

HAPPY WOUNDED HEROES DIVIDE HONORS WITH MARCHERS

WOUNDED SOLDIERS, WRAPPED IN BLANKETS, SEE PARADE ENGINEERS, GUARD COLORS; GOVERNOR AND MAYOR ON WAY

WOUNDED IN PRIVATE STAND AND "BOXES" OF THEIR OWN SEE EVERY DETAIL OF PARADE

Sentiment of All Is "No Wonder We Hate to Leave New York."

SENT IN AMBULANCES.

Only One Unfortunate Incident Reported, When Police Remove K. of C. Chairs.

It was the 27th's Day, but New York was more than ever mindful of wounded soldiers. Whatever the division they fought with and whether they came from Maine or Oregon or Texas or Alabama.

One young man from Montgomery, sitting among 500 happy youngsters in a covered stand in the garden of the Henry Clay Frick place at Fifth Avenue and 124th Street, summed it all up when looking out upon the avenue and across to Central Park.

"And they wonder why we fellows hate to leave New York?"

Men who paid five, ten, twenty dollars more for vantage points along the avenue had nothing on the installed soldiers of Greenwich Base hospital in Sixth Avenue. Army trucks loaded with wounded men from this hospital carried their passengers one block east at 9:30 and stopped at the edge of West 21st Street. The street was cleared of all other vehicles. There was no crowd. The army trucks were the equivalent of so many boxes at the Polo grounds.

About 600 men from the Greenwich Hospital were among the most cheerful of the spectators. In spite of their wounds most of them were not so incapacitated that they could not rise and salute the colors as they passed. What appeared to interest them most was the contingent of wounded men in automobiles. As soon as they caught sight of the medal wearing men in the automobiles a kindred response went up from every throat, and soon repartee was tossed back and forth from the sidewalk to the slowly moving cars.

"What did you do to get that?" cried one man, pointing to a bandage arm. "You've got nothing on me," and he stuck out a foot heavily swathed in bandages. The wounded men bombarded each other with showing gum and cigarettes, and those who were able to retrieve the articles, shared them with their "bunkies."

Thirty of the men were brought from the hospital in rolling chairs

SCORES ARE HURT AS CROWDS SURGE TO VIEW PARADE

More Than 100 Injured in Jam of 20,000 at Madison Square.

More than 100 persons were injured to-day in the rushing and surging of a crowd of more than 20,000 in and around Madison Square. The parade was held up at this point time and again. Instead of marching under the Victory Arch at 10:20 o'clock, the head of the column did not reach that point until 11:30. Among those known to have been injured are:

Rheta McCarthy, nineteen, of No. 228 East 28th Street; Bellevue Hospital.

Gertrude Zigas, twenty, No. 413 West 41st Street; Bellevue Hospital.

Patrolman Robert Holson, Delancey Street Station, hit to his home, No. 212 Wythe Avenue, Brooklyn.

Miss McCarthy was knocked down by a policeman's horse and trampled upon by the crowd. Miss Zigas was knocked down and trampled upon. Holson was knocked down and his right ankle injured. He was taken away in a patrol wagon.

Veteran policemen said Madison Square, always a point where trouble may be looked for on a parade day, never witnessed such a spectacle as was staged there to-day.

There was one thin line of uniformed policemen against a mass of people from forty to one hundred rows deep. Citizens in the forward lines tried their best to do as the police told them. Those further back, mindful only of their own desire to get up front and see something, continued to push and shove.

The police line was broken again and again.

Police Inspector Boettler, in charge of the detail, telephoned to Headquarters frequently to ask for more mounted men. While he was in the mouthed at one time 125 mounted officers rode through the Avenue as an escort to distinguished visitors on the way from City Hall to the reviewing stand. A large part of the mounted escort came back to Madison Square subsequently, but not until many had been injured and the patrolmen on the job were worn out.

Even the rascals and the twenty-four non-commissioned officers who carried the gold-stared service flag of the division fared badly. The men were overwhelmed by the rush. At one time it looked as if the banner would be tumbled over. At 2:24 P. M. the parade was held up while an effort was made to clear the Square.

