HARRY THAW ATTEMPTS SUICIDE AS POLICE ARE ABOUT TO ARREST

GERMANS MUST SURRENDER ALL THE INVADIED TERRITORY, ALLIES REPLY TO WILSON

Reparation Demanded for Belgium, France, Serbia, Roumania and Russia—Big Awards to Italy—Turks Required to Quit Europe.

LIBERTY AND SECURITY FOR ALL SMALL NATIONS

LONDON, Jan. 11.—It has been learned by the Associated Press that the Entente reply to President Wilson makes specific designation of its terms of peace. These include the restoration of Belgium, of Serbia and Montenegro and complete reparation for the damage they sustained, and the evacuation of the invaded territories of France, Russia and Roumania, with such reparation as is considered just.

The retirement of the Turkish Empire from Europe and liberation of Italians, Slavs, Roumanians and Czech Slavs from foreign domination are also required.

While Russia's claim to Constantinople is not specifically alluded to, one clause is considered directly to mean the replacement of Turkey by Russia at the Dardanelles.

The assurances of Emperor Nicholas of Russia concerning Poland are indorsed.

The terms also provide for the reorganization of Europe, guaranteed by a stable regime and founded upon the respective nationalities and the full liberty and security of all great and small nations.

While Alsace and Lorraine and the Italian Tyrol are not specifically named, yet the terms require the restitution of territories previously severed from allied nations by force or contrary to the wishes of their populations. This is considered clearly to refer to Alsace and Lorraine and the Italian Tyrol.

REAL PEACE OR WAR GOES ON, ULTIMATUM OF LLOYD GEORGE

Premier Declares Fighting Is Preferable to Prussian Domination—Say That Is Made Clear in Reply to Wilson.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—Premier Lloyd George, speaking in the Guildhall this afternoon, said Emperor William had told his people that the Entente Allies had rejected his peace offer. The Emperor did so, he said, to drug those whom he could no longer dragoon. "We had rejected no peace terms," the Premier said. "We were not offered terms but a trap baited with fine words. It would suit Germany to have peace now on her own terms. We all want peace but it must be a real one. "War is preferable to Prussian domination of Europe. The Allies have made that clear in their reply to Germany, and clearer still in their reply to the United States. "With proper support our gallant armies will cleave the road to victory during 1917."

The Premier's speech was delivered at a meeting in Guildhall held for promoting the new "Victory loan." Thousands jammed the streets and packed every available bit of space in the Guildhall. Lloyd George was granted a tremendous ovation and there were prolonged cheers for both Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law and former chancellor Reginald McKenna. ALLIED NATIONS ALL LOOKING TOWARD ENGLAND. The British Premier said he had been impressed at the recent conference over the "increasing extent to which Allied peoples were looking toward England." "I am more than confident," he continued, "that Britain will not fall in the trust thus imposed on her. Our navy has strangled enemy commerce (Continued on Second Page.)"

NO LEAK EVIDENCE TO BACK CHARGES MADE BY LAWSON

Chairman Henry Recommends No Further Inquiry Be Held Based on Tip to Wall St.

WRANGLE IN THE HOUSE

Whole Matter of the "Tip" to Wall St. Again Threshed Out—Lawson a Puzzle.

By Samuel M. Williams. (Special Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Chairman Henry of the Rules Committee reported to the House of Representatives this afternoon that the Wood resolution calling for a special investigation of the peace "leak" charges should lie upon the table, as his committee's inquiry had not disclosed "one particle of evidence to sustain the charges contained in said resolution."

Representative Campbell of the Republican members of the committee, made a minority report calling for the appointment of a special investigating committee. This was followed by animated debate and the whole subject, Lawson, "leaks" and Wall Street stock speculation, was fought over again on the floor of the House.

The point at issue was whether to approve the Henry report, which would put an end to further inquiry into "leak" scandals. A vote will be taken on the subject first thing tomorrow.

In the mean time the problem of what to do with Lawson is held in abeyance. No action was taken by the committee on the contempt charges preferred against him. It is understood that if the House sustains the Democratic report and drops further "leak" investigation, the prosecution of Lawson is likely to be pressed. The House will be called upon to vote him in contempt and his case will be turned over to the District Attorney for action in the courts instead of before the bar of the House.

If, however, the House rejects Chairman Henry's report and orders further investigation, Lawson will be given another opportunity to reveal the names of his informants and disclose the identity of the Congressman who told him about the Cabinet officer, the Senator and the banker who were alleged to be in a pool for speculative purposes.

There is some division of sentiment among Democratic leaders of the House over the advisability of shutting off all inquiry into "leak" rumors while the names of prominent officials are still mentioned in gossip. The Republicans are endeavoring to make the most of these unsupported rumors for political effect and to discredit the Administration.

In the Rules Committee executive session the Democratic majority voted down all save one of the various resolutions being offered for "leak" investigations. What is known as the first Wood resolution was not acted upon, as it was supposed to be superseded by a second, which was the principal one involved. Technically, there is still one resolution before the committee not adversely (Continued on Fourth Page.)

