

VILLA STARTS ARMY OF 25,000 ON WAY TO MEXICO CITY

Advance Force to Be Swelled to Bull Numbers Later for Attack on Capital.

NO BUTCHERY OF FOES.

Mexican Federals and Refugees in Hands of United States Soldiers in Texas.

PHOENIX, Jan. 11.—Gen. Francisco Villa, whose Mexican rebel troops captured Ojinaga Saturday night, has already begun his advance against Mexico City. It was announced at Ojinaga today that 1,500 Constitutionalists are to march to Saltillo, the terminus of the Orient Railroad, there to board special trains and return to Chihuahua. After resting for one week and being supplied with new mounts to replace those worn out by the Ojinaga campaign, these men will start for Torreon.

Other rebels will follow them from Ojinaga daily until only 800 are left for a garrison for the town.

"We are on our way to Mexico City," said Gen. Villa today. "We have 2,000 men here, and it will require a week to get the last of them out and on the way to where trains await them. Before going, however, we will make sure there are no lurking bands of Federals who might attempt to retake Ojinaga and use it as a base from which to harass our lines of communication with the border. We will proceed to Torreon, which we believe will now be evacuated by the Federals without a fight.

WILL BE JOINED BY ANOTHER ARMY AT TORREON.

At Torreon we will be joined by Gen. Lugo, 1,500 from troops from Sonora and the La Grana division, and we will begin a campaign against them. Reports were received here early today that Salazar and Orozco had been surrounded in the mountains west of Ojinaga, but there was no confirmation and the reports were discredited. Villa stated today that there had been any evacuation of Federal positions in war. All but a few of the Constitutionalists, the greater part of the army having escaped to the American side.

There are 4,000 soldiers and refugees, men, women and children in the concentration camp outside of Torreon today. All are without shelter or bedding and have no clothing except that worn when they fled pell-mell across the Rio Grande when Ojinaga fell Saturday night. There is much suffering and death, but no deaths so far. The Red Cross surgeons are caring for the sick, and all the pack trains of the United States troops here are being used to bring good food from Marfa, seventy-eight miles.

Gen. Villa ordered Major McNamee, an American commissioner, a band of 100 men to be dispatched to provide food for the refugees. Gen. Villa commanded the military department with headquarters at Fort Bliss, has ordered all the civilian refugees moved to Marfa, where they will be near the railroad. The Federal troops will be detained as prisoners with the close of the war, and it is said to be the first time in the history of modern warfare that a foreign nation has taken possession of this country to handle or when such a large body of foreigners has found such a refuge in a foreign country.

BATTLE LOSSES SLIGHT, SAY REBEL CHIEFS. The rebel chiefs announced today that their losses Saturday night were twenty-seven killed and forty wounded and that there were eighty-three Federal slain and 120 wounded. These figures are believed to be low, as there are many of the wounded in the Red Cross hospital here and most of the rebel wounded are being cared for by their own surgeons.

The rebels captured all of the Federal artillery excepting two guns which were brought across the Rio Grande when the defeated defenders fled. These were seized by the American patrol. It is said only a few of the Federal guns were disabled before they were abandoned.

MEXICAN REFUGEES HELD UNDER GUARD.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Disposition of the two thousand Mexican Federal troops and refugees who fled to Presidio, Tex., from Ojinaga will be entirely in the hands of Brig.-Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, commanding the American border force. The War Department so announced today. Gen. Bliss reported he had authorized Major McNamee to remove the prisoners to Marfa.

TWO ANTI-TRUST BILLS IN CONGRESS AS WORK RESUMES

One Measure Strengthens Sherman Law, Other Forbids Interlocking Directorates.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Congress got back to work today fresh from the holiday vacation to be greeted by the usual avalanche of bills and resolutions. Measures to conserve radium on the public lands of the United States, for the regulation of trusts, for various inquiries and the usual grist of special measures poured through the hopper of the House when Speaker Clark brought down his gavel.

In the Senate, a Congressional investigation of the Michigan copper mine strike proposed in a resolution by Senator Ashurst, was one of the features of the reassembling. Both houses got down to work promptly with the leaders determined to run the machinery at high speed and get away probably in June.

Representative Webb of North Carolina introduced his bill to strengthen the Sherman law by declaring illegal every contract, combination or conspiracy in restraint of "any part" of trade, and designed to reach so-called gentlemen's agreements or understandings. His bill would put the burden of proof of reasonableness upon the defendant. As a ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, he purposes to fight for action along the lines of his bill.

