Isaac Jones and his crew of the Johnston line freighter Templenore, saved from the sea after their vessel had been burned, 800 miles off the Virginia Coast.

As the men came down the gangplank, attired in only the scanty clothing they had been able to snatch as they left their burning ship, they looked wan and haggard as the result of their thrilling experiences. Two launches were in waiting to take them to the Baltimore Anchor- age, where new and warm clothing awaited them and where they will be made comfortable until the steamer of the Johnston line sails within the next few days to take them to their homes in England.

WIRELESS OPERATOR DEFIES FIRE TO CALL FOR HELP.

In the case of the Templenore, as in other similar catastrophes, the wireless operator was the hero. Twenty minutes after the fire was discovered the operator, R. Emanuel, began to flash his appeals for assistance across the seas. The flames soon put the wireless apparatus out of commission. An auxiliary battery then was utilized by the operator and the Arcadia was kept informed of the position of the doomed ship.

"Just how the fire started," said Capt. Jones, "is hard to determine, but it undoubtedly began among the bales of cotton which were a part of the cargo. It was at 11:30 P. M. Monday that Chief Engineer Green came to me and said: 'I small smoke.' Together we started an investigation, and it was but a short time before the fire was located amid- ship, near the engine room bulkhead. "Every one on the ship was aroused and orders were given to turn in and fight the flames. The fire, however, gained headway, and in a short time the amidships section of the vessel was a roaring mass of flames. It was at 11:50, twenty minutes after the fire was discovered, that the wireless operator, R. Emanuel, flashed out the first signal of distress.

The operator continued to send calls for assistance, which were picked up by the operator on the Arcadia, then fifty-two miles away.

BAD SEA MADE HANDLING LIFE-BOATS NO EASY TASK.

"The dynamo operating the wireless apparatus soon got out of commission as the flames ate into the vessel. The auxiliary batteries then were used, and with these the Arcadia was told of the happenings on the Templenore. The last message sent described that the Templenore was burning fiercely, and that the men were ordered to leave in the lifeboats. "I was the last to leave the Templenore, and had with me the wireless operator. In the lifeboat with me were twenty-five members of the crew. The remaining members were in two other lifeboats, which had in the mean time put out from the ship. Two of the lifeboats were burning in the davits when the last boat left the ship. "The bridge also had caught fire, and was burning fiercely. Everything happened so fast that no one had time to get any clothes or other personal effects.

"There was a choppy sea on, and it was difficult to keep the lifeboats afloat. We took a position to the wind- ward, until the arrival of the Arcadia. The transfer of the Templenore's seamen was effected without mishap, with the exception that Chief Officer Murphy's hand was slightly injured while boarding the Arcadia.

"See this cap and these shoes? Well, it was owing to the kindness of Capt. Boldt of the Arcadia that I got them. Capt. Boldt and his crew did all they could to make our lot as comfortable as possible."

RESCUING CAPTAIN TELLS OF RACE TO BURNING STEAMER.

Capt. George Boldt of the Arcadia, told how the first wireless "S O S" was received by Operator Freeman of the Arcadia. "We were given the position of the Templenore," he said, "and had no trouble in laying our course to come up with the burning ship. The first call was received when we were fifty-two miles away, and it probably was an hour later, steaming at full speed, that we saw the reflection of the fire in the sky. The ship was a mass of flames from stem to stern. Every little while we heard a loud explosion, probably barrels of oil stored in the hold. For miles around the sea was as bright as day and

It was no trouble to pick out the three lifeboats in which were the Temple- more's crew. "This is the second time that Capt. Boldt had rendered assistance to a ship- wrecked crew. In September, 1906, while in command of the sailing ship Austria, he rescued fourteen shipwrecked sea- men off Hatteras. After taking the crew on board his vessel, the wrecked ship was set afloat and removed from the track of navigation. "Until the arrival of the Arcadia yester- day it was supposed that there was none on the Templenore except the officers and crew, but Mr. Emanuel, the local agent of the Johnston Line, learned that besides these there were on board a consular passenger, William Thomas, and a stowaway, Thomas Mc- Cormick. McCormick was taken to the Anchorage with the sailors.

PHONE GIRL A SUICIDE.

Takes Acid When Student Falls to Meet Her to Say Goodby.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 8.—Because Wal- ter Ketcham, aged seventeen years, a student at the Carnegie School of Tech- nology, would not meet her and say good-bye before she left the city for a short trip, Hazel Linnart, aged sixteen, a pretty Southside telephone girl, drank a vial of acid at her home last night and died before medical aid could reach her.

The young woman intended leaving the city to-morrow. Wednesday night she is said to have called up Ketcham on the telephone and asked him to meet her before she went away and say good-bye.

This young Ketcham refused to do, and Miss Linnart brooded over his cold- ness.

GIRL WEEPS IN STREET.

Falls to Answer Police Questions and Goes to Hospital.

"What's the trouble, young lady?" asked Policeman Barrett of the East One Hundred and Fourth street police station, last night, speaking to a weep- ing girl, trimly dressed and wearing several rings on her fingers. She was standing near One Hundred and Eleventh street on Park avenue.

She murmured incoherently and kept weeping. When the officer failed to get her name or address he decided to take her to the station house. Here she still seemed unable to answer questions and an ambulance was summoned from Harlem Hospital, where the girl was taken.

The doctors would not diagnose her case as aphasia, but said she was in "a very sick condition."

RILEY MAKES RAID ALONE.

Captain Just Happens in on a Chi- nese Gambling Place.

Capt. Dominick Riley, the new police boss of Chinatown, while walking through that section alone last night in civilian attire (in which Dominick looks quite the "sport") got near enough to a Chinese "lookout" whom he knew to suspect that the man was guarding a gambling house. He walked in, un- attended, without any whistle blowing or night-stick pounding.

He found, at the end of a hallway, an "inbox door," which hadn't been closed, so quickly had the Chinese left the place. Also he discovered eight tantan tables, two iron safes and 12,000 lottery slips, all of which he subsequently had removed.

Riley was sent to Chinatown recently
