VAUX FORTRESS HOURS OUT, BUT PARIS REPORTS GAINS; BERLIN CLAIMS A REPULSE

No Let-Up in Terrific Fighting Near Verdun, East of Meuse River.

BIG LOSSES REPORTED.

Capture of 5,000 Germans Is Announced From the Paris War Office.

PARIS, Oct. 27.—French troops have begun another drive at Fort Vaux, the last important position held by the Germans northeast of Verdun.

German artillery, the statement adds, is violently bombarding Chenois Wood and Fort Douaumont, which were captured by the French in their surprise attack last Tuesday.

The French troops are resisting these counter-attacks with great valor. Protected by an unceasing curtain of fire laid before them by the greatest guns ever used in war, the French troops hold every inch of ground they gained in their assault last Tuesday.

Bulletins from the War Office tell of the repulse last night of four violent German counter attacks against the Douaumont positions. The number of unwounded Germans already captured passes 5,000.

BERLIN (via wireless to Sayville, L. I.), Oct. 27.—French troops yesterday attacked German positions east of Fort Douaumont, but were completely repulsed under heavy losses, the War Office announced this afternoon.

"The artillery fighting," says the report, "was violent on the east bank of the Meuse, between Pepper Ridge and the Woivre."

"On the Somme front, besides a strong artillery fire north of the river, there were only reconnoitering engagements. On the south bank our efficient fire was directed against hostile trenches on the sectors of Frennes, Mazancourt and Chauques and held down a French attack which was in preparation."

LONDON, Oct. 27.—German artillery was active during a heavy rainstorm last night. North of Arras British troops successfully raided German trenches. Gen. Haig reported this afternoon.

FIGHT IN THE AIR THREE MILES UP; PILOT IS KILLED

ROME, Oct. 27 (via Paris).—A fight between an Italian dirigible airship and an Austrian aeroplane at a height of more than three miles above the Albanian coast, resulting in the dirigible after being destroyed by its own officer inside the Austrian lines, was told when King Victor Emmanuel conferred medals for valor on three members of the Italian air corps.

On the morning of Oct. 12, while off the Albanian coast in an Italian dirigible, piloted by Capt. Ercolo, with Capt. Corbelli and Capt. Albino as observers, was surprised and attacked at a height of 16,000 feet by an Austrian aeroplane.

The aeroplane, on obtaining a favorable position, turned its machine gun on the dirigible, mortally wounding the observers and disabling Capt. Ercolo's left arm. Ercolo, according to the official account, succeeded in overcoming the aeroplane and killing the pilot, but the dirigible was obliged to land thirty miles within the enemy lines.

Capt. Ercolo destroyed the dirigible. After two days of wandering and suffering from cold and hunger he managed to elude the Austrians. Reaching the mountains, he finally reached the Italian camp on the river Vojvodina.

King Victor Emmanuel to-day conferred a gold medal for valor on Capt. Ercolo and silver medals on Capt. Corbelli and Albino.

ROMANIANS FIGHT WHILE RETREATING BEFORE TEUTONS

Petrograd Admits a Retirement of Sixty Miles at Some Points.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 27 (via London).—Although offering stubborn resistance to the German-Bulgarian-Turkish forces attacking in Dobruja, the Russians and Romanians, according to to-day's official Russian statement, are retreating to the north of a line between Hirsova and Caspauk. This line is approximately between forty and sixty miles north of the Tchernavoda-Constanza Railroad line.

The statement adds that the forces of the Central Powers and their allies are continuing their attack along the entire front in Dobruja. Rumanian troops operating on the western frontier of Moldavia have captured the Transylvanians village of Italian and the Piatroctul heights. Fighting is continuing on both banks of the Danube River.

Small Turkish forces yesterday attempted to advance toward Sharafidin, six miles south of Zaret, on the Caucasian front, but they were repelled. In the Sakzk region (Persia) Russian troops captured a portion of a Turkish transport train.

SOFIA, Oct. 27 (via London).—The Russo-Rumanian army in Dobruja is in precipitate retreat north and west from the Tchernavoda-Constanza line toward Hirsova, Iralia and Tutcha, on the Danube, says an official statement of the War Office. The capture of fifteen officers and 771 men and fifteen machine guns is announced.

Tutcha has seventy miles north of Constantza, on the southern arm of the Danube and a few miles from the Russian frontier. Braila lies about seventy miles north of Cernavoda, on the Danube, and Hirsova, about twenty-five miles northwest of Cernavoda, on the Danube.

King Ferdinand despatched personal appeals to the rulers of allied nations to save Rumania from disaster after the Russian front, according to Budapest despatches.

The messages were sent following a stormy session of the Rumanian cabinet. Rumanian military leaders were said to have been harshly criticized by several of the Ministers, but supported by the King, who declared the Rumanian defeat was due to the fact that Russia had failed to supply the artillery and munitions she had promised.

Gen. Gill reports that his command was within a mile of Newala on Sunday, Oct. 22.

MRS. BEUTINGER'S FATE WITH JURY; STATE ASKS DEATH

ing come to her in the space of ten years—these are eloquent tokens of this woman's wifely fidelity, and yet Beutinger ill-treated her practically from the first year they were married. He beat her, threatened her, striking her once only a short time before one of these children was born.

"After Mrs. Beutinger had divorced him and gone to live under an assumed name to avoid him," Mr. McCarter continued, "he searched her out, played upon the children and finally induced her to marry him. Then what happens? They had been married in December and the Christmas bells had scarcely stopped ringing when Beutinger became false to her."

