ROBBED IN BROADWAY CAR; $5,570 FOR PAY ROLL LOST BY THEATRE'S AUDITOR

Hammerstein's Employee Collapses When He Discovers that Money Is Gone.

DETECTIVES ON TRAIL.

Victim Remembers that Two Men Jostled Him in the Crowded Car.

Fifty-five hundred dollars, belonging to Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre, dropped out of sight this afternoon as mysteriously as the magicians on the Victoria stage make things disappear.

J. J. Schmidt, auditor of the theatre, was sent to the Mutual Bank at Thirty-third street and Broadway, shortly after noon, to get money for the payroll of the theatre. He got the money, $5,570 in bills, and boarded a Broadway car. The car was crowded and the auditor made his way through the throng on the rear platform and the body of the car to the front door.

Arriving at Forty-second street he jumped from the platform and made the theatre on a run through the rain. In Mr. Hammerstein's office he reached for the money. He went white, gasped inarticulately and dropped into a chair. The money was gone.

Schmidt cried out that he had been robbed and it was some minutes before he could explain to Hammerstein the circumstances of the disappearance of the bundle of bills as far as he knew of them. Mr. Hammerstein immediately telephoned the police and Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty took the matter in hand.

TWO MEN JOSTLED HIM IN CROWDED CAR.

A number of detectives were sent to the theatre and Schmidt again told them his story.

The police are of the opinion that Schmidt was marked by one of the gangs of robbers that have in the past held up messengers from banks. They probably trailed Schmidt, watched him enter and leave the bank, and were prepared to follow him either afoot or on the car. The car offered the better field for their purpose. In the crowd, it was an easy matter to brush against the auditor and whip the bills from his pocket.

Schmidt, knowing nothing of his loss, kept on to his destination. He never thought to feel his pocket. Possibly he was so gone to carrying the money, and had gone so long without molestation, he never gave the money a thought until it was time to turn it over.

"I have no suspicion of Schmidt doing anything wrong," Mr. Hammerstein said, "but it was carelessness—rank, gross carelessness."

Schmidt is sixty-five years old and lives at No. 275 Argyle street, Arlington, N. J. He said:

"It's my custom to go to the bank nearly every day—not every Saturday. Yesterday I drew out $7,000 for the Lexington opera house. I am usually accompanied by Charles Miller, but today he wasn't around. Oscar Hammerstein told me to take a taxi, but I thought the distance was so short I could make it just as quickly in the cars.

"I remember now a man in front of me dropped his umbrella. As he stooped to pick it up I naturally bent backward. There was a short, fat man, with a black mustache behind me and we both bumped when the man in front stooped. The fat man doubtless got the money. It was wrapped in a newspaper in my hip pocket. There was $5,000 in $20 bills, $2,000 in $50 bills and $370 in $5 bills. I didn't discover my loss until I reached the office.

I jumped off the car and went through the Times Square building. I had a check on a Buffalo bank which Arthur Hammerstein had asked me to get cashed. When I entered the office I told him that if he wanted it collected he had better endorse it. Then I reached for the check, which was with the money. Check and money were gone."

ADMIRAL A DRUG AND DRINK VICTIM, MRS. EATON SWEARS

Tried Hard to Reform Him and Made Sacrifices to Keep Their Home Going.

TESTIFIES ON STAND.

Breaks Down When She Recalls Death of Baby She Accused Eaton of Poisoning.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Oct. 25.—Mrs. Jennie May Eaton told on the witness stand to-day the story of her married life with D. H. Alnoworth, and later with the late Rear-Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, with whose death by poisoning she is accused. Her experience with her first husband, whom she divorced, was unhappy, but she was devoted to the Admiral, whose intemperance and use of drugs, however, she said, caused her much misery.

She testified that she had had a friend of whom the Admiral might have been jealous.

Mrs. Eaton showed some emotion at times, but generally she wept while telling of the death of their adopted child, which she has declared was poisoned by the Admiral.

To-day counsel sought to draw from her own lips Mrs. Eaton's story of her life with the Admiral. It is the contention of the defense that the man died from an overdose of a drug which he had been accustomed to use, and Mrs. Eaton took the stand prepared to relate all that she knew of her husband's habits.

HER LIFE WITH FORMER HUSBAND WAS UNHAPPY.

Mrs. Eaton was called after William M. Gammons, an insurance man of Springfield, had testified concerning the policies on the Admiral's life and on which loans had been made. The approximate value of the policies was $370, and both were payable to the widow.

Mrs. Eaton was calm and self-possessed as she began her testimony. The jurors gave close attention to the story which she told in a clear, well modulated voice, addressing herself always to her senior counsel, William A. Morse. Under the questioning of the attorney, Mrs. Eaton described her early life. She was born at Alexandria, Va., thirty-nine years ago, she said, her family later removing to Michigan and then to Washington, where she met her first husband, D. H. Alnoworth.

