

SCHMIDT'S FIGHTS WITH VICTIM TOLD AT MURDER TRIAL

Inspector Faurot Details Events of Tracking and Arresting Aumuelier Woman's Slayer.

Inspector Faurot, whose clever detective work furnished the crime of slaying Anna Aumuelier upon Hans Schmidt, now on trial for murder in the Court of General Sessions before Judge Warren Foster, was called to the stand to-day. He reviewed in detail the incidents of the arrest of Schmidt and the running down of clues leading up to this event.

He told me of finding one wire and cord and wrapping paper exactly like that found on the dismembered body. Much time was consumed in identifying the articles taken from the Broadway avenue flat. He then described the arrest of Schmidt by O'Connell, Cassano, and himself.

Dr. Arnold G. Lee of No. 30 West One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street said that Schmidt had called on him for medical treatment and also took Anna Aumuelier to him. In the physician's presence Schmidt and the girl quarrelled, each accusing the other of unfaithfulness. This was last April. At first Schmidt told the physician that he was a teacher of music. Later the physician saw him in clerical clothing and advised him to be more careful. Schmidt confessed that he was a priest.

"He told me at various times," said Dr. Lee "that he was very much in love with her and was miserable without her and was distracted and that she was away from him. He told me that he loved her so much he thought it was his duty to the church and himself and the girl to leave the church and marry her. Friction between Judge Foster and former Judge Olcott of Schmidt's counsel developed sharply during the examination of Dr. Lee.

DEFENSE COUNSEL CLASHES WITH JUDGE FOSTER.

"I desire," said Judge Olcott, "that all this testimony shall be admitted. I have refrained from making technical objections."

"Well," remarked Judge Foster, with a sarcastic smile, "I'm not keeping it out."

"What did you say, sir?" snapped Mr. Olcott.

"I said that I was not making any objection," replied the Judge.

"Did I say that?" exclaimed Judge Olcott in open anger, raising his voice. I was merely indicating a desire to apologize for seeming to interpose an objection in order to keep the record regular, but not to keep anything out of the record."

Assistant District Attorney Delahanty interposed with voluntary offers to change the form of his questions to put Mr. Olcott.

Dr. Lee dwelt on Schmidt's repeated and emphatic and almost frantic professions of love for Anna. The girl in her visits to the physician repeatedly showed anger with Schmidt. She called him vulgar names in the physician's presence, while Schmidt petted and calmed her, though doubtful as to her loyalty to him.

THOUGHT LOVE AND RELIGION WORRIED SCHMIDT.

"The surgeon said he had advised Schmidt to break with Anna because she was unworthy of him and beneath him mentally and in social training. Schmidt protested always. Dr. Lee reported to Mr. Olcott, that he "was sorry about Anna and couldn't live without her and wanted to marry her, but he did not know what he ought to do because of the best interests of the church."

"Say, I surely say," suggested Mr. Olcott, "that there was a constant disturbance and struggle between his love and his religious duty?"

"Yes," said Dr. Lee. "Exactly that."

Anna Aumuelier told Dr. Lee that she didn't want Schmidt with her during competition, saying that "He will do something to me; he is utterly crazy."

"On one occasion when I was at the rooming house," said Dr. Lee, "he broke into the consultation by jumping up, running across the room to a table and struck up a loud tune and sang a wild song."

"My impression was that he was trying to throw off something that was on his mind. It was eccentric and queer but hardly irrational."

He said Schmidt spoke of bathing at Atlantic Beach in April; the physician said it was a foolhardy performance.

"Have you heard," asked Mr. Delahanty of the Police Jury Association, of which our former Deputy Commissioner of Police is a member? Do you consider them irrational?"

"I don't know," said the witness, grinning.

"Of course," interrupted Judge Foster, "that which would be irrational in a man of ordinary life and habits might be rational in a priest, by a trained and seasoned outsider?"

"Yes," said the physician.

HAD TOO MUCH CARGO.

Seller Had Revolver and Black-Jack Loaded Regularly Lead.

A blubbery young man with a small coin bank in one hand and the other full of cigars emerged from F. C. Dillman's saloon at No. 141 Tenth avenue early to-day and walked in undulating curves into the arms of Policeman O'Connell. The policeman found he carried besides his other load a revolver and a blackjack.

At the West Thirtieth street station he said he was John Brown, a sailor, seventeen years old and with no fixed abode. The night bartender at Dillman's was awakened and said he had seen Brown in the place before closing time.

Charges of burglary and violating the Sullivan law were entered against him.

DOUGHERTY ACCUSED BY FORMER EMPLOYEE OF AIDING GAMBLERS

Stenographer Swears Deputy Diverted Money Given to Suppress Them.

In an affidavit filed in the Supreme Court to-day James V. Ortelero, former confidential stenographer to Second Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty, says that records in Dougherty's office show that the Deputy Commissioner diverted money given him for the purpose of suppressing gambling, and that he permitted gamblers at liberty and on parole to open gambling houses in this city when he was supposed to be enforcing the law against them.

Ortelero is suing Dougherty for $60,000 damages for alleged slander, growing out of Ortelero's dismissal from the Police Department. The former stenographer is now trying to compel Dougherty to undergo a court examination before the trial of the suit. He says that with the change of administration on January 1 Dougherty probably will lose his office.

Dougherty in his answer alleges that he dismissed Ortelero for violating rules of the department. He held Ortelero over as his confidential stenographer, Dougherty says, at the request of his predecessor, William J. Flynn, now head of the Federal Secret Service here.

Ortelero also accuses Dougherty of trying to make him the scapegoat for the Deputy Commissioner's own acts. Justice Ford, to whom the affidavits were submitted in Part I. of the Supreme Court, did not act upon the motion to compel Dougherty to testify. He permitted the motion to be withdrawn for the present.

Ortelero is represented by Attorney Charles L. Withrow of No. 27 Cedar street. Dougherty is represented by the Corporation Counsel. The former police stenographer is in business at No. 1966 Broadway.

WILLIAM ASTOR CHANLER REPORTED HURT IN DUEL

Rumor in Paris Is That His Injury Is in Reality a Bullet Wound—Friend Also Shot.

PARIS, Dec. 11.—Rumors are current to-day that William Astor Chanler's injury is really a bullet wound. It is further stated that Willie Lewis, the boxer, a friend of Chanler, is in the country suffering from a bullet wound in the foot.

Mr. McAdams, the sculptor, who is engaged on a bust of Mr. Chanler, said to-day that "automobile injuries" described Mr. Chanler's injuries "sufficiently well."
