ALL U. S. SIZZLING IN HEAT WAVE THAT IS GRIPPING CITY

Only Flagstaff, Ariz., Gets Relief in Sudden Drop From 105 to 48.

OVER 91 DEGREES HERE.

Humidity Makes It One of the Stickiest Days—Many Are Prostrated.

The prediction that the thermometer would register above 90 to-day, made by the Weather Bureau this morning was fulfilled this afternoon when at 2:30 o'clock the temperature was 97 and the mercury was still climbing.

The heat wave from which New York is suffering is general over nearly all the country. And if it is any satisfaction to know it, it is just as hot in Canton, N. Y., as it is in Miami, Fla.

Up and down the coast and in the Middle West it is sizzling with a promise of local showers that may break out anywhere. Even New York is likely to get them. By a strange freak, the coolest place in the United States to-day is Flagstaff, Ariz.

There the mercury is down to 48 degrees. Arizona and California were neck and neck for the heat record, the thermometer registering 106.

The thermometer at noon to-day in New York registered 85 degrees, which is just 6 higher than it got at the same time yesterday. To-day the temperature started in around the 80s at 8 o'clock and grew with the day. The humidity, to which is due that feeling that your underwear has become a part of you, was 85 per cent at 10 o'clock.

It had dropped a bit at noon but not enough to notice it. There was a flash for a while when it got to 72 per cent, but anything above 50 in the humidity line demands a mark down sale to make the goods popular with the public.

There does not appear to be any relief in sight except what may be furnished by showers, and that prediction holds good for the next forty-eight hours.

Catherine Lobben, twenty-three, of No. 87 Henry Street, was overcome at No. 113 West 108th Street. She was attended and went home.

Alois Frank, sixty, of No. 1712 Heintz Avenue, was attended in front of No. 2406 Third Avenue, and removed to Lincoln Hospital.

Tose Pochi, eighteen, of No. 322 East 26th Street, was attended at 78th Street and First Avenue by Dr. Mitchell of St. Vincent's Hospital.

Edna Goldstein, twenty-three, of No. 1632 Madison Avenue was attended at 37 West 20th Street.

John Roemer, fifty, of No. 5 East 4th Street, was attended at No. 32 Spring Street and taken to St. Vincent's Hospital.

John Lynch, seventy-four, of No. 2331 Third Avenue, was attended at No. 208 East 116th Street and removed to Harlem Hospital.

Taliah Douglas, sixty-five, of No. 207 West 108th Street, was overcome while riding in a Broadway surface car at 84th Street. He fell to the floor, receiving lacerations of the scalp and right arm. He was attended and went home.

Stubby, Hero Mascot of 17 Battles, Showing Decorations for Bravery

Stubby, a brindle Boston bull terrier in the office of Gen. Pershing just after the Commander-in-Chief of the American forces in Europe during the war had decorated him as a wounded hero. Stubby, who is owned by J. Robert Conroy of Washington, has been designated the official mascot of the A. E. F. He participated in seventeen engagements with the Twenty-third Division, receiving a shrapnel wound in the battle of Seicheprey. The medal was of gold, the gift of the Humane Education Society. Stubby wears many other decorations.

HAYDON TALBOT'S EFFORT TO LEAVE LUDLOW FAILS

Playwright, in Arrests of Alimony, Must Stay in Jail.

Haydon Talbot, playwright and author, who has been in Ludlow Street jail for thirty days because he is $12,000 in alimony arrears to his first wife, from whom he was divorced in 1914, made an effort to get out to-day, but Justice Donnelly put him back again.

Talbot's counsel filed a motion to vacate Justice Whitaker's order committing him to jail, claiming that he was not in arrears on his alimony. He set up that under an agreement he is under no obligation to pay alimony to his wife and he also made strong allegations as to her mode of life.

The first Mrs. Talbot came back with an agreement signed by her husband May 18, 1915, to pay her $100 a month. Talbot received this money from a second wife, Norma Mitchell, whom he married in 1914. In his application for release from jail to-day he said he had an appointment with Secretary of State Hughes at 11 o'clock next Saturday morning and he would be printed in a newspaper.

LIEUT. BECKER LOSES SUIT AGAINST TENANT

New He May Have to Answer for Insulting "Ad."

