

SAY CHEW IS NOT ENTITLED TO WEAR HIS WOUND STRIPES

Court Martial Reveals That Business Men Thought Captain Was a Banker.

When the court martial of Capt. Beverly Grayson Chew is resumed at Governor's Island on Monday, records of the 1st Division, with which he served in France, will be introduced in an effort to show that the shell shock which he claims makes him irresponsible could not have been suffered by him in his army experience. It is said that Chew was relieved from his command on Jan. 21, 1918, for "incompetency in handling men," and, further, that the records will show that he is not entitled to wear his two wound stripes.

It was brought out at the court martial yesterday that bankers and business men got the impression that the Captain was Beverly Chew, of No. 17 West 43d Street, former Vice President of the Metropolitan Trust Company, and that some of the worthless checks alleged to have been passed by the Captain were cashed because of the mistake in identity. Paul Hudson, Secretary of the Bankers' Trust Company, where Capt. Chew had an account, was puzzled over the fact that the account was overdrawn and only discovered the mistake in identity when he spoke to Banker Chew. Investigation showed that Capt. Chew was the man who was overdrawn, and word was sent to him and his wife at No. 45 Riverside Drive, where they were living then. Mrs. Chew, it was said, made good the overdraft and closed the account. It was brought out that the Captain's wife tried to open an account with Abraham & Straus, and was refused when it was learned that the impression that she was the wife of the banker proved erroneous.

One of the charges against Capt. Chew is that he passed a bogus check on Franklin Simon & Co. Mr. Arthur of that firm told of having sent clothing to the Captain's Riverside Avenue address, having taken it for granted that the banker had ordered it.

The prosecution is trying to show that Capt. Chew's wife was in Washington on Oct. 15, when a check signed Jean S. Chew was cashed at the store of Woodward & Lothrop.

Oscar Overend, cashier of the concern, identified a letter signed Jean S. Chew, dated Hotel Astor, Oct. 14, no year. Mrs. Chew denies any connection with her husband's activities, stating that he had another woman with him.

George B. Chew, father of the Captain, admitted yesterday that he had told Capt. Sherman Burke at Camp Meade, Dec. 20, 1920, that his son met his wife on the streets of Washington without an introduction. The prosecution had previously tried to show that the elder Chew had told Burke that his son's troubles were due to his wife and that he did not know of their marriage until three months after the event. Capt. Burke will be called as a witness.

A. B. GWATHMEY JR. ASKS DIVORCE

Wife Denies He Lives in Florida and Gets Injunction Restraining Court Action.

A divorce action on the ground of desertion, which Archibald B. Gwathmey Jr., wealthy cotton broker, filed against Mrs. Isabelle C. Gwathmey in Monroe County, Florida, April 26, was revealed yesterday when Mrs. Gwathmey obtained from Supreme Court Justice Martin an order temporarily restraining her husband from prosecuting the suit. Argument on the motion to make the injunction permanent will be heard by Supreme Court Justice Donnelly to-day.

Mrs. Gwathmey, who was Miss Coomes of New Haven, and Mr. Gwathmey were married secretly Oct. 1, 1915. They met while he was a student at Yale. From 1916 until Sept. 20, 1919, when she alleges her husband abandoned her without cause, Mrs. Gwathmey says they lived in the apartment house at No. 49 West 72d Street, owned by her husband's father. She reviews the court actions through which she was turned out of the apartment by her husband and his father.

She points out that in order for her husband to sue for divorce in Florida he would have to reside there two years and says his claim of residence there is fraudulent. She alleges that in June, 1919, he pleaded with her to go to Reno and get a divorce so that he "could live his own life," and promised to provide for her handsomely and turn over half his fortune to her if she would comply with his wishes.

Paper Makers' Strike Still Fails of a Settlement.

ALBANY, June 2.—Representatives of the Paper Workers' Unions and the paper manufacturers again to-day failed to reach an agreement over the differences which have tied up the paper making industry all over this country and Canada for nearly a month.

The manufacturers and the unions have agreed to arbitrate the wage question, but the men are insisting on the eight-hour day and the forty-four-hour week. The strike followed the announcement of a 30 per cent. cut in wages by the companies and a return to the nine-hour day.
