

fix up his credentials. Meanwhile the challenged man had voted.

Ex-Sheriff Tom Foley, Democrat-leader of the 2d Assembly District, was on the job early and at 8:01 o'clock, at Public School No. 150, N. 145th Street, street, presided at a sweeping Hyatt victory. An early canvass of 2d Assembly District polling places revealed the following facts and figures:

At Public School No. 150, N. 145th Street, time, 6:01 o'clock. Eighteenth District polls opened with 15 men and 3 women in line, all wearing Hyatt buttons and the women also wearing Hyatt streamers. The women were especially enthusiastic. They were Mrs. Rose de Philip, No. 204 Heister Street; Miss Jennie Lannario, No. 119 Baxter Street, and Mrs. Mary Cravelli, No. 91 Grand Street.

Nineteenth District, same building, same time. Seventy registered; 9 in line, all men. At Public School No. 66, Hester and Chrystie Streets, time, 6:15. Eighth District: 585 registered; 7 had voted; 20 in line, one a woman. Seventeenth District, same time. Four hundred and twenty registered; 4 had voted; 14 in line.

At Public School No. 35, No. 160 Chrystie Street, time, 7:40 o'clock. Sixteenth District: 475 registered; 7 had voted, 3 of them women; no line. Fifteenth District, same building same time. 419 registered; 64 had voted, 10 of them women, 8 in line.

At Public School No. 20, Huxton and Eldridge Streets, time, 7:50 o'clock. Ninth District: 375 registered; 6 had voted, 3 of them women; no line. Twelfth District, same building, same time. 499 registered; 6 had voted, 5 of them women; no line.

At Public School No. 91, Forsyth and Stanton Streets, time, 7:30 o'clock. Twenty-fourth District, 513 registered; 8 had voted, 5 of them women, 7 in line. At Public School, No. 18, Ludlow and Delancey Streets, time, 8 o'clock. Fourteenth District: 461 registered; 6 had voted, 10 of them women, 10 in line. At Public School, No. 108, No. 253 Lafayette Street, time, 8:25. Twenty-second District, 440 registered; 67 had voted, 1 of them a woman; 8 in line.

In two districts of Greenwich Village a large vote had been cast by 8:30 o'clock. In the 14th Election District of the 10th Assembly District at Julia Richman High School, No. 63 West 13th Street, seventy-six had cast their ballots. There are 164 registered there. In the 14th Election District of the 10th Assembly District, in the same school, seventy-seven out of 437 registered persons had voted.

From figures given out at election booths in Washington Heights and Harlem, it was learned that the women voted early. At 2 P. M. the following Washington Heights polling places were visited: 8th Election District, 22d Assembly District, Broadway and 148th Street—Total registration, 480; 340 had voted, and one-third of these were women. 7th Election District, 21st Assembly District, Broadway at 144th Street—Total registration, 460; 341 had voted; one-third were women. 41st Election District, 15th Assembly District, No. 3213 Broadway—Total registration, 557; 350 had voted, including 55 per cent. of registered women. 9th Election District, 22d Assembly District, Amsterdam Avenue and 149th Street—Total registration, 580; 395 had voted; one-third were women.

In Harlem the percentage of early women voters at 2 P. M. was higher. Twenty-fourth Election District, 12th Assembly District, No. 253 West 125th Street—Total registration, 542; 302 votes had been cast, including 75 per cent. of registered women. Twenty-fourth Election District, 13th Assembly District, Public School No. 137, 126th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue—Total registration, 614; 300 had voted. One-half of the woman registration of 242 had cast their votes.

THREE-FOURTHS OF VOTE IN BRONX AT 2 P. M. More than seventy-five per cent. of the voters in the Bronx had cast their ballots at 2 o'clock. Women were out early to cast their ballots. They were passing into and out of the booths in the several election districts at a rate of about 10 per cent. of the registration per hour. The speed with which the actual voting was done indicated to the wise ones that there was more straight ticket voting than had been expected. It was also thought that only two of the seven amendments were receiving much attention from voters, these being the ones relating to civil service preference and literacy in English as a voting qualification.

An indication of the vote, in the 50th Election District of the First Assembly District, the polling place at 163d Street and Third Avenue, the registration was 467. At 2 o'clock 357 had voted. In the 19th Election District, at No. 445 East 116th Street, 503 out of 642 had voted; in the 21st Election District at Public School No. 37, 146th Street, near Willis Avenue, 371 of 427 had cast ballots; in the 22d Election District, also in Public School No. 37, 208 out of 404 had voted.

In the upper end of the Bronx, in the 41st Election District of the 8th Assembly District, No. 230 Washington Avenue, 430 of a total registration of 590 had cast ballots at 2 o'clock, and in the 40th Election District, Public School No. 48, Hoffman Street near 183th Street, 471 of 603 had voted.

One of the first dozen to vote in the 16th Election, Fourth Assembly District, was Col. Mark S. Coxman, eighty years old, No. 974 Caldwell Avenue, a Civil War veteran.