Her life with Alnoworth was unhappy. She said that her husband lost two positions and that she was forced to aid in the support of the family, selling books from house to house. During her life with Alnoworth she and her two children, Jane and Dorothy, lived successively at Washington, Guthrie, Okla., St. Louis, Chicago and then returned to Washington, where she bought a house, paying $1,200 down. Later she was forced to sell the home.

After her husband's drinking became unbearable, continued Mrs. Eaton, "the house was sold, the furniture stored and I decided I would fit myself professionally and entered the George Washington Hospital for this purpose. Not long

Dukes and Counts Going to Work; Rich Yankee Girls Are Scarce

American Comtesse, Rid of One Nobleman, Not Anxious to Try Another.

GIRL MARKET SHRUNK.

Boni, She Says, Driven to Sell Pictures, and There Are Others!

The Comtesse de Bois Lucy was a passenger on La France, which arrived this morning from Havre. The home of the Comtesse for the last three years has been in Paris. Her real home is in Chicago, and she is going out there for a visit after a stay of a week at the Ritz-Carlton. The Comtesse has four children. Nobody would suspect that she has a boy of nineteen, if she herself did not say so. She is a blonde of medium height, with golden hair and sparkling blue eyes. Her smile is merry and she discloses a set of beautiful white teeth. She was dressed in a black tailor-made suit, and on her head rested a little black hat with appropriate feathers—not an algette. A sealin coat was thrown over her arm while she stood on deck as the steamship chugged its way up the river.

Miss Julia O'Neal was the original name of the Comtesse, and she was born in Mississippi. She married D. J. Bachelor, a millionaire lumberman, who died several years ago, leaving her all his wealth and four children. Mrs. Bachelor went to Paris and became the Comtesse de Bois Lucy was one of her greatest admirers. He courted her for more than two years and, nine months ago, he married her. On last Wednesday a divorce was granted to her by the French courts. On board La France, it was whispered that the Comtesse was soon to wed an Italian nobleman.

"I know a very charming titled Italian gentleman," she said, when a ship news reporter asked her about the rumor, and then with a smile she continued: "I don't know about risking my liberty to a title again."

SPEAKS ONLY TWO LANGUAGES—ENGLISH AND PANTOMIME.

"Do you speak Italian?" she was asked.

"No, I speak only two languages—English and the language of the Continent."

"What's the last?"

"Oh," she returned, with a merry laugh, "that is pantomime. If you know how to pantomime, you can make yourself understood in any country abroad. Foreign marriages for American girls are nowhere a success. No American girl can be happy under such conditions. She may be too proud to say so, but the matches are all the same. The foreign gentleman thinks that he is doing all that can be expected of him when he gives a lady his title, in exchange for her money. They treat their wives as slaves, or at least, try to do so."

"I was not a child when I married Comte de Bois Lucy. I was old and experienced. So I had a contract drawn up by the terms of which, in the event of divorce, I was not to pay him any alimony. When we broke up and decided that it was best to live apart I said to him: 'Well, young man, you don't get any alimony from me for your results of the last several months.' The American girl has no chance in such matches. If her husband insults her publicly, why, that's all right. But if the wife turns around and 'bawls out her legs' lord it is a scandal. No, I think I will look around in America before donning another title."

SAD HAVE TO WORK.

"Really, it is getting very sad for the titled class in Europe. Do you know that they have to go to work in the market for American girls has shrunk. The Count Boni de Castellane, who was so long Anna Gould's husband, is selling pictures. Quite a lot of the titled class are going in for the sale of old things. Some of the old families have had to part with their heirlooms and most of their furniture. There was quite a market for that and it gave genteel employment to titles out of a job."

"To keep up the market for heirlooms, old furniture and old china and porcelain, factories have been started where they manufacture these kind of things. I went through a china and porcelain factory in Italy where I saw the 'oldest' things manufactured, which you couldn't tell from the genuine. And many of the rich Americans, when they had these imitations fixed up in a house, hired by the titled sales agents, grab the 'antiquities.' And we Americans pride ourselves on being so smart. If a man with a title can't beat us in one way he readily adapts himself to another way for the money of the hard-earned American. Let the American girls and their dotting mammas take it from me, and keep away from the marriageable titles. No good comes from them for our girls."

CHAUFFEURS LIABLE FOR AUTO ACCIDENTS

That Is, If They Are Joy Riding Alone and Have Owner's Permission.

Justice Cohan in the Supreme Court has just rendered a decision to-day that means that if an owner permits his chauffeur to use his car for the chauffeur's own pleasure that the owner cannot be held responsible for the death or injury of persons the driver may run down. Heretofore in New York owners have been held to account, when their cars were being used with their knowledge.

