SLEUTHS TRAP BURGLAR.
 Man With Boys as Aides Caught in Store.
 Detectives Flood and Pico saw Walter Howard at 8 o'clock last evening, recognized him as a man with a record, and followed him. He was carrying a suit case and instructing two lads.
 The three were busy robbing Henry Riskin's clothing store, No. 509 1/2 West Forty-fourth Street, at 10 o'clock when the detectives grabbed them. Magistrate Herbert in the West Side Court this morning held Howard in $5,000 bail for trial, and his apprentices, Charles May and Richard Gagan, each seventeen years old, in $2,000 bail.

JEWELLER ROBBED OF GEMS LASHES POLICE INACTION

Silberfeld Says He Blew Whistle Vainly 10 Minutes After Thieves Broke Window.

ON BUSIEST BROADWAY.

Thief Vanishes in Flathouse and Escapes Pursuit by Store Watchman.

Henry Silberfeld, whose jewelry store was robbed last evening in the presence of a big Broadway crowd, was indignant to-day at the utter failure of the police to afford protection before the robbery or to do anything practical in pursuing thieves. His store at No. 1282 Broadway is next door above The World uptown office, at Broadway and Thirty-eighth Street.

"I blew a police whistle till my throat and lungs are still sore," said Mr. Silberfeld, "and fully ten minutes passed before a policeman appeared. We might all have been murdered as well as robbed, for all the help the police gave us.

"I think the policing of this district is outrageous. Here we are in the busiest, most crowded part of the city of New York at 7 o'clock in the evening, with crowds in the street, bright lights everywhere, and yet no one can find a policeman.

"I am going to see Commissioner Woods, and so are many merchants of the neighborhood, who have been suffering all sorts of petty robberies for weeks. The thieves come in from the west of us and just help themselves. We have grown used to that. But the robbery of my store last evening was deliberately planned by a skillful gang. It is not due to the police that they did not get the entire stock on show in the window, which is worth $75,000. As a matter of fact, they got only a few rings, worth about $3,000. What makes me sore is the complete failure of the police system to give me any kind of help.

Monday evening my wife saw two men studying our window and scrutinizing everything in it. They looked like thieves to her, and she hurried away to call me. When I got there, they were gone. This was at 7 o'clock, the hour we close for the day.

"The men had made a careful study of the place and our habits, for they had been starting in for twenty minutes before my wife called me. Their gang robbed us just twenty-four hours later. Evidently they had timed every movement of each one of us.

"Our watchman, Joe Piender, had gone to the rear of the store to fetch out the iron gate which is fastened over the window at night. My clerk, Jack Ruff, had opened the rear door of the show window and was about to take out some of the stock when a brick crashed through the glass front. All Ruff could see was a hand which grabbed at the rings. Ruff followed the man who had grabbed the rings. I followed too, but suddenly remembered that I had left the store unprotected and returned to the window and blew my police whistle.

"You would think that a man blowing a whistle in the heart of the white light district at its busiest hour ought to be able to attract a policeman. No such luck! There were five or six hundred in front of the broken window and I didn't know at what moment a thief might try for more jewelry, while apparently there wasn't a policeman on Broadway.

"The man who finally came, ten minutes after the theft, was called by the green flashlight at Thirty-ninth Street and Broadway—a fine help for us!

"Ruff followed the thief through Thirty-eighth Street, Seventh Avenue and west in Thirty-ninth Street, where he disappeared in a bathhouse. A policeman on post in Seventh Avenue told me later that some one—one of the gang, probably—had pointed out a Seventh Avenue car and told him the thief was in it, and that he caught it at Forty-second Street, only to find he had been fooled.

Twenty minutes after the robbery Gerard Murphy, the policeman on our post, came in and explained that he was down at the Thirty-third Street end of his beat. Of course, I don't blame Murphy; but I do think the system is very much at fault.

Capt. William A. Hatley at the West Thirtieth Street Station regretted that some one had not run to the Thirty-ninth Street flashlight station and pressed the button at once to call help. The blotter shows that the first telephone call was received at the Thirtieth Street Station at 7:17 P. M.

Murphy's post extended from Thirty-third to Thirty-ninth Streets from 8:30 to 1:30 P. M., while the traffic police were at supper, and he was busy at Thirty-third Street, helping with street traffic. He had passed Silberfeld's store a few minutes before the robbery.

Evidently the thieves had studied to the utmost detail the movements of every one who might possibly interfere with them.

TWO VICTIMS OF AUTOS.
 State Comptroller's Car Runs Down Man in Bridge Plaza.

Bernard Kenney, sixty-two years old, is at his home, No. 104 Roebing Street, Williamsburg, and Albert Friedberg of No. 109 Hopkins Street, Williamsburg, is at St. Catherine's Hospital recovering to-day from injuries received when they were knocked down by motor cars. The condition of each is serious. Kenney's mainly on account of his age. Friedberg, who is twenty-one years old, is believed to be internally injured.

Kenney was run down last night by the machine of State Comptroller Eugene M. Travis, at Division Avenue, as the motor was approaching the Williamsburg Bridge Plaza.