Leaders of both parties were disappointed as the exceedingly light early vote and the failure of women to appear in virtually every district of Brooklyn.

Excuses and explanations were readily forthcoming, chief of which were the cold weather which made a warm home and extra cup of coffee especially attractive. After the first two hours, however, the vote began to pick up and at 9 o'clock had reached what is considered normal Public School No. 8, Hicks and Midway Streets, in Brooklyn Heights, held two polling places. The 2d Election District of the 1st Assembly District showed 48 voters the first hour, and 86 the second, out of a total registration of 561. The 32d Election District, across the hall, was not ready to open at 6 o'clock, but at 8 had disposed of 55 voters out of 491.

Public School No. 7, York and Bridge Streets: 1st Election District, 630—11 votes. Public School No. 1, Adams and Concord Streets, 8th Election District, 1st Assembly District, 645—15 votes. Fulton near Downing streets, Bedford section: 25th Election District, 11th Assembly District, Atlantia near Grand Avenue, 730—11 out of 352. The usual number in this polling place is 45 for the first hour.

Fulton near Cleveland Street, 6th E. D., 22d A. D., 7:30—80 out of 150. No. 4315 12th Avenue, 12th E. D., 9th A. D., Borough Park, 8:40—101 out of 414. No. 7267 Third Avenue, 49th E. D., 9th A. D., Bay Ridge, 8:25—69 out of 342. No. 5804 Sixth Avenue, 4th E. D., 7th A. D., 7:50—87 out of 458. No. 3910 Fifth Avenue, 20th E. D., 7th A. D., 8:50—110 out of 565.

Senator Calder's district: 21st E. D., 12th A. D., Seventh Avenue and First Street, Park Slope, 8:20—46 out of 490. No. 290 Seventh Avenue, 23th E. D., 12th A. D., 8:00—47 out of 418; No. 317 Seventh Avenue, 23th E. D., 12th A. D., 8:00—56 out of 512. No. 113 Seventh Avenue, 24th E. D., 10th A. D., 8:20—91 out of 571; No. 83 Seventh Avenue, 23d E. D., 10th A. D., 8:20—91 out of 601; No. 284 Flatbush Avenue, 23th E. D., 10th A. D., 8:35—62 out of 362.

Curran supporters asserted they regarded the voting in the 4th Election District, 21st Assembly District, No. 790 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, as an indication of Curran strength. Out of 542 registered voters the ballots of 346 were in at 12:30 o'clock. The district has been canvassed as having a strong Curran leaning.

LARGE NUMBER OF WOMEN VOTE IN STATEN ISLAND. Staten Island early showed a desire to have the voting finished. At 9 o'clock fully one-third of the registered vote had been cast and at 2 o'clock leaders of both parties estimated that 90 per cent. had voted. A large number of women voted. One hundred persons were turned away from the polls due to not having lived in the county long enough.

Employees of the United States Public Health station at Fox Hill voted. The Coalitionists are challenging these votes, claiming that the hospital is the same as an army post and that the personnel should vote at their homes.

The Coalitionists had fifteen watchers for each of the 76 election districts in Staten Island, in anticipation of the most exciting election ever held here after the hot campaign between Cromwell and Cahill for the Borough Presidency.

The bitter internal strife of Queens Borough also showed its effect in the haste of the voters to register their choice. Half the vote of Long Island City was in the boxes at 10 o'clock. In pushing both sides had organized motor transport forces to get the women to the polls, and nearly all the voters, rich and poor alike, rode to the ballot boxes in state. Cars were parked for a block from the polling places. Ridgewood and Jamaica registered rapid voting after 9 o'clock.

While the chief interest hangs around the Mxyralty contest, many local battles were being waged right up to the 100-foot limit from the ballot boxes all day.

In New York County a Sheriff, a District Attorney, three Judges of General Sessions and a Register will be elected; in Kings, Queens and Richmond, County Judges, Sheriffs, County Clerks will be chosen, and Borough Presidents are to be selected in all five boroughs.

Besides these the Assembly and Aldermanic fights are close in many districts, especially where the Socialists are competing with the older parties.

Incidentally, all the voters of the State are to-day voting for a Justice of the Court of Appeals, for members of Assembly and passing on seven amendments to the State Constitution, while many cities are electing Mayors and other local officials.

That the Tammany strong box had not been found empty at yesterday's "rough day" was evident at the opening of the polls for the "wagers" for the Tiger were all old experienced men and there appeared to be plenty of them. The Coalition watchers, largely voters, were much in earnest and taking their jobs seriously, but appeared to be new to the game.

ball in mid-field and was just starting another drive when a fumble gave Notre Dame the ball to the visitors. This ended the first period. Score—Notre Dame 17, Rutgers 0.

