ARMY CAN'T RULE ENGLAND, ASQUITH DEFIANTLY SAYS; UNIONISTS DENOUNCE HIM

Premier Opens His Campaign as Opposition Holds Rival Rally at Hyde Park.

BETTER SPEECHES MADE.

Head of Government Declares Army Has No Place in Moulding the Laws.

LADY BANK, Scotland, April 4.—"The army will hear nothing of political from me, and, reciprocally, I will expect nothing moving of politics from the army," declared Premier Asquith here to-day.

The Premier was explaining the stand he will take in his new post of War Secretary, succeeding Col. J. H. B. Seeley, and his declaration was followed by enthusiastic applause from his Liberal supporters.

In thanking the delegates of the Liberal Association of East Fife for the formal adoption of his candidacy for re-election to the House of Commons, Asquith indignantly denied that there was any government plot to promote Ulster into an outbreak.

Declaring his assumption of the War portfolio, he declared he felt it was his duty and to the highest interests of both the State and the Empire.

Continuing his discussion of the army Asquith was again wildly cheered when he said:

"The army has no place and no voice in the moulding of our policies or our laws. The recent Tory agitation, permitting to officers to say where they shall or shall not serve, strikes at the root of army discipline and democratic government."

"There is a certainty that if things went on as they had threatened to do a controversy would have arisen which every patriotic man would have been anxious to avoid until a case of special urgency arose."

Paying a tribute to the army, Premier Asquith declared:

"The British army can be counted on from the highest to the lowest rank without qualification or reserve to undertake all the duties which its obligations require it to discharge. The army is not, and I pray may never become, a political machine."

"I am glad to see that the army is not, and I pray may never become, a political machine."

On the subject of the army, Asquith declared:

"The army is not, and I pray may never become, a political machine."

"The army is not, and I pray may never become, a political machine."

DOES UNCLE JOE TROT? "WATCH ME," HE SAYS, "ALL YOUNG MEN DO"

But Former Speaker Declares, as He Sails, He Wants Dancer to Dance With.

"Uncle" Joe Cannon sailed this morning on the Royal Mail Packet steamship liner Arcadian for Bermuda, where he is to have a rest—a sweet rest for the next two weeks.

"No," said the former Speaker of the House, "I don't want to talk politics. I am getting away from politics and all business. It's no secret where and how I stand, but I must say that I am surprised at the attitude of the New York papers on the toll-gate controversy. But it doesn't make any difference whether the newspapers suppress the truth or tell it, the country is pretty well informed on the situation, and it won't make a damn bit of difference in next November's elections."

"Uncle" Joe remarked that the Arcadian was a pretty fine ship and was told that there were 150 pretty young and unmarried women aboard.

"Do you tango?" Uncle Joe was asked.

"Oh, bless them, they are all right," he responded, "and I love to see them about. But you know I am looking for some one who can trot in my claim."

"Do it!" he returned, with a merry squint in his eye. "Yes, and trot some too. Watch me. Every young fellow does nowadays."

"Uncle" Joe will celebrate his seventy-eighth birthday this summer. He wouldn't say whether he was going back again in politics.

FOSTER FORFEITS BAIL.

Foster to Appear in Mobile for First Delilah Bradley Case.

MOBILE, Ala., April 4.—Joel M. Foster, millionaire poultryman of Brown's Mills, N. J., failed to appear in court to-day for trial on a charge growing out of his residence at a hotel here with Delilah Bradley of Pemberton, N. J., his eighteen-year-old stenographer.

VILLA LEADS ARMY IN NEW ATTACK ON VELASCO'S FORCES

While Torreon Recovers After Six Days Battle Rebels Pursue Federals.

STORY OF CITY'S FALL.

Dramatic Scenes Amid Death and Desolation as Victors Took Possession.

TORREON, Mexico, April 3, via El Paso, Tex., April 4.—This city, from which Gen. Rodolfo Velasco and most of the unfortunates of his command fled yesterday, was occupied by the Rebels in force to-day and the work of burning the bodies of the dead, clearing away the wreckage of shell shattering adobe walls, street barricades and barbed wire entanglements was begun.

While Villa took a large number of prisoners Velasco escaped from the canyon de Huasahuachi with a considerable proportion of his force. He was pursued last night by Gen. Hernandez, who to-day reported that he had fought a small rear guard engagement with the retreating force and later Gen. Villa with reinforcements left here to make an attempt to capture or annihilate it.

Non-combatants here with whom the Associated Press correspondent talked to-day, estimated Velasco's garrison did not number more than 5,000 men, of whom 1,500 were killed or wounded. When Velasco fled he left behind in the military hospital 300 wounded.