As the result of a jury's decision in Justice Panken's term of the Municipal Court in Harlem to-day, forbidding Police Lieut. John Becker, of the East 55th Street station, owner of the tenement at No. 29 East 114th Street, to evict Mrs. Matilda Pfeiffer, on the ground that she was an undesirable tenant, complaints will be filed against Becker with Mayor Hylan and Police Commissioner Enright.

These will be based on advertisements Pfeiffer inserted in newspapers of apartments to rent which she had with the proviso "Jews need not apply." Justice Panken instructed former Assessor John Roemer, Miller, Mr. Pfeiffer's counsel, to prefer the complaint.

Mr. Miller produced evidence to show Lieut. Becker had been in the house to arrest two Jewish tenants for gambling. They were discharged in the police court. The jury consumed but four minutes in finding in favor of Mrs. Pfeiffer.

JERSEY WAR BONUSES TO BE PAID NEXT WEEK

Allocations Delayed Until All Bonds Have Been Paid For.

TRENTON, N. J., July 8.—Money in payment for soldiers' bonus bonds must be in the hands of the State Treasurer before the bonus commission can start payment of bonuses, according to an opinion of Attorney General McCran, announced to-day by State Comptroller Newton K. Bugbee, a member of the State Soldiers Bonus Commission.

All but $25,000 has been received from banks subscribing for the bonus bonds and it is expected the money will be in the hands of the State Treasurer in time to commence payment of bonuses next Monday or Tuesday.

Payment of dependent claims will be deferred until active claims are disposed of because dependent claims require more investigation.

Burglars Hit Jersey Chinese Laundry.

Two Chinese laundrymen were covered with revolver and robbed in the laundry of Tom Lee at No. 781 Newark Avenue, Jersey City, to-day. While Tom Lee and his wife were asleep these burglars entered by cutting a hole through a rear door. The two Chinese awoke, and the burglars took $5 from the cash register and $40 from Lee's trousers. They dropped a flashlight and a pair of pliers as they fled.

ward. It bore the license No. 9664, but by the use of white adhesive tape the first numeral had been changed from a 9 to an 8. The car was found to be the property of Michael Palfano, No. 532 Adams Street, Hoboken, a garbage removal contractor, who said the machine had been stolen from his yard some time after 2:30 o'clock this morning.

Charles Hemstreet, a writer on New York City history and director of a clipping bureau, who was foreman of a jury that convicted John McNamara, proprietor of a restaurant at No. 889 Amsterdam Avenue, and Michael Fitzgerald, a waiter, of possessing whiskey, reported to Justice Borst to-day that McNamara had threatened him in the court corridor.

Justice Borst sent a court attendant for McNamara, who could not be found. He is under $1,000 bail to appear for sentence next Monday.

McNamara wore a jeweled Elka insignia in his coat lapel, and during the trial constantly eyed a similar emblem worn by Mr. Hemstreet.

Police Commissioner Conolly of the Third Precinct District told of accidentally touching a button back of McNamara's bar, which caused a panel to swing back, opening the way into a room in which were two demijohns and twenty-five bottles of whiskey. The jury found its verdict in nineteen seconds after the door of the jury room closed.

"A fine rough young deal you gave us," Hemstreet reported McNamara as saying to him in the corridor. "And you had a right not to do it with that badge on your coat. I've killed."

At this point Hemstreet hurried back into the court room.

THREE YEARS IN CELL FOR NARCOTIC SELLER.

First Conviction for Vending to Prisoners an Interesting Case.

Prohibited from visiting Bickwell's Island because he was suspected of conveying narcotics to prisoners, Robert Porter, twenty-eight, of No. 65 West 93rd Street, went to Queensboro Bridge, wrapped a bottle of heroin in a rubber bag and dropped it to the Island. Detective Barry of the Narcotic Squad, disguised as a prisoner, recovered the package, and Detective Quigley, on the bridge, grabbed Porter, who then said there tried to kill himself by slashing his wrists.

Porter was convicted to-day in Special Sessions and sentenced to three years in prison. Dr. Carlisle Simon said this was the first conviction under the penal code section forbidding the sale or gift of narcotics to prisoners.

NEW DRY GRAND JURY INDICTS 15 P. C. OF CASES.

Finds Only Three True Bills in Two Days' Work.

The Special Grand Jury handling violations of the Mullan-Gaw Act held a per cent. session to-day, and considered eleven cases, threw out eight of them and found three indictments.

In two days the Grand Jury has considered nineteen cases and the indictments will find themselves at points to be considered worthy of trial. The percentage of indictments to cases submitted this far in July is a little in excess of 15 per cent.