SECOND PERIOD. Starting the second period Rutgers barked considerably and kept Notre Dame around mid-field; finally Westerners intercepted a Rutgers' pass and started for a touchdown. Notre Dame tried three consecutive forward passes but each attempt failed. At this point, Castner dropped back and kicked a field goal from the 45-yard line, giving Notre Dame three more points.

Rutgers, deep in its own territory, failed again and punted to mid-field. Notre Dame gained 15 yards in line plunges. Mohardt then shot a forward pass to Kiley, who sprinted 20 yards for a touchdown. Shaw kicked the goal. Score, Notre Dame, 27; Rutgers, 0.

Late in the second quarter Rutgers threatened for a minute when two long forward passes brought the ball to Notre Dame's 5-yard line. Rutgers again tried to pass, but this time it failed to work. Bringing the ball out to the 20-yard line Mohardt ran 30 yards on the first play when the second quarter ended. Score—Notre Dame 27, Rutgers 0.

THIRD PERIOD. Aided by forward passes, Notre Dame early in the third period marched 50 yards for a touchdown, the scoring play being a long forward pass, Mohardt to Eddie Anderson, who caught the ball over Rutgers' goal line. Shaw kicked the goal. Score—Notre Dame 34, Rutgers 0.

There was no more scoring during the period although the ball was in Rutgers' territory. After Doesch, made 55 yards in two sensational runs, Wynne broke through center and carried the ball to within 5 yards of Rutgers' goal. End of third period. Score, Notre Dame 34, Rutgers 0.

FOURTH PERIOD. Starting the fourth period, Notre Dame needed only two smashes for Castner to shoot over for another touchdown. Shaw kicked goal. Score, Notre Dame 41, Rutgers 0. PARIS BLUEBEARD IN VERBAL FENCING DUEL WITH JUDGE

Parries All Thrusts With a Running Fire of Repartee.

ONCE AN ALTAR BOY.

It Seems Your Persuasive Sweetness Still Lingers, Surmises the Court.

VERSAILLES, France, Nov. 8.—"Henri Landru, the "Bluebeard of Gambais," underwent a grueling examination by Judge Gilbert when the second session of his trial on a charge of murdering ten women and one of their sons opened at noon to-day.

The prosecution has 130 witnesses to call. Police were on hand in numbers to prevent disorders. Landru showed his usual composure.

Judge Gilbert in his examination pointed out that there had been seven previous convictions against Landru.

"That is exact," the prisoner interrupted. "One of them was for fraud," the Court continued.

"Pardon, your Honor, it was for abuse of confidence."

"All right, it was for abuse of confidence." Judge Gilbert brought out that in his youth Landru was studious and precocious. He became an altar boy in the church and soon was made an arch-deacon. The audience laughed and even the Judge smiled, remarking:

"It seems that from this start you have persevered in your persuasive sweetness."

Landru's reply was a gardenic grin. The prisoner frequently exclaimed "perfectly" or "that is true," even when the Judge declared that Landru's union with his first wife was irregular.

When the Judge commented on Landru's frequent change of occupation the prisoner said he wanted to study all phases of industry.

"It seems your best industry was to be a squire to women," said the Judge. "When a man succeeds' he's a genius; when he fails he's a rogue," said Landru.

At another point he declared the police never arrested anyone except by accident.

Landru's counsel indicated the line of the defense by calling attention to the opinion of one physician that Landru is mentally unbalanced. The Judge, however, ruled Landru sane.

The first count taken up was that of the alleged murder of Mme. Cuchel, a widow, and her seventeen-year-old son, Andre Cuchel. She was one of the 25 women said to have answered Landru's matrimonial advertisements.

According to the prosecution, she became fascinated by his courtly manners and, with her money, rented a villa at Vernouillet. There Landru is alleged to have assumed the name of Emile Diard and to have posed as a wealthy manufacturer. Both Mme. Cuchel and her son disappeared and no trace has been found of them.

Landru claimed they went to England, but evidence of their passports could never be found.

In the light, airy way that has won him his popularity, the prisoner has thus outlined his defense:

"I am accused of murdering I don't know how many people. For instance, Mme. Cuchel. Now, this lady, six months before I met her in 1914, had made every preparation to leave France forever. Just because she stays with me a short time, I am asked to tell you where she is. How do I know? Again, they say I am a Don Juan. What nonsense! Look at my ugly face. Just because the police fail to trace certain women whose names figure in the list, they conclude these women have vanished from human ken. Yet dozens of other names figure in my diary, persons who have been found. Apparently this does not count with the police. Besides, most of the missing women had quarreled with their families.

"I am accused of ten women! Ludicrous! I am over fifty and have never laid hands on a woman in my life. Why should I kill? Their valuables were worth twice nothing. Their furniture was in white wood. I killed them in anger? One does not get murderously angry ten times running. Others affirm I am a Sadist. I don't know what that means. I will tell you why none of the missing women came forward. They do not want to get mixed up in this affair. I have a secret with each which I refuse to disclose. The whole charge is laughable. If I am an assassin, prove it."