'OLIVER' IDENTIFIES RAE TANZER AS HIS OLD SWEETHEART

Picks Her Out in Courtroom and Tells of How He Wooed Her.

"TERRIBLE!" SHE CRIES.

Young Woman Much Excited and Is Finally Taken From Courtroom.

Charles H. Wax, otherwise "Oliver Osborne," and Rae Tanzer met today in the Federal District Court, where Franklin W. Safford is on trial for perjury. Unhesitatingly, Wax, who was on the witness stand, picked out the young woman as the one he wooed in 1914 and declared that she was his companion at the Kensington Hotel in Plainfield, N. J. It is for swearing that the "Osborne" who registered at the hotel was James W. Osborne, the lawyer, whom Rae Tanzer sued for $50,000 for breach of promise that Safford, formerly the clerk of the hotel, is on trial.

Rae Tanzer was much excited as Wax identified her and told of the many times he had been in her company and of how he had dined in her home. Her eyes flashed and she clasped and unclasped her hands nervously. Her lawyers wanted her removed from the courtroom after the identification, but at the request of William Hand Jr., special prosecutor, she was forced to remain where she was while "Oliver" continued the story of their romance.

As the testimony continued she grew semi-hysterical, at one time crying out: "This is terrible." Finally Judge Hand permitted her removal from the courtroom.

ADMITTED HE WAS TWICE CONVICTED AND SERVED TIME. Wax was called to the witness chair as soon as court was reconvened for the afternoon session and questioned by Mr. Rand, the special prosecutor. He said he was born in Gloversville thirty-six years ago. He left there when he was twenty-one and served for three years in the United States Army, attaining the rank of quartermaster sergeant. His service was in the Philippines, from which he returned in 1904. He had also been an interpreter in the Moro language.

Q. When did you live in New York City? A. In 1914-1915. Q. Were you ever convicted of crime? A. Yes, here in New York under the name of Hudson, I served ten months on Blackwell's Island for grand larceny.

Q. Ever convicted elsewhere? A. Yes, in Oregon for forgery. Q. How long did you serve? A. I was sent up for from one to five years.

Q. Did you serve your term? A. No. I walked away after about a year. Wax then told of coming to New York in 1914 and going to live at Mrs. Denham's lodging house in East Sixty-first Street.

Q. Before you left New York did you see Mr. James W. Osborne? A. Yes. I left the city about five days after I saw him.

RAE TANZER BROUGHT IN AS 'OLIVER' TESTIFIES. While Wax was testifying, Rae Tanzer was brought in by two women friends and took a seat on a sofa (Continued on Fourth Page.)

Harry Thaw, Who Tried Suicide As Police Arrived to Arrest Him

ELECTRIC SHOCK KILLS BURGLAR IN M'VICKAR MANSION

Body Through Which 2,200 Volts Passed Found in Home Near Edwin Gould's.

Noting that the porch and front hall lights of the McVickar mansion in Broadway, Dobbs Ferry, next door to the Edwin Gould place, had not been shining since late Tuesday night, neighbors notified the agent of the property to-day. Otto Wagner, a Hastings electrician, was sent to make an investigation.

Wagner found the body of a man under the switchboard in the cellar and, by circumstantial evidence, was able to piece out the story of a burglar killed by his own booty. The McVickar mansion is unoccupied, but electric porch lights and some other lights within the house are kept turned on all the time, this being a custom in country sections of Westchester, the idea being that burglars seeing the lights may be scared away. The McVickar lights went out about 9 o'clock Tuesday night.

Wagner's investigation shows that a big, blonde, roughly dressed man pried open a window of the mansion on the ground floor some time Tuesday evening and entered. Starting at the top of the house the intruder carefully collected fixtures and utensils of brass and copper, which he placed in a bag. The bag was very heavy when he got to the cellar.

The switchboard is quite elaborate and equipped with a lot of copper and brass. The burglar, working leisurely, sat down on his bag of loot and with a metal case-knife started to unscrew the lower metal fittings of the switchboard. In this way he

BIG BATTLESHIP CORNWALLIS SUNK BY A TORPEDO

Thirteen of the Crew of 750 Reported Missing by British Admiralty.

LONDON, Jan. 11.—The British battleship Cornwallis, of 14,000 tons, was torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean Sea Tuesday, according to an Admiralty announcement to-day. Thirteen of the crew are missing. The seaplane carrier Benmyohree also has been sunk.

The Cornwallis was built in 1901 and carried a crew of 750 men. She was capable of a speed of 18 knots and was 405 feet in length. The Cornwallis carried Krupp armor and the following guns: Four twelve-inch, twelve six-inch, twelve three-inch, six three-pounders and four torpedo tubes.

JAIL FOR COAL FRAUD.