Representative McCoy of New Jersey, another Democratic member of the Judiciary Committee, introduced his bill to prohibit interlocking directorates among banks and trust companies. Both measures were referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Overman, who headed the committee which investigated President Wilson's charge of "a numerous and insidious lobby," introduced a bill to-day embodying his own views for the regulation of lobbyists. Defining what is lobbying, it specifies that no attempts shall be made to influence legislation except by appearance before a committee of Congress or in written arguments submitted by Congressmen. Fines ranging from $100 to $5,000 for failure to register lobbyists, as well as the use of improper or corrupt methods, are provided.

CREDITORS HIRE SEVEN TAXICABS TO CHASE ASSETS

Accuse Furrers Jacob Stein & Son of Trying to Put Stock in Hiding.

Seven taxicabs raced through the streets in the shopping district early today in pursuit of as many big motor trucks, in which, according to the creditors of Jacob Stein & Son, furrers, at No. 24 West Twenty-sixth street, the assets of the firm were being carted away to hiding places. A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed against the firm by its creditors and a receiver will take charge of its affairs.

According to the petition for a receiver filed in the Federal Court, the members of the firm knew that the bankruptcy proceedings were to be brought. The creditors say that they got word of a plot to remove the furs from the West Twenty-sixth street store and conceal them in storage houses. To checkmate this move, they called the taxicabs in which to follow the motor trucks in which the furs were being removed. Between 7:30 and 8:30 o'clock, the petition recites, seven taxicabs of assets were removed. In each instance a taxicab containing a representative of the creditors went racing after the truck and found out where the assets were being stored.

The debts of the firm are said to aggregate $200,000. In one of the petitions, headed by Morris Bobla, the claims are stated to be $2,000. The creditors allege preferential payments and that the liabilities aggregate $100,000 and the assets are worth only $10,000. In the second petition, by A. Michael Cohen, claims are given of $94. They also allege preferential payments, but do not state the amount of the liabilities.

Creditors of Louis Malvin & Co., furrers, of No. 114 West Twenty-seventh street, to-day filed a petition in involuntary bankruptcy in the United States Court. The company was said to have assets of $10,000 and to owe $20,000. A. Wickstein & Sons, Samuel Adler and Nathan Center, the petitioners, charge that the firm has concealed a large part of its assets.

Making Dresses at Home From Original Designs

What Can Be Done With Same Design Made of Different Materials and Trimmings.

By The Evening World's Expert, Mlle. Lodewick.

DESCRIPTION. Nowadays negligees lavish every art and artifice upon the vanity of woman. But that does not necessarily go to say that a great amount of money is expended, for there are many people with limited incomes who cannot afford it and are ingenious enough to make use of left-over lengths of materials from some of their afternoon and evening gowns. Also many times the evening gown itself, after having been discarded for its original use, is utilized for the boudoir. However, all evening gowns are not adaptable for such reconstruction, but light colored materials which have not been intricately cut, are splendid for the purpose. And many times bits of dainty trimming come in very handy, for nowadays the rosebud trimming, lace plaittings, fur, etc., share their popularity on evening gowns with attire of the more intimate personal sort.

The design I am showing is displayed on two figures, one of which has fur to trim with, while the other, quite in contrast, is trimmed with dainty rosebuds and lace plaitting. The skirt of the negligee is plain, in one piece if the material is wide enough, and otherwise has a seam in the back, the front being closed in tuck effect and left open part way from the bottom. Charmeuse or crepe de chine is a suitable material, while chiffon cloth in a matching color should form the little coatee sleeves in front to drop below the belt line under the arms and continue into a rounded peplum in back. In the wide front opening an under-bodice of the chiffon cloth, either plain or tucked, reveals itself and is belted with a slash of soft satin ribbon which terminates on the outside of the coatee in back with a smashing bow, which serves to confine the coatee to the figure. The ends of the bow drop gracefully from under the peplum. The soft uneven edge of the lace plaitting is most flattering to the face and neck.

daily chiffon cloth with natural color marabou to give it harmonious weight. In place of the plain in the skirt, a band of marabou and lace would be pretty, and in the back two sets in the coatee could be made, for it to pass through. The upper and lower portions of the negligee, though perhaps of different material, should match in color, but the dainty under-bodice may be of plain, net-work or white, in either chiffon cloth, tulle, batiste or all-over lace.
