

"MILLIONAIRE KID" THINKS MARRYING ACTRESS A MISTAKE

Didn't Return to This Country, He Says, to Be Reconciled to Wife.

BLAMES LONDON "SET."

Wife Got an Idea Over There of Sitting Up and Staying Out Late Nights.

Byron Chandler, once well known wherever Broadway's lights were brightest as "The Million Dollar Kid," very firmly denied to-day that he had come to this country to effect any sort of a reconciliation with his wife, Grace La Rue, the actress. Furthermore, he said that he did not believe there was any chance of a reconciliation, since matters had gone too far. Business, he declared, was what brought him to New York, and since his arrival he had made no effort to see his wife, who is stopping at the Hotel Claridge.

One thing Mr. Chandler made emphatic was the mistake any man made to marry an actress. He blamed a set in London headed by a noted aviator for the troubles between Miss La Rue and himself.

Mr. Chandler arrived in this city yesterday with his daughter and it was reported that he had said that he was here to "fix it up" with his wife if possible and take her back to live with him in France, but when he was found to-day by an Evening World reporter in the barber shop of the Hotel Knickerbocker, where he was having his nails manicured, did not seem to be at all cast down. He seemed quite willing to talk about his affairs while the pretty young manicure rubbed and polished at his finger tips.

"It was not to follow my wife that I came to this country," he said, with one eye fixed to see what sort of polish was being put on a nail. "It was business that brought me. Something unexpected arose and it was necessary for me to come over. I was not interviewed about Miss La Rue's starting legal proceedings against me. My conduct has been such that she could not get a divorce from me here in New York any more than I could get one from her. But I don't believe there is the least chance of any reconciliation between us. I don't mean to say that I would not like one, but matters have gone too far."

"It's been her fault more than mine, and my life in the last three or four months has been a hell on earth. My wife made a great hit in London and became the centre of a fast living crowd headed by an aviator and she got all sorts of ideas about sitting up late at night and going up in aeroplanes and all that sort of thing."

"One morning she came home at 4 o'clock and I asked her where she had been. She told me and I got up and went to another suite in our hotel for the rest of the night. Since then I have not spoken to her."

"I have been married for six years, and while I could be with her to watch over her welfare our life was as happy as could be. But when she was away from me, in London with the theatrical company and in that gay crowd where my influence was no longer available she broke away."

"There is no doubt in my mind that she wants to be single again and I can't do anything to stop her. I didn't come to this country to trail her, and I don't want any one to think that I can't live without her. I'll still be able to live and eat the meals a day no matter what happens."

"A man makes a great mistake in marrying an actress, no matter whether he is an actor or not. A man can't always be with his wife and know what she is doing. That applies to the man, too, so very soon they lose confidence in each other and the trouble's done."

Cash Premium Will Be Put on Motherhood By State in Ten Years, It Is Predicted

"ECONOMICALLY CHILDREN MEAN MORE TO THE STATE THAN TO PARENTS" HOWEVER, MISS RODMAN DOESN'T BELIEVE IN GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP

"We Already Have a Baby Strike," Declares Miss Henrietta Rodman, Educator, "and to Avoid Extinction the State Must Subsidize Motherhood."

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall.

Salaries for mothers! It is the indomitable and ever ingenious George Bernard Shaw who sounds this newest feminist war-cry. Whether you agree with G. B. S. or not, the abiding joy of him is that you never know in which direction he'll jump. Against the creeping paralysis of boredom he is the one most effective treatment I know, and if his place in literature depended on this—which it doesn't—we moderns would yet owe him a mighty debt of gratitude.

In his happiest hunting ground, the Fabian Society of London, he declared the other evening that women who bear children should be paid for their services to the community. "If I were a woman I should want $10,000 before I became a mother," he added naively. "Why shouldn't child-bearing be a profession for women?"