AMERICAN CONSUL PROTECTS 300 SPANIARDS.

When he rebels entered the place they found only one nurse, Dorothea de la Cruz, in attendance. She said that the other nurses followed the army.

The patients were in a high state of anxiety for they had been told that Villa took no prisoners. They were reassured by H. S. Cunard-Cummins, the British Vice-Consul at Gomez Palacio, who entered the hospital first, climbing over bodies of the wounded who had died there.

The British official announced that Villa had assured him none of the wounded would be harmed. Those who had the strength raised themselves on their elbows from their pallets on the floor and from their cots and cried a feeble "Viva Villa."

The nurse was soothing a dying patient, who with his last breath joined the cheering and then sank back dead.

Persons who say they were eye witnesses declare that Velasco summarily executed three Spaniards whom he accused of firing on his troops. The wife of one of these, Lotero Lopez, attempted to shield her husband and the same bullet killed both.

It was reported that Gen. Velasco himself was wounded, but this report, like the one that he went insane in the trenches, could not be confirmed and the impression prevails that he is still at the head of his troops. Two Federal Generals were killed and three wounded.

Villa was in his headquarters at Gomez Palacio Thursday night, when the Federal flag he could not see the end of the battle, and that morning had telephoned for bigger cannon, for it seemed as if his artillery was inadequate to dislodge the enemy from their positions in Huasahuachi.

PASTOR TOLD WIDOW HE, A WIDOWER, WAS QUALIFIED COMFORTER

So Says Former Sunday School Teacher in Story Told Church Court.

The secret trial of the Rev. Dr. Jacob Embury Price, pastor of the Washington Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, on charges of frivolous and over-affectionate conduct with women of his congregation was continued to-day in the Metropolitan Temple, Seventh avenue near Fourteenth street.

The first witness against Pastor Price to-day was Mrs. Hilma Dohl of No. 601 West One Hundred and Fortieth street, a young widow, who once taught Sunday school in the church. She told the court, she reported afterward, that she was forced to leave the church by Dr. Price's actions.

"I went to call on him on church business," she said, "and he sat beside me on a sofa and hugged me tight and said that since I was a widow and he was a widower anything we did to comfort each other was all right. He frightened me by his actions and I ran out of the house."

Mrs. Dohl was asked about efforts that had been made to keep her from testifying. She said she had been warned by Ephraim Hill, a friend of Dr. Price, that if she testified against the minister she would wish she had died first.

Miss Bertha Taylor also was asked her to keep away from the court, she said. But Mrs. Dohl said she opened her Bible on Proverbs xiv, 24-25, under the chapter heading: "Moral Virtues and Contrary Vices: 'Moral Virtues and Contrary Vices: '24. He that saith unto the wicked thou art righteous, nations shall abhor him."

But to them that rebuke him shall be delight and a good blessing come upon them."

"So," Mrs. Dohl said, "I took it as a finger of fate pointing out my course of action." Mrs. Dohl said the court did not question her regarding this divine direction.

Willbur F. Bruce, one of those who signed the charges, had only hearsay evidence and was excused. Heady C. Black, another who signed the charges, followed him.

Mrs. Lillian Miller, who left the stekbed of a son in Baltimore to attend the trial, told a story much like that of Mrs. Dohl. She broke down and wept while on the witness stand.

GIULIA MOROSINI BARS HERO HUBBY OUT OF HER HOME

but they refused to say anything. It was stated by persons connected with the household that Werner was not at Elmhurst.

Reuhs from a private agency in the pay of Mrs. Werner have been trailing Werner, it is said, for months. Whether Mrs. Werner intends to apply for a divorce cannot be ascertained.

The residents of Riverdale and lower Yonkers have spent much of their time of late discussing the affairs of Werner and his wife. Werner, they say, has been going his own way for some time. Mrs. Werner has not been seen much in the vicinity of her home since the first snowstorm.

The romance of beautiful Giulia Morosini had its birth seven years ago, when Werner, one of the smartest members of the Traffic Squad, was riding along a road in the Bronx on his prize horse, Mr. Jones.

Miss Morosini told her father of her adventure and Mr. Morosini sought out the policeman and found him a clever, fairly well educated, good looking young man. Werner knew a lot about horses and was tendered the position of manager of Mr. Morosini's estate, which he accepted in 1908.

At the time he rescued Miss Morosini, Werner was living apart from his wife. As superintendent of the Morosini estate he was thrown much into the company of Miss Giulia, who lived with her father. A son had become estranged because of a marriage that did not suit the old banker and another daughter, Virginia, had been cast off when she had eloped with a coachman.

