

HARDING GETS O. K. OF GREAT THROG IN FIRST SPEECH

Personality, No Less Than Words, Approved by All at Marion.

LOOKING HIM OVER.

Was First Opportunity for Most of Them, Despite His Long Public Service.

By David Lawrence.
MARION, O., July 23 (Copyright, 1920).—No one who heard the speech of Senator Warren G. Harding accepting the Republican nomination for the Presidency could have failed to be impressed with the utter earnestness and good intention of the man.

Entirely apart from the skilfully worded phrases and well balanced sentences, almost scientifically composed to give the minimum of offense and the maximum of comfort to the great body of voters whose ballots are wanted next fall, the Republican nominee revealed a personality of simple but solemn appeal. He pledged himself in prayerful tones not to achieve the impossible but to do the best he could with the immense job of the Presidency if elected.

The speech satisfied its hearers, who were mostly Republicans. It did more than that. It thrilled and enthused them. With all due respect to the length of time Harding has been in public life, he was still an unknown quantity to the Republican leaders. Every man is an unknown quantity so far as Presidential campaigning is concerned until he is once nominated. The Republicans came here to size up Harding.

Was it wise for him to stay on the front porch? Was he a mixer? Was he capable of the task entrusted to him by the Republican National Convention.

And the answers to all these questions were enthusiastically in the affirmative. More than one Republican who had been urging that Mr. Harding leave the front porch and go touring went away believing that if the Senator would confine his campaign speaking to a dozen or so prepared speeches either in Marion or in three or four big cities like New York, Chicago and Boston he would make just as effective a campaign as could be made by back platforming all over the country.

The speech of acceptance was acclaimed by the Republicans who heard it as a masterpiece of exposition, an eloquent and thoughtful presentation not only of Republican doctrine but of the pathways of safe and sound administration in a troublesome era.

It was apparent that the portions of the speech referring to foreign policy struck deep chords of approval. Unquestionably as time has elapsed since the first presentation of the covenant of the League of Nations as the wearisome debate on the Lodge reservations and the vigorous campaign conducted by Senators Borah and Johnson have implanted certain impressions of new and strange ways for America in her foreign policy under the League, so was it easy for Senator Harding to touch the notes of a foreign policy of McKinley's day and gain thereby a hearty response. This was an audience that seemed tired of present day troubles, domestic and foreign, and appeared eager, ever so eager, to go back to the old days, if it was only to speak of normal times in a fond

OHIO MAN CHOSEN TO HEAD DRY TICKET

Aaron S. Watkins Named to Replace Bryan—New York Author as Running Mate.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 23.—With the National Convention finished and a ticket placed in the field for the fall campaign, Prohibition delegates to-day were on their way home and the newly elected National Committee was making its plans for the coming campaign.

The convention adjourned shortly after naming Aaron S. Watkins, a Germantown, O., school teacher, as its standard bearer and D. Leigh Colvin, a New York author, as his running mate. The nominations came after William Jennings Bryan nominated Wednesday had sent word that he could not accept because he wished to remain a Democrat, although he had "not decided how he would vote this fall."

DENMARK RUNS LOTTERY.

Offers of Tickets Sent Here in Violation of Law Repudiated.

A report that the Danish Government is conducting a lottery in which invitations have been sent to people in the United States contrary to postal laws of this country, was to-day placed before postal authorities for investigation.

SAILOR KILLED IN FIGHT.

Follow Porto Rican Held on Charge of Using Knife.

A fight between two Porto Rican sailors in front of No. 122 Clinton Street, Brooklyn, last evening, ended with one of the other held in the Adams Street Station on a charge of homicide.

Jacinto Tenasser, twenty-three, who has been living at No. 355 Gold Street, is alleged to have stabbed Alberto Senise, twenty-two, of No. 118 W. 11th Street, through the heart with a penknife. Detective William Brown says that the fight was over money.

Three Hurt in Runaway; Milk Upset.

Brooklyn streets were sprinkled with milk to-day when a horse drawing a milk wagon driven by Israel Schwartz, No. 363 Howard Avenue, ran away at Pitkin Avenue and Douglas Street. The wagon shed bottles of milk at every bump as the pushcart peddler and shoppers leaped for their lives. Julius Freedman, No. 181 Amboy Street, and Annie Selligman, fifteen, No. 1949 Douglas Street, were struck and bruised. Patrolman August Schreiber, riding the horse, Schwartz suffered bruises.