And why not a baby strike? Now, though Shavian originality and Shavian pliancy of utterance are a spice this proposition, there are a number of men and women in New York who are much interested in procuring some sort of compensation for mothers from the State.

One person whom Mr. Shaw's salary plan seems not to shock is Miss Henrietta Rodman, as she still prefers to be called despite her marriage two years ago. She has taught for many years in the Wadleigh High School, and is leading the campaign against the dismissal by the New York Board of Education of teachers who become mothers.

From a protest against penalizing motherhood Miss Rodman has reached the point where she frankly advocates subsidizing motherhood.

THERE IS A BABY STRIKE ON NOW.

"I believe that this country must come to it," she told me.

"For we already have a baby strike. There is no use in not recognizing the fact that everywhere women are refusing to bring children into the world under the conditions that now confront motherhood. The decreasing birth rate tells its own story, and in a few years at most the State will be compelled to read. Then for its own safety it must take measures to break up the baby strike."

"For some time there has been a general misapprehension as to the decrease of babies," continued Miss Rodman. "People said, 'It's only a small group of idle and selfish women among the very rich who refuse to become mothers.' But as a matter of fact the large and ever-increasing group of professional women are showing an unwillingness to bear children. Now it's obvious that these women can't be called idle. The open record of their lives is marked by activity and industry."

"And I don't think they can be called selfish. They are simply responsive to the spirit of the time. They are reluctant to sacrifice their usefulness to the whole for the service of a small group. Society penalizes motherhood in the case of the professional woman. If she is a school child in womanhood. For every dollar contributed by the individual the State should contribute another dollar and then, when the child grows up, married and in her turn becomes a mother, she should be automatically compensated for her temporary economic dependence.

"I believe that the union of a man and woman would stand a much greater chance of success if the woman were never economically dependent on her husband," added Miss Rodman.

"You wouldn't have the State take the children away from the parents altogether?" I asked.

"No, for the parents can help the children in a way possible to no one else. But though the associations between father and mother and children should never be broken, the latter should be under the care of trained experts for much of the time. That's where the help of the State will come in."

"And it will be given within ten years," prophesied Miss Rodman confidently. "All the radical proposals we talk about now will be accomplished facts in just a little while."

I wonder!

BISHOP CRUCIFIED BY MEXICAN REBELS WHO WANTED CASH?

Prelate Captured by Zapata Had Been Ordered to Pay $50,000 to Save His Life.

MEXICO CITY, April 6.—Grave fears that Bishop Campos of Chilapa may have been crucified by the hand of rebel Zapata are felt here to-day. Bishop Campos was captured by Zapatistas last week. It was learned. Zapata then demanded $50,000 of the Bishop, declaring that unless the money was produced he would be crucified on Good Friday.

Whether the rebel leader carried out his threat without waiting for the date set is not known, but the worst is feared, as Bishop Campos is known to have been without funds.

"By such a plan as this the Government would not pay for the production of undesirable citizens, and idle, dissolute men and women would not take up family-raising as a means of livelihood. Of course, too, the State should see to it that all moneys paid out for children be used to promote the welfare of children. Furthermore, I think that the State should keep a watchful eye on the children of uncertified parents, and that these little ones should be protected, even though a definite subsidy would not be allowed to the parents."

"Also there should be some system of motherhood insurance on the plan of an endowment policy. Such a policy might be taken out by the mother of a little girl, for the benefit of the

GIULIA MOROSINI PLANS TO BREAK MARRIAGE TO COP

New Superintendent Says Rich Wife Will Seek Annulment of the Ceremony.

WERNER WON'T CALL.

Husband Says He Has No Desire to Go Where He Isn't Wanted.

Mrs. Giulia Morosini Werner, daughter of Giovanni Morosini, once a partner of Jay Gould, barred her husband, the former policeman, Arthur M. Werner, from Elmhurst, the Morosini estate at Riverdale-on-the-Hudson, after she had determined to sue for an annulment of their marriage, according to Arthur H. Coombs, the new superintendent who has succeeded Werner in his $10,000 a year post.

