

DIVORCE DECREE FAILS TO BREAK THEIR FRIENDSHIP

Parted by Law, Ex-Husband and Ex-Wife Leave Court Together.

A divorce decree, which ordinarily makes husband and wife strangers when they meet, had a vastly different effect on Edmund E. Stevens, a well-to-do iron manufacturer of Westchester street, Brooklyn, and his country, titian-haired ex-wife, Hazel.

Omega Oil For Sprains and Bruises

The best thing to do for a sprain or bruise is to cover the hurt with a little of Omega Oil. It relieves the pain and prevents swelling. Trial bottle free.

Mrs. Stevens's lawyer had compelled Stevens to stand up in court and be pointed out by two witnesses as the man who took a tall brunette to the Sea Gate Hotel on July 6, 1912, and registered himself and companion as "E. E. Stevens and wife." Mrs. Stevens sat in one corner of the big courtroom and flashed intense looks of scorn.

As Mrs. Stevens, handsomely attired, testified that she had only been Mrs. Stevens since July, 1912, she was the perfect picture of rage personified. Hatred of her husband seemed to dart from her eyes.

Other witnesses took the stand and told of Stevens's escapade. The iron man looked at times with the suspicion of a snicker in the direction of his wife.

Mrs. Stevens left the courtroom, making wide detour of the place where Stevens sat. Lawyers, the Stevens and witnesses met just outside the court-room.

"That was a very pretty picture the artist was making of you, Hazel," complimented the husband, moving up close to Mrs. Stevens. He referred to the sketch made by a newspaper artist.

"I'm not speaking to you, sir—er!" returned the newest divorcee, stamping her tiny foot and gazing at the floor. Stevens was unmistakably surprised.

"Oh, I thought it was quite nice," he answered.

The party moved to the staircase. Mrs. Stevens nudged over toward her ex-husband and whispered in his ear. Stevens glanced about him and the group went out into City Hall Park. Here another pow-wow was held.

At its finale Lawyer Michael J. O'Brien walked off toward Brooklyn Bridge with the wife on his right arm and the husband on his left. They talked pleasantly and with animation, so that divorce courts don't always make enemies.

INCONSIDERATE BABY PUT OUT OF THE COURT

Exercised Its Inalienable Right Before Judge Sitting at Murder Trial.

A crying baby upset for a time today the serenity of Judge Mulquhenn's part of the Court of General Sessions and interrupted the progress of the trial of Max Miniky, alias "Sherman," a gangster and one of half a dozen of his crew under indictment for the murder of Max Levine, another gangster, last April in the apartment of Moe Horowitz, No. 207 East Fourteenth street.

The baby belonged to Mrs. Horowitz, who is nineteen years old, and when she was called to the witness stand she took the child with her and held it on her lap. She testified that after visiting friends she went home on the night of the murder and found Levine's body on the floor of her room. It was at this point that the baby asserted its inalienable right, and a matron had to be called to remove the disturber of the peace.

Assistant District Attorney Brothman sought to prove by the witness that she had come to her home to get letters belonging to the defendant and that she had been coached as to her testimony by her husband, but she denied both suggestions.

Nathan Fourmutter testified that he was in the apartment with Levine when four men entered the room with drawn revolvers. Levine, he said, brought out his own gun and asked hurriedly for a cartridge. At this one of the four cried, "You don't need any!" And then the shooting began. Fourmutter said that thereupon he "beat it."

Indian Gun Carrier Goes to Prison.

Charles Mattawoz, a Silesian Indian, and the first redskin to be indicted under the Sullivan law, was sentenced today by Judge Nott in General Sessions to serve not less than one year and six months nor more than two years and six months at hard labor in Sing Sing.

HOW TO KEEP YOUR SKIN SMOOTH IN SPITE OF HIGH, COLD WINDS

Red, chapped faces and hands are as unsightly as they are painful, and it is a beauty, indeed, who can look attractive with a red nose. Cold wind not only chaps, roughens and reddens the skin, but causes it to wrinkle by drying out the natural oil that feeds the tissues. After being out in the cold, examine your face carefully in a mirror on which there is a strong light, then note the fine lines you didn't even dream were forming.

Don't get into a panic, though, fearing you are becoming prematurely old, but begin at once a common sense treatment with Vologon, an emollient so pure you could eat a tube a day without injury.

Gentle massage, together with Vologon, is an excellent cold weather treatment, as it stimulates the circulation and keeps the blood from settling around the nose, causing those "beacon lights" so many women are embarrassed by.

The regular use of Vologon keeps the face and hands smooth and white, even in the coldest, roughest weather. Follow these directions carefully for an exquisite skin and soft, velvety hands.

When you get up in the morning, after washing your face and hands, dry very lightly. While they are still damp, rub a little Vologon in thoroughly. Then with a dry towel wipe off what the skin has not absorbed.

Before going to bed at night bathe the face and hands in warm water, dry off most of the moisture. Then rub in a more generous quantity of Vologon than in the morning. Take a dry towel and wipe off lightly.

Then let your mirror show you how much clearer, fairer and fresher your skin is, and how much softer and whiter your hands are.

You will find a day's use makes an improvement—a week's regular use a wonderful difference.