500,000 Phone Bond Approved.

The Public Service Commission to-day approved the $500,000 of the New York Telephone Company, filed by the company, to indemnify telephone subscribers in the event the present 10 per cent. increase in rates is not followed by the commission's final determination of the rate case.

BIG WAVE CARRIES 2 BOYS TO DEATH AT MANHATTAN BEACH

Brothers, 15 and 12 Years Old, Wade Into Ocean and Are Suddenly Engulfed.

The sudden disappearance of two boys, brothers, apparently swallowed up by the sea within a minute after they had waded into it to go bathing at the point at Manhattan Beach not far from the Manhattan Beach baths yesterday afternoon, became known to-day when detectives accompanied the boys' father to the spot to search for the bodies.

The boys were John and Desmond O'Connor, fifteen and twelve years old, respectively, of No. 121 Howard Avenue, Brooklyn, with their mother, Mrs. Mary O'Connor, and their sister, Alice, eleven years old, the boys had just arrived at the beach and got into their bathing suits.

They waded into the ocean, hand in hand, followed by Alice. The little girl almost immediately ran back to her mother, and told her that a big wave had knocked her brothers down, and that they had been carried under the surface out to deep water. Mrs. O'Connor looked, and there was not a sign of the boys.

She was taken home with Alice in the automobile of a passerby, and Jeremiah O'Connor, the father, reported the matter to the police of the Ralph Avenue station.

With Detectives Gavanagh and Thornton, all in their bathing suits, he began a search of the beach at the place of the boys' disappearance, to-day. It is said that there is quicksand and a deep hole at about this point.

DRY JURY FOREMAN CHARGES THREAT

Says Cafe Man; Fellow Elk, Represented Conviction for Possessing Whiskey.

Charles Hemstreet, a writer on New York City history and director of a clipping bureau, who was foreman of a jury that convicted John McNamara, proprietor of a restaurant at No. 889 Amsterdam Avenue, and Michael Fitzgerald, a waiter, of possessing whiskey, reported to Justice Borst to-day that McNamara had threatened him in the court corridor.

Justice Borst sent a court attendant for McNamara, who could not be found. He is under $1,000 bail to appear for sentence next Monday.

McNamara wore a jeweled Elka insignia in his coat lapel, and during the trial constantly eyed a similar emblem worn by Mr. Hemstreet.

Police Commissioner Conolly of the Third Precinct District told of accidentally touching a button back of McNamara's bar, which caused a panel to swing back, opening the way into a room in which were two demijohns and twenty-five bottles of whiskey. The jury found its verdict in nineteen seconds after the door of the jury room closed.

"A fine rough young deal you gave us," Hemstreet reported McNamara as saying to him in the corridor. "And you had a right not to do it with that badge on your coat. I've killed."

At this point Hemstreet hurried back into the court room.

Harding's Appeal to Senators Was to Push Economy

extra billion dollars of debt at the wrong time.

Senate leadership is not what Mr. Harding had a right to expect. Senator Penrose used to wield considerable influence in handling legislation. He was not on the job when the Bonus Bill was in committee. Conferences between Mr. Penrose and the Treasury Department would have ended discussion of the bonus at this time. Mr. Penrose as Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee has been looked upon as the spokesman of the Administration on all matters relating to finance. Time was when he would have asserted himself and assumed the leadership, but his health is not what it used to be.

Senator Lodge, Republican leader, has endeavored conscientiously to bring the various elements in the party into line. But it is significant to note that his request for a three-week recess concurred in by Senator Underwood, the Democratic leader, was turned down by an insurgent element which pushed both the bonus proposition and the Farm Finance Bill to the fore.

Mr. Lodge had to get help from the White House. President Harding announced himself as favoring the recess. The point is that the Senate, while waiting for the House to get through with the Tariff Bill, may pass too many bills upon the insistence of individual members, which would only embarrass the Administration and put the responsibility for failure of those same measures on members of the House. The purpose of the recess is to keep the Senate from legislating on extraneous issues and getting all tangled up so that when the big tariff and tax proposals come before the Upper House there shall not be the opportunity for trading that there might otherwise be.

Mr. Harding has at last applied Executive influence to the situation. He has begun with informal talks in the Senate cloak rooms, where the personal equation is all powerful. There is still another step in prospect, namely, the party caucus. It has been talked of as the only thing that will bring party harmony and iron out the various kinks in the Senate situation.