Werner chose to-day to make light of his differences with his wife. He was at the office of his lawyer, Henry F. Dotzenheim, No. 15 William street, and through his lawyer issued this statement:

"I have not the slightest idea of going where I am not wanted. I have not the slightest notion of intruding myself on my wife's society until she wants to see me.

LAWYER SAYS WERNER WON'T GO NEAR HOUSE.

"The whole proceeding reminds me of a comic opera. Why all she needs is a battery of artillery and a troop of cavalry to make her defense of Elmhurst completely realistic."

That was all from Mr. Werner. He did not offer any explanation of his wife's action, nor suggest what his own course is to be now that he cannot enter the home which had been his since he married the beautiful Miss Morosini in 1911 following his rescue of the young woman when she was a mounted policeman. Mr. Dotzenheim spoke for him, however, as regards the proposal that Werner visit Elmhurst, just long enough to select and pack up his personal belongings.

"He is not going up there to-day to claim any of his effects," said Mr. Dotzenheim. "That's all I care to say now."

"She certainly has not," he said when asked whether Mrs. Werner had any evidence on which to base a suit for divorce.

Werner is still stopping at the Hotel Knickerbocker, though he had his room changed and this gave rise to the rumor that he had changed

Shark Fin Hats; Beads By Busbel; No Silk Skirts In Boardwalk Parade.

In the Palm Sunday parade on the Atlantic City boardwalk yesterday the main feature was the enormous quantity of beads worn by the women. Apparently no costume was complete without a string or two of beads. They were of all colors, every shape, size and composition. Dozens of the new Paris shark fin hats were worn. The silk skirt has almost completely vanished, and the decollete tailor-made gown has appeared.

his hotel and was at the Hermitage on the Manhattan. WONT ADMIT WIFE INTENDS TO SUE.

Friends attribute the present differences between Werner and his wife to the latter's belief that the former policeman had never ceased to care for his first wife, Mrs. Alice Redding Werner, who now lives at No. 222 West End avenue. It is said that Mrs. Giulia Morosini Werner for a month past had had as many as seventeen private detectives shadowing the former "cop." If Mrs. Werner intends to sue for a divorce, however, her attorney, Joseph P. Cotton Jr., will not admit it. He said:

"My client at this time will make no statement. Later she may have something to say for publication." Meantime Mrs. Werner is stopping with friends in Garden City, apparently so that she might not have to meet Werner if he called at Elmhurst to claim his possessions. Her brother, Giovanni P. Morosini, left his quarters in the Sherman Square Hotel on Thursday and accompanied his sister to Garden City. He returned to Elmhurst this morning, and it is said that Mrs. Werner will return on Wednesday.

Elmhurst is still under strong guard, with detectives at every entrance, and they have orders to admit no one.

When these first were summoned to Elmhurst Mrs. Werner told them to search the mansion thoroughly. Throughout the house they are said to have found revolvers stowed away in all sorts of hiding places.

Two of them were moving a large mahogany table on Thursday when an automatic pistol fell to the floor. Then revolvers were found in book-cases, secret drawers and even behind pictures. Mrs. Werner and her brother said they could not understand why the house had been transformed into an arsenal.

COUNTRY WITH HIM ON PANAMA REPEAL, WILSON DECLARES

WASHINGTON, April 6.—President Wilson told visitors to-day he considered that editorial expressions in the press and correspondence from disinterested observers all over the country revealed support of the Administration's stand for the repeal of the Panama tolls exemption. The President said he did not expect the question to be a campaign issue and expressed confidence for an Administration victory in the Senate.

DARKEN GRAY HAIR, LOOK YOUNG, PRETTY

Sage Tea and Sulphur Darkens so Naturally that Nobody can tell.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wigley's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

However flavory, tea should be strong. Happily, this is both.