Capt. Heider Walker of the 160th Machine Gun Battalion marched at the head of the non-coms, and when they reached the Arch drew his bayonet and cut the silver-colored silk string that stretched across it. Caisson and gold-stared banner were carried under the Arch and immediately there was a frenzied rush of men, women and children. Sergt. Walker was among many who were knocked down.

At about noon the mounted police got back from the reviewing stand and with great difficulty backed their horses up to form a new bound-dary line. Word was given to ambulances from Bellevue, New York and Roosevelt Hospitals and the machines ploughed through the crowds to clear a way.

Soldiers and sailors in uniform were of great assistance to the police, and as bad as the jam was in Madison Square, it might have been worse without the help of young men of the army and navy.

John Ichenberg, seventeen, Asbury Park, N. J., in a Central Park tree near 62d Street, fell to the ground. At the Reception Hospital it was said he had internal injuries and his condition was serious.

Anna Herdman, sixty-eight, of No. 52 East 129th Street, was struck by an automobile at 112th Street. She suffered a broken leg, right thigh fractured; treated at Harlem Hospital.

Isidore Needin, fourteen, of No. 232 West 122d Street, fell from a second story window at a glass portico, striking a man standing on the sidewalk. At Mount Sinai Hospital he was found to have a broken left leg, fractured arm and laceration of the face and hands.

Mrs. Gertrude Couhm, thirty-four, of No. 107 East 118th Street, collapsed at 79th Street and Fifth Avenue. She was taken to her home.

Emanuel Caubet, thirty-four, of No. 114 East 91st Street, fainted at Fifth Avenue and 91st Street and was removed to his home.

Angelo Ronevo of No. 145 East 91st Street, a wounded soldier sitting in a chair at 57th Street, collapsed at noon due to the sun. He was removed to Grand Central Palace Hospital.

Doris Evans, twenty-seven, of New Rochelle, fainted in an automobile at 45th Street, and was removed to Bellevue Hospital.

Patrolman John A. Dolan, in a jam at 26th Street, was run down by an unidentified automobile driver and removed to Bellevue. His left ankle was broken.

Dora Minkowitz, thirty-seven, of No. 40 Rutgers Street, was "kicked" by an automobile at 116th Street; removed to Mount Sinai Hospital, unconscious.

Billie Gustau, twenty-four, of No. 128 Manhattan Avenue, fell from the remaining wall of Central Park at 84th Street and the Transverse Road. She suffered injuries to her head and was taken to Knickerbocker Hospital.

Minnie Ryan, thirty-seven, of No. 128 West 63th Street, was stricken with epilepsy at 69th Street and Fifth Avenue. She was taken home.

Adelaide Fugleby, five, of No. 216 West 124th Street, was struck by an automobile at 124th Street and Eighth Avenue. She was taken home.

Minnie Burnbaum, fifty-eight, of No. 84 West 107th Street, fell off a ledge of rock on the East Drive of Central Park at 190th Street. Her injuries were not determined, but she was taken to Harlem Hospital.

John Kelly, seventeen, of No. 2804 Eighth Avenue, fell from a truck at 40th Street and Fifth Avenue. He fractured his ankle and was taken to New York Hospital.

head and wrist and was taken home.

The square at 10th Street and Fifth Avenue, where Gen. O'Bryan reviewed the parade, became a seething mass of humanity shortly before 1 o'clock, when the several thousand people who had filled 110th Street east and west to Madison and Lenox Avenues broke past the cordon of mounted policemen and filled the open space.

The mounted police charged the crowd in an effort to drive it back into 110th Street. In a moment the mob began charging. Several women, some with children in their arms, fainted when the horses came near them. Ambulances carried them away for medical attention.

The line was broken just after the automobiles loaded with wounded soldiers had passed.

While crossing Second Avenue at 34th Street, John Mayer, blind, sixty-four years old, of No. 672 Second Avenue, was struck by a Second Avenue car. He suffered contusions of the chest and was taken to Bellevue Hospital. His condition is not serious.

Patrolman Morris Greenberg of the Arsenal Station was knocked down by an automobile owned by Mrs. Long of No. 137 Riverside Drive, which was being driven by Joseph Schrenback of 22 East 53d Street, while on duty regulating traffic in Central Park at the east drive off 87th Street. The policeman suffered contusions of the back and hip, but was able to proceed to his home, No. 6 Convent Street. No arrest was made.

