KNOW HAL CHASE PLAYED CROOKED, MAGEE TESTIFIES

Swears Reds' Former First Baseman Told Him He Would "Fix" Games.

CINCINNATI, June 9.—The name of Hal Chase, former first baseman of the Cincinnati Nationals, dominated the cross-examination of Lee Magee to-day during the closing hours of the trial in the United States District Court of the suit for $9,500 brought by him against the Chicago National League Club.

Attorney Murray Seasongood, representing the defendant, questioned Magee minutely regarding his relations with Chase during the time that they played together on the Cincinnati team in 1915.

"Isn't it true that you wanted to get Chase out of the Big League," Attorney Seasongood asked the witness.

"I may have meant Chase, and I may have meant an official when I told baseball writers that 'if I jump off the bridge, somebody has got to jump with me,'" Magee answered.

"You knew that Chase was a crooked ball player?"

"Yes."

"Is it true that Chase cut his hand purposely?"

"Yes; that is what he told me."

"Did Chase tell you that he would fix games in New York?"

"Yes, he said that he would fix it for the Reds to lose."

"What did Chase say to Jimmy Costello when you and he went to see him on the morning of July 25, 1915?"

"I merely heard him say that he wanted to make a bet."

"Did Chase tell Costello to bet the money on Boston?"

"I didn't hear it."

Magee denied positively that he knew that the bet was made against the Reds and declared that "a man ought to be put out of the league who would bet against his own team."

The witness denied that he had told President William Veeck of the Chicago Nationals and President John Heydler of the National League, that he had committed a crime against baseball and repudiated the "midnight confession," mentioned in the testimony of Veeck and Heydler.

The case will reach the jury by tonight.

$500,000 THEFT OF CARUSO JEWELS CALLED 'INSIDE JOB'

Robber Knew House and Had Key to Strong Box—Loot Believed Nearby

HUNT 'BURGLAR TRUST.'

Million Insurance Carried by Tenor—Wife, Called by Alarm, Misses Robber.

The stolen Caruso jewels, valued at half a million dollars, and the man or men who stole them are not far from where they were taken is the belief of the detectives on the ground at East Hampton and of District Attorney Young of Suffolk County. In the language of the police it was an "inside job."

The thief was familiar with the house and its surroundings, the movements of the family and the servants and the location of the strong box holding the treasure of pearls, diamonds, platinum and gold. He knew where the key of the box was kept, for the strong box was opened with its key. The one thing familiar was the fact that the box had attached to it an automatic alarm.

He chose an hour, evidently, when Mrs. Caruso was known to be out of her bedroom and the servants were downstairs. It was at 10:30 o'clock last night when the famous tenor's wife was sitting in the parlor on the first floor, sewing, with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Park Benjamin Jr., as her companion.

Mrs. Caruso's bedroom is on the second floor in one of the wings at the side of the house. It opens through a door on to a balcony which is reached from the outside by a stairway, leading from the garden. The thief went up the stairway and found the screen door hooked on the inside. He cut away part of the screen and let himself into the bedroom by lifting the hook. He crossed the bedroom to another apartment where the box was kept, obtained the key and started to open the box.

The moment he touched the box, the alarm started a bell inside ringing violently.

This was heard by Mrs. Caruso and Mrs. Benjamin, who started for the stairs. The thief then grabbed the box, which was of wood and less than a foot square. He ran back through the bedroom window and down the balcony stairs, through a little flower garden and to the back of one of the garages, the bell ringing furiously all the while.

The servants were aroused immediately by Mrs. Caruso and lights appeared in all the upper rooms. One of the chauffeurs named Fitzgerald told the police that he heard the bell ringing and rushed out into the darkness with his revolver in his hand. He thought he saw the figure of a man and fired three times in its direction. He followed, guided by the tell-tale bell and then the ringing ceased. A little later he stumbled over the empty box. Not a stone had been left.

Mr. Caruso is in Havana. Mrs. Caruso is in New York.

During the examination of Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith this afternoon in the trial of Police Inspector Dominick Henry, on a charge of perjury growing out of Henry's testimony against the Prosecutor before the Grand Jury, Justice Weeks asked Smith:

"Do you mean that a year ago you characterized the police situation in New York as to gambling, street women, hold-ups and burglaries as worse than ever before in your memory?"

"I do," replied Smith, "and what I said is still more true to-day than it was then."

JOHNSON'S MEN CHARGE TRICK IN CONVENTION RULES

Change Made From Old Order Under Which Nomination May Be Delayed.

CUTS OUT STRONG CARD

Platform May Be Presented Before Nominations and Rob Johnsonites of Advantage.

(Special From a Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)

CHICAGO, June 9.—Not until the convention had adjourned this afternoon did it occur to the Johnson forces that perhaps the Senate combination in charge of the convention had put something over on them in the shape of an addition to the order of business of the convention. The addition was announced by the Committee on Rules.

At present the order of business runs in ten sections, the final being the nomination of the candidate for Vice President. The Rules Committee added Section 11, called "Unfinished Business," designed to clean up anything left undone in the regular order.