The tendency of Senators to form groups and to act in a bloc has made the problem of leadership an abnormal one. It is not simply a job of finding a dominant personality to sway the Senate. It means finding a dominant influence to squelch the tendency toward class legislation, a tendency that has grown stronger since the war than ever before in the last twenty-five years of Congressional history.

The President has practically decided to use the party caucus to combat individualism. Measures will be voted on at the caucus and the insurgents will find themselves at points to satisfy the Republican organizations everywhere that they did support the Republican Party programme.

It will cause many a Senator or member of the House to hesitate whether he will be an insurgent or join the caucus and assure himself of Presidential support in the Congressional elections.

PLOT TO WRECK CITY WELFARE WORK CHARGED BY COLER

Commissioner Says He Will Prefer Charges Against Three Bond Examiners.

Red S. Coler, Commissioner of Public Welfare, declared before the Board of Estimate to-day that three examiners of the Board were trying to "wreck" the Welfare Department. Mr. Coler, in attacking one examiner in particular, said: "In conjunction with two others he is in a conspiracy to kill the Welfare Department." He announced that he would immediately prefer formal written charges against the three men. He mentioned no names.

Mr. Coler's charges were prompted by a recommendation from the office of the Secretary of the Board, to which all examiners are attached, that a bill be permitted in the Legislature transferring to the jurisdiction of the State Commission for the Care of the People-Minded, the institution now being conducted on Randall's Island by the Public Welfare Department of the city.

"This, Mr. Mayor," said Commissioner Coler, "is an outrageous attack upon city government by one of your employees. Your examiners are doing many things about which the elective officials know nothing.

Through President Riegelmann of Brooklyn and Aldermanic President La Guardia took exception to Mr. Coler's remarks. Comptroller Craig declared the Welfare Commissioner was "absolutely correct." There is a great deal of spontaneous gratification of new ideas from employees of the Secretary's office who, if they devoted their time to their regular duties, wouldn't be able to find time for these things," said Mr. Craig. "These new ideas are checked with the signature of the Secretary who probably doesn't know anything about what he signed."

Mr. Coler said that one of the examiners, "who passed upon my budget requests," has endeavored to place men in jobs in the Welfare Department. He also charged that this examiner borrowed money from the department for his personal use. He also charged that this examiner appropriated and propositioned as passes upon." The Commissioner added that this examiner had so reduced the requests for money to cover the Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn that it would be necessary to "close this institution in November unless the Board of Estimate authorizes a transfer of funds which we have requested."

"It is the most terrible conspiracy I have ever seen in city government," concluded Mr. Coler, "they are trying to kill the welfare department and put it in a hole."

The matter was referred to the committee of the whole of the board.

Steamer Callao Reports All O. K. BY RADIO TO-DAY

a story of having seen a dark, narrow, suspicious looking vessel nosing around him in the dark off the New Jersey Coast last Thursday night.

The Callao sailed with seventy-four passengers and $1,000,000 in gold in her strong room. Among those on board is John Christian, a cadet off-icer of the line, nineteen years old, a son of George Christian, Secretary to President Harding. It is his habit to voyage. Inquiries by Mr. Christian from official sources brought replies which so alarmed him to-day that he, cancelled all engagements and met small craft which were in touch with the efforts to locate the Callao.

Lawrence Ritehey, assistant to Secretary Herbert Hoover in charge of the matter of missing ships, said to-day that the department now had information that the schooner Carol Deering, which abandoned her voyage, had been ransacked and looted. He refused to give details, saying their publication would hinder the investigation.

He said also that the Department had taken into consideration the possibility that the ship seen by Capt. Christian of the Manhattan, described officially as a level headed and responsible officer, may have been a Prohibition blockade runner and that her caution was due to her effort to smuggle her contraband cargo ashore.

"Mickey" Arstein Purged of Contempt.

Julius W. (Mickey) Arstein, who was recently sentenced to serve five years for complicity in the theft of Liberty bonds from Wall Street brokerage houses and assisting in the sale of the bonds, was purged of contempt by Judge Augustus S. Hand in the Federal District Court in Manhattan to-day, but it will not do him much good in his present predicament. He was adjudged in contempt when in bankruptcy proceedings before United States Commissioner Charles H. Jones he refused to answer numerous questions about his means of livelihood. Judge Hand held that Arstein was within his rights.