While watching the parade from the top of the Knabe Building, 29th Street and Fifth Avenue, and on hearing the music, Cornelius Sperstein, who lived at No. 166 West 36th Street, failed to notice a skylight which covered an air shaft of the building. He broke through the glass and fell through to the bottom, and was instantly killed.

Six persons were hurt when an iron grating in front of No. 137 Fifth Avenue, near 112th Street, collapsed. Dr. Shapiro of Harlem Hospital treated them. Julia Lavin, fifty, of No. 88 Gerard Avenue, the Bronx, suffered bruises and possible fracture of both legs. Sarah Goffman and her sister, Julia Goffman, of No. 18 East 120th Street, were cut and bruised.

John B. Delaney and Mabel Delaney, of Rochester, suffered cuts and bruises. They refused to leave. A seven-year-old youngster, William Rosenberg, of No. 76 East 118th Street, suffered a mashed foot and had to be sent home.

John Kelly, seventeen, of No. 5804 Eighth Avenue, Brooklyn, fell from a truck at 40th Street and was treated for a fractured ankle at New York Hospital.

Minnie Burnbaum, fifty-eight, of No. 84 West 107th Street, fell from a truck at 106th Street in Central Park. She was taken to Harlem Hospital with a possible skull fracture.

THOUSANDS UP ALL NIGHT TO SEE DESIGNERS FINISH

Jam Fifth Avenue From Washington Square to Central Park to View Decorations.

Fifth Avenue was a jam of buses, motor cars and pedestrians last night as thousands sought to see Victory Arch, the Public Library decorations at 42d Street and the Arch of Jewels at 60th Street. Bus drivers frequently had to leave the avenue and drive to other streets to get out of the traffic jam.

And the pushing, shoving crowd of motorists and workmen rushed to completion the decorations and grandstands. Hundreds of stores built seats in their show windows, decorations hung and fences erected to keep the crowd from breaking windows to-day.

GOV. SMITH LEADS NOTABLES TO SEE PARADE OF 27TH

Pretty nearly everybody who is anybody under the present City Administration—Judges, Aldermen, State Senators and Assemblymen—and officers of the army and navy, of this country and our Allies, gathered at City Hall shortly after 8:30 o'clock. Fifty automobiles were on hand to convey them, the city's guests, to the reviewing stand.

Long before the arrival of the Mayor's Committee of Welcome and the guest crowds began to assemble in front of the City Hall, Gov. Alfred E. Smith, accompanied by his two youngest sons, Arthur and Walter, was among the first of the dignitaries to arrive. Cheers greeted the State Executive, many of the crowd being from his home district. Members of the Governor's military staff met him in front of the City Hall.

Grover Whalen, Mayor Hylan's secretary, introduced the guests to Gov. Smith and the Mayor. There were no ceremonies whatever and at 9:15 the waiting automobiles were filled and, preceded by a half dozen policemen on motorcycles, started uptown, led by the automobile containing Gov. Smith and Mayor Hylan.

One automobile was filled with wreaths. On the way up Fifth Avenue to the reviewing stand Gov. Smith placed them in the Court of the Dead in front of the Public Library at 42d Street.

All of official Albany, headed by Lieut. Gov. Harry Walker, arrived at the Grand Central Terminal at 5 A. M. on a special train. There were seven hundred in all—members of both branches of the Legislature, the Court of Appeals, the Board of Regents and the various state commissions and their women folk. Two hundred others who commute from New York to Albany for official purposes joined the pilgrims at breakfast at the Waldorf-Astoria. Rodman Wamsaker, as Chairman of the Mayor's Welcoming Committee, was the host for the big party.

Wheatsworth
They loved them Over There—They'll be asking for them Over Here—Wheatsworth Whole-wheat Biscuit—just the crispest, most delicious cracker you ever tasted.

Uncle Sam bought thousands and thousands of boxes for his boys in France. He knew that Wheatsworth not only "tasted" better, but were more nourishing. Good at meals and between-meals with fruit and cream. At all grocers, 15c a package. Made from famous Wheatsworth Whole Wheat Flour.