"It all concerned little Margaret's doll. Beutinger made women stand about why couldn't he make a doll stand? His theatre of action was women, children and dolls. So he took the little doll and twisted its legs."

"Little Margaret protested with tears and Beutinger, 6 feet 2 inches tall, a child. When his wife interposed he cried, 'I'll kill you!'"

When Mr. McCarter outlined the events of the tragedy, reading from Mrs. Beutinger's testimony of yesterday, she cried silently, her head resting almost on the shoulder of the court reporter.

BEUTINGER HAD A RIGHT TO LIVE, SAYS PROSECUTOR.

Prosecutor Newman, addressing the jury for the State, said: "Christof Beutinger may have been a brutal, lustful man, but he had a right to live. It is getting to be a mockery of justice that juries will not deal with a woman as they will with a man."

"This case has been well staged for sympathy, with the five little children of the defendant here in the courtroom, but I want you to weigh the facts as if these children were not here. I ask you to convict her."

"According to her own story she returned to live with the man who had abused her. She went back to a home and an automobile. Let us not forget that on Jan. 18, 1916, a preliminary decree of divorce was granted to her and on May 7 next the decree was made absolute, but before they were remarried on Dec. 23, 1915, and while the divorce was pending, she lived under the same roof with Beutinger in Yonkers. Was this the attitude of a chaste and pure woman?"

"The shadow of murder was in her heart in their home in Caldwell—the tragedy of July 11 was determined upon, premeditated. Mrs. Beutinger sent for a revolver and in less than twenty-four hours after it reached her hand the shooting was done. She shot to kill; she shot five times. One bullet struck her husband in the neck; the other four bullets were shown to have taken a downward course, indicating that he must have been below her when he was shot—so he was either sitting or lying when the bullets were fired.

"Why did not Mrs. Beutinger lock her door against her husband? She says she made three visits to her room the morning she shot him. She got up between the second and last visit and got her revolver and shot him when he came back again.

"There were several ways in which she could have escaped the advances of her husband. She could have left to lock herself in. She could have taken a downward course, indicating that he must have been below her when he was shot—so he was either sitting or lying when the bullets were fired.

"The Court then took up the testimony beginning with the quarrel at Caldwell, which immediately preceded the tragedy. Mr. McCarter said:

"It is also for the jury to decide whether the defendant believed herself to be in danger of her life."

SEVEN ARMED MEN SHOOT UP A HOME, HUNTING A WOMAN

Drive Up in Auto and Terrorize Family Who Gave Her Refuge, Is Charge.

Seven armed men breaking into the home of Charles K. Dahl near Hempstead, L. I., late last night kept the neighborhood in a state of terror until this morning. One was arraigned to-day before Justice Walter R. Jones at Hempstead. The county officers are searching for the others.

The raid, according to the testimony of Mr. Dahl and his family, was led by John McGovern, twenty-two years old, who lives at No. 32 Hemlock Street, Cypress Hills, an employee of the New York and Long Island Traction Company. McGovern, it is said, has been separated for the last six months from the Dahl family on Freeport Road near Hempstead.

It is charged that McGovern and his six supporters drove in an automobile to the Dahl house before midnight and knocked. At the sound of their motor car, Mrs. McGovern hastily wrapped a blanket around her sleeping two-year-old baby Frederick, and fled out by the back door to the home of a neighbor, where she has since remained in terror.

The Dahls refused to let the raiders in, whereupon they declare, the band smashed the door and, entering the front room, began to shoot through the windows.

When all had emptied their pistols, Mr. Dahl, followed by his sons, Frederick and Charles, got clubs and went at them. Two of the invaders, it is asserted, seized Mrs. Dahl, shook her and beat her with their fists when she would not tell where Mrs. McGovern and the baby had gone.

Soon the young Dahl drove McGovern into a corner, where he pulled a door in front of himself barely in time to ward off a club that was aimed at his head. The club was followed by his aides. They jumped into the automobile in such haste that one of them, Harry Cooney, was left standing in the street. The Dahl boys grabbed him and held him till the constable took him to the Freeport jail.

RIGHT TO KILL IF SHE BELIEVED SELF IN DANGER.

During the Judge's charge the court room was crowded. Half of the spectators were women or girls in their teens. Judge Martin said Mrs. Beutinger must be convicted of first degree murder or acquitted. He continued:

"If the defendant had been apprehensive that her life was in danger she had the right to protect herself, even to the point of taking the life of her adversary. The law requires that she should retreat in such a case, if she could safely do so. It is for the jury to decide whether she could safely have done this."

"It is also for the jury to decide whether the defendant believed herself to be in danger of her life."

with its processions of grotesque Black Cats, Witches, Goblins, Ghosts, Skeletons and other characters of horror and mystery, who always assemble at the Carnival of Memphis for their annual festivities.

It is celebrated by the boys indulging in every known variety of malicious mischief. The city kiddies certainly envy the country chaps when they listen to how they hugg the village dentist's sign on the blacksmith shop, and the butcher's sign on the barber shop—how they took old Si Brown's wagon apart and hoisted the wheels to the top of his barn and floated the wheels in the creek, but here in the city the kiddies are more civilized, and the younger people celebrate with Hallow'en Parties, where they play games and have all sorts of wholesome sport.

What would a Hallow'en party be without candy and favors, and what a wonderful line of Hallow'en Novelties we have just now?