Brooklyn Dealer Gets 30 Days for Giving Short Weight. Nicholas Chendero of No. 179 Grove Street, Brooklyn, a coal dealer and driver, was sent to the workhouse today for thirty days after he was convicted of giving short weight coal to a customer.

Justices McInerney, O'Keefe and Herrman in Special Sessions pronounced sentence after it had been testified that Chendero on Nov. 19 bought 1,500 pounds of coal and then sold it to M. F. Holla of No. 34 Evergreen Avenue as a full ton.

got into the way of the current of 2,200 volts and died about half a second. There are no marks of identification on the clothing of the dead robber. The only tool he carried was the case-knife. The body has been taken to the morgue in Dobbs Ferry. (For Racing Entries See Page 8.)

THAW SLASHES HIS THROAT AND WRISTS AND MAY ALSO HAVE SWALLOWED POISON

Tries Suicide as Police Enter His Philadelphia Hiding Place to Arrest Him on Charge of Kidnapping and Flogging Boy.

HAS CHANCE TO RECOVER, SAY HOSPITAL PHYSICIANS

(Special by Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.) PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 11.—Harry K. Thaw, central figure in the country's greatest murder case, made a desperate attempt to end his sensational career here to-day. He cut his throat and his wrists in a room in the boarding house conducted by a Mrs. Yaco, at No. 5260 Walnut Street. He is now in St. Mary's Hospital on Walnut Street in a serious condition, but it is expected he will recover.

Dr. John Wanamaker, 3d, a police surgeon, said cursory examination of Thaw's wounds indicated he had a fair chance to recover.

Thaw was unconscious when he reached the hospital. His condition puzzled the surgeons and gave rise to the intimation that before slashing himself he might have taken poison. Members of the hospital staff say it will take some time to determine his exact condition.

A search for Thaw, instigated by District Attorney Swann of New York, which had spread all over the Eastern United States and Canada, was suddenly concentrated in Philadelphia at noon to-day, when Capt. Tate of the Detective Bureau learned that the fugitive had been in this city ever since the news of his indictment for the crime of flogging young Frederick Gump with a whip reached here on Tuesday. Reports of his flight in an automobile and his presence at various points in eastern Pennsylvania probably were sent out by persons wishing to throw the detectives off the track.

Capt. Tate received what he considered authentic information that Thaw was hiding in a house near Fifty-third and Walnut Streets in the vicinity of the scene of an automobile accident last May, in which a car belonging to Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, mother of the fugitive, figured. Thaw testified in court here last Monday in a civil suit arising out of that accident.

Detectives in charge of Lieut. Wood were sent to the corner of Fifty-third and Walnut Streets in a fast automobile. Somebody was there to give them the right information, for within several minutes minutes Wood and his men were rushing toward the front door of the house in which Thaw was hiding. Wood rushed to Thaw's room.

TWO DIFFERENT STORIES OF SUICIDE ATTEMPT TOLD. One story is that Wood found Thaw sitting in a chair calmly watching the blood spurt from the cuts on his wrists, and that Wood and the other policemen made tourniquets for his arms and bound up his throat. Another story is that Thaw slashed himself before noon and notified his mother over the long-distance telephone to Pittsburgh and that Mrs. Thaw then telephoned to the Philadelphia police headquarters.

On the way to the hospital Thaw lapsed into unconsciousness and remained in that condition for about five minutes. When he awoke he began shouting hysterically, gradually giving way to weeping as Dr. Kirby and Dr. Salvey, the latter the first to be called to the house, succeeded in quieting him.

"I was sitting in my office in the City Hall shortly before 2 o'clock," said Dr. Kirby, "when the telephone bell rang. I answered and it proved to be a long distance call. I don't know yet where it came from, but a voice at the other end of the wire said:

Thaw's family. Harry to No. 5260 Walnut Street and save his life." "As soon as I received that message I notified Capt. Tate of the Detective Bureau and immediately left for the house. That is all I know about the mysterious message." There was considerable delay in removing Thaw to the hospital. When he was carried out of the house on a stretcher with his face covered with a blanket a great crowd had gathered. The neighborhood is one of the finest in Philadelphia. When the ambulance started on the long trip to St. Mary's Hospital a long line of sputtering, honking automobiles fell in behind. Thaw's insistence that he be taken to St. Mary's Hospital made the police suspicious and he will be strongly guarded as long as he remains there. New York detectives, who came here after Thaw, do not think his attempt at suicide was serious. They are of the opinion that he realizes he is in a tight place and has taken steps to create sympathy for himself. Thaw, during his stay in Philadelphia, had taken feverish interest in the mystery surrounding the murder of Maudie Colburn, the model, at her apartments, Fifteenth and Poplar Streets. He had spoken of the crime several times to reporters, and on one occasion recently intimated that he had some inside information about "wealthy clubmen" who might be connected with the crime. It is considered significant that "This is a member of Harry K. Thaw should have followed the ex-