The case in question was that of Davies against the Anglo-American Auto-Tire Company. A jury had rendered the complainant a verdict on the ground that the accident had been due to the chauffeur and not to any act of his employers, and second, that the chauffeur had been using the car for pleasure purposes with the owner's consent and was not in the service of the owners at the time of the accident. Justice Cohan ruled that the "master was relieved from liability. Motion to set aside the verdict is denied."

EARTHQUAKE ALARMS SAN FRANCISCO PEOPLE

City Gets Severe Shock in the Early Day, but Escapes Any Noticeable Damage.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 25.—A severe earthquake shook San Francisco early to-day. No damage is reported, but persons who went through the "big quake" several years ago were near the panic stage.

DEMAND OF LEADERS FORCE "CHIEF" MURPHY TO ANSWER HENNESSY

Boss Holds Secret Meeting With His Cabinet at Delmonico's This Afternoon and Gets Broadside Ready for Firing.

REPLY OF JUDGE M'CALL MAY BE MADE TO-MORROW

Hennessy Names a New Bagman, Charges $15,000,000 Steal, and Promises to Reveal Stilwell's Story.

The long expected answer of Charles F. Murphy to the charges preferred against him and his organization by William Sulzer and John A. Hennessy was prepared in Murphy's apartment at Delmonico's this afternoon, according to report current at Tammany Hall.

It was stated on behalf of Mr. Murphy that his side of the controversy might be ready to-night. The decision of Mr. Murphy to reply to the Sulzer and Hennessy charges was reached only after he had been importuned by many district leaders and others interested in the election of Judge McCall to do something to stem the tide which has been setting against the Tammany ticket.

Tammany Hall sources of information stated that Mr. Murphy would take up all the charges made by Mr. Sulzer and Mr. Hennessy and answer them all in detail. It was also stated that Mr. Murphy would endeavor to show that he had nothing to do with the reported interest of Tammany Hall in the withdrawal of Senator Stilwell or in the impeachment of William Sulzer.

In this statement Mr. Murphy, it was reported, will answer in the utmost detail every charge of Hennessy, and he will challenge Hennessy to comply with Gov. Glynn's request that Hennessy submit to him every bit of evidence he may have of fraud in the highways and canal departments.

Mr. Murphy will dare Mr. Hennessy to carry such information as he has to District Attorney Whitman or to the Attorney-General and permit these men to start investigations. He will deny that he has ever been connected with any financial transaction which was questionable.

He will deny categorically that he ever received a penny from Edward E. McCall for his place on the Supreme Court bench or that he ever got a cent from any other candidate for office in return for his nomination.

Hennessy Will Reveal Story Told by Stilwell

Former State Senator Stephen Stilwell, who was "whitewashed" by a Tammany Legislature despite evidence that later brought about his conviction on a charge of soliciting a bribe, had a five-hour conversation in his Sing Sing cell with John A. Hennessy, according to the latter, and the promise of Mr. Hennessy to reveal some of the Stilwell disclosures on Monday was a new talk-of twist in the political campaign to-day.

Mr. Hennessy said he would not rely on his own memory for the facts as related by Stilwell, but would produce the notes made by an expert stenographer at the other end of a dictograph connected with the Senate and a member of Tammany's inner circle. Of his conversation with Stilwell and of the $15,000,000 he declares Tammany is stealing up-State, Mr. Hennessy said in his speech last night:

"Of course," said Mr. Hennessy in his speech last night, "I can't tell all to you in detail, but I will tell you some things that will throw a spotlight on this pure and undefiled Tammany government you have had. They are stealing $15,000,000 of money up the State, and Murphy defiantly orders his Legislature not to appropriate any money in order to set after the criminals."

"The first issue of this campaign is Charles F. Murphy vs. the City of New York," said Hennessy. "The second issue is the dummy gentleman who is running for Mayor in the place of Mr. Murphy. I asked Mr. Murphy last Tuesday night what he did with the $5,000 in bills that Judge Beardsley handed to him, and he hasn't replied yet."

"Last night I gave him the names of a lot of other persons who had subscribed money, and he hasn't answered about that. They put Sulzer out of office because he got $20,000 or $25,000 or $30,000, and committed the awful crime of not carrying it down to Fourteenth street."

"Mr. Murphy says he is going to answer before the campaign is over. An honest man would not take five minutes to answer. I guess Mr. Murphy will answer when the bill is made for him by the sinuous-minded Jerome, by the agile-witted De Ranney Howell, and by the resourceful Stansfield. If these three cannot get up a good alibi for Charles Murphy his case is hopeless."

"I guess Murphy is trying to get somebody to stand for that Beardsley $5,000, but the trouble will then come