Shortly after Werner took charge of the Morosini estate the elder Morosini died. Werner became practically the head of the establishment. His first wife went to Carson City, Nev., in the summer of 1910. She was identified supplied with money and fled a suit for divorce. Opportunely enough Werner made his appearance in Carson City and was served with the papers. Then he departed and Mrs. Werner got her divorce on Sept. 27, 1910.

Werner married Giulia Morosini on Jan. 12, 1911, at Somerville, N. J. The wedding was kept quiet until that evening, when the bride, the hostess of a large birthday party at Elmhurst, introduced Werner as her husband.

GIRL JOY RIDER KILLED, TWO STUDENTS HURT IN AUTO WRECK

There were no eye witnesses to the dash down the embankment, but the crash was heard by Caesar Oliver, night watchman on the bridge over the viaduct.

Oliver was standing in the doorway of the shelter house at the end of the bridge, when he heard the whir of the automobile as it went by, making a sharp turn to the right.

Oliver ran to the spot where the fence was torn away and groped down the embankment. Before he reached the bottom he saw the car upside down, the dead girl lying a few feet from it and the men, whose names he could hear, lying some yards beyond the machine, as though they had been catapulted forward when the auto turned over.

The watchman turned, scrambled back to the street and ran to the nearest telephone, a block distant, where he sent in a call for an ambulance from St. John's Hospital, and also notified the police.

By that time several men who had heard the sound of the wreck had reached the scene. Among them were firemen from a nearby engine house. As one of the injured men, regaining consciousness for a moment, had said: there were two women in the machine, the fireman and others righted the wrecked auto. There was no second woman under it.

"I guess she must have got away," the injured man murmured and lapsed into unconsciousness again.

As the ground at that point is swampy a search was made for a hundred feet in every direction, but no trace of the second woman could be found.

WILSON FORCED DANIELS TO FACE FIGHT IN SENATE

Refused to Allow Jerseyman to Withdraw From Contest for Appointment.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Confirmation of Winthrop M. Daniels of New Jersey as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, after the notable three-day Senate fight, was followed to-day by the revelation that Mr. Daniels asked President Wilson to withdraw his name and thus stop the contest, which he believed to be embarrassing the President, and that Mr. Wilson refused.

There was natural satisfaction at the White House to-day that Mr. Daniels had been confirmed. The sharp contest was regarded by officials as of importance in revealing the attitude of Senators toward the physical valuation of railroads.

White House officials said there was no truth in the story that the President had expressed to Senators his own views on the theories of physical valuation of railroads, but had merely insisted that Mr. Daniels would be a valuable addition to the commission with a fair and equitable attitude to all questions coming before it.

There was lively speculation and various attempts at construction of the President's support of Mr. Daniels in connection with the railroad situation. Senators to whom the President expressed his desire for Mr. Daniels' confirmation found the President taking the attitude that he expected only that Mr. Daniels would be fair. The opposition to Daniels arose out of his decisions in certain public utility cases in New Jersey, notably the Passaic gas case.

TRENTON, N. J., April 4.—Prof. Winthrop M. Daniels of Princeton to-day resigned as a member of the Board of Public Utilities Commission, following his confirmation by the United States Senate as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Gov. Fielder has announced that he would appoint former Judge John W. Treacy of Jersey City, to the Board of Utilities Commission to succeed Mr. Daniels.

"We talked a while and were getting ready to go to bed when the telephone rang. Betty answered it and I heard her say: 'Don't talk here. Wait till I go outside.' Then she went to the switchboard in the hall, but I heard her say: 'I will meet you at the Astor.' When she came in I asked her if she meant to go out at that hour, and she replied that she had to, but that she would be late. And that's the last I saw of her, the poor, poor girl."

Mrs. Farrell, who lives at No. 434 West Twenty-third street, called on Mrs. White to speak and said: "The women galled in each other's arms. Mrs. Farrell blamed herself again and again for the accident."

"It's because I didn't take better care of her," she sobbed. "I was older and should have looked out for her. Our home is in Fesper, Mass., and there were eight of us, four boys and four girls. Betty was the baby. We all worked hard and Betty was doing so well. The news will kill my mother, and I am to blame."

Neither Mrs. Farrell nor Mrs. White had ever heard of Mrs. Lyons, and at the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity house No. 100 West One Hundred and Fourteenth street, it was said that the girl was not known to any of the members.

It was early in the evening when the boys were eight or ten. Richter had been at the house last night. Richter was graduated from the School of Mines in February and was to have left for South America to engage in mining engineering for the Guggenheim. Schneider is still a student at Stevens Institute of Technology, but has taken a great deal of time at the fraternity house, having formerly attended classes at Columbia.