Now for the nigger in the woodpile. Under the old order of business the platform must be adapted before the nominations are made. With the new rule of "unfinished business" adopted the Johnson people figure that the engineers of the convention plan to keep the resolutions committee in session and drag proceedings along until the delegates get uneasy and then suddenly move that the report of the committee on resolutions be put down into the order of "unfinished business" and the nominations be taken up at once. This would mean the nominees would have to wait for the platform.

The possibility of the shift has made the Johnson people boil over. Anything but the old order doesn't suit them at all, because they figured on gaining great advantage in a debate over the platform prior to the nominations.

Anyhow, the situation this afternoon is more complicated than it was this morning.

RESOLUTE AGAIN DEFEATS VANITIE

NEWPORT, R. I., June 9.—Resolute defeated Vanitie again to-day in the official try-outs for America's Cup defense honors.

OLD GUARD TAKES FULL CONTROL OF G. O. P. CONVENTION

Candidates Mere Pawns in Fascinating Battle Between Masterful Politicians.

PENROSE IN COMBINE.

Decision in Hands of New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts Delegation.

(By David Lawrence. (Special Correspondent of The Evening World.)

COLISEUM, CHICAGO, Ill., June 9. (Copyright, 1920.)—The inside story of what is happening at the Republican National Convention is a fascinating battle between masterful politicians. The candidates are only pawns. And the most striking development is that the real "Old Guard,"—namely Senator Boies Penrose and his associates in the senatorial group, including former Senator Murray Cane of Massachusetts—have quietly taken charge of the whole situation.

The key to it all lies in the hands of the New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts delegations and the various moves of the last twenty-four hours indicate that Leonard Wood will be eliminated by a combination of Johnson and Lowden strategists. Then Lowden will be eliminated by a coalition of the same forces, assisted to some extent by the defeated Wood lieutenants and the final effort to put Hiram Johnson over will be made in all sincerity by the senatorial group with the full expectation that the rank and file of the New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts delegations will decline to accept the California Senator, leaving the field to a dark horse, who at this writing would appear to be Philander C. Knox, if Senator Johnson will agree to run as Vice President and Gov. Sprout of Pennsylvania if Senator Johnson refuses to agree.

HITCHCOCK WINS SPURS AS POLITICAL MANAGER.

Considerable of a flurry was followed the brilliant move by which Frank Hitchcock, leader of the Wood forces, secured control of the Credentials Committee. This veteran politician quietly went to work in each delegation three days ago and saw to it that one of his own men was selected by each State to sit on the Credentials Committee. With a majority of thirty out of forty-eight members, Mr. Hitchcock would be able to unseat many Lowden delegates who had been previously seated by the National Committee.

But while he is worrying Tobias Hart, the Lowden general, the latter will surely carry the fight to the floor of the convention if Hitchcock does attempt rudely to throw out Lowden delegates. Nevertheless a blow has been suffered by Messrs. Hart and Will Hays which may affect their prestige in the convention" and correspondingly Mr. Hitchcock's stock as a leader has gone up.

Paralleling the strategy whereby the Wood forces routed the Lowden

Gov. Morrow of Kentucky Gets an Ovation in Presenting Report of Committee on Permanent Organization, and Is Now in the Running—First Woman Addresses a National Convention.

By Martin Green. (Special Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)

CHICAGO, June 9.—Prospects of a long convention were enhanced to-day by the failure of the Committee on Resolutions to report a platform. After a short session the convention adjourned until to-morrow, when, if the platform is ready, there promises to be considerable of a debate before it is adopted. In this debate, the Hiram Johnson-William E. Borah combination will come out in the open and roar like a lion and things will begin to move.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge was made permanent chairman and was the most popular man in the Coliseum when he announced that, inasmuch as he had talked a lot yesterday he would refrain from making a speech to-day.

HARMONY THICK AT CHICAGO AS IN A DOG FIGHT

Lowden Booster at Dinner Finds Boast of Making Money in Illinois a Boomerang.

By John H. Tennant. (Special to The Evening World.)

CHICAGO, June 9.—The whole Republican Convention situation last night was epitomized in a scene in Verdy's restaurant on State Street, where fifty or more delegates from half a dozen states had gathered for garlic and something in China cups that looked like gumbo but wasn't. Their delegate badges proclaimed that they favored no many candidates as there were groups. Passing the raviola state of the table de hote, a six-footer with a bald head and a Lowden streamer arose from his table and waving his long ape-like arms sang out: "Who are we all for, boys?"

In one grand chorus came back the harmony echo of the convention: "LOWDEN! JOHNSON! HARDING!"

There you have it!

But the Lowden shouter was not to be disposed of so summarily. He followed with another rallying cry for the Pullman checkbook: "Lincoln, Logan and Lowden; how do you like that?"

"Twenty-five Hundred Dollar Lowden at home," answered a Californian who might have been a half-brother of Hiram's.

"I was born in Indiana, raised in Ohio, but I didn't have a damned red cent until I came to Illinois," shouted back the fellow with a big gold bear on his coat.

Across the aisle a Harding boomer was moved to remark: "Go back over the long trail and stay with the Democrats."

And so it ran throughout the dinner. The only peace and harmony in that neighborhood was on the face of a smooth-faced old man who was being snatched by a lady barber in a shop two doors away.
