

N. Y. U. SOPHOMORES SMASH DISHES AT FRESHIES' DINNER

Four Cops Bowled Over in Futile Effort to Avert Interruption.

The 1924 sophomore class of New York University succeeded in breaking up the 1923 freshman smoker last night at Krueger's Auditorium, New York, N. Y. The freshmen had managed to escape from the campus in time to reach the place. About 150 of them were patiently waiting for the meal to be served. Singing and cracking jokes, they were calm and serene, confident that their sophomore rivals were in the dark as to the location of the smoker. A police guard of four men—much too small as later developments proved—was on hand to prevent the 1924 men from breaking into the cafe if they showed up.

But two cops had been trailing Stanley Osserman, Chairman of the committee. The two "Nathan Hale" phoned to the Heights where John Smith of Port Huron, Mich., was waiting with a crew of classmates. As soon as they received the call, the 24 band set out for Jersey.

Meanwhile, the fresh and the invited upperclass men were still whiling away the time, waiting for the "chow." For some reason or other, the mess call was not sounded. No response was forthcoming to the cries of "We want to eat!"

This unaccountable delay was the cause of the disturbance of the well-laid fresh plans. A cry of "Here they come!" resulted in one of the flighted waiters turning off the lights. Then in rapid succession came the bursting of the door, the crash of glasses and dishes as table after table was overturned, the flying of plates and bread and knives and forks, the gnashing of teeth, the groans of those hit by chairs and the ever present missiles.

And in the midst of all this fighting the upperclass men were beating a dignified but rather hasty retreat up a flight of stairs to view the spectacle—visible at times when attempts to put on the lights were momentarily successful—and what was much more important—to get out of the way of the battlers.

At this point the dumbfounded police recovered their equilibrium sufficiently to reach the lights and to effect a lull in the conflict. The pressing of the electric button gave the upperclass men a chance to see. The hall was a complete wreck; tables and chairs were overturned; the glassware was entirely destroyed; here and there were undergraduates with blood and butter spread over their features. In one corner Rosenberg, of 1924, was standing in a close embrace with a 23 man, with the former's trousers completely ripped on his legs; men with torn shirts, with cut lips, with wild looking faces, with desperate, murderous looks in their eyes. In short, it was a feast for the eyes of the spectators—the carnage was complete.

When order had been somewhat restored, Schury, the owner of the hall, was heard wailing "that the damage will amount to $10,000, $2,500," and then he let the figure stand at $1,200. But there was no correct method of ascertaining the loss.

After cheering each other, the fresh sat down to partake of the meal—but not in the dining hall. The cops repaired to the street, where a short snake dance was held to celebrate their victory.

The honors went to the class of 1924. Not only did it stop the smoker, but Wednesday, after its class president, Smith, had been kidnapped by the enterprising freshmen, it was able, through the vigilance and cleverness of Melville Bachrack, to restore Smith to his own classmates.

Among the upperclass men present were Alfred Gruney, President of the student organization; Jack Adams, President of the Athletic Association and end on the eleven; Macomber, guard, and Bohne, manager, of the football team; Tolano, baseball manager, and several others. Mr. Pride and Mr. Lynch were the representatives from the faculty.

Canine Defies School Janitor; Killed as 'Mad'

Tramp Refused to Leave Cosy Corner and Policeman Does Rest.

The rostrum of the general assembly of Jamaica High School is not ordinarily a place for dogs.

Principal Charles H. Vosburgh was out-and-out astounded, then when in the very midst of assembly exercises yesterday Bobo, a tramp dog, walked grandly in from the rear of the hall and took his place beside him on the platform. The Principal smiled blandly at the dog, and Bobo sat back on his haunches and smiled with equal abandon at the Principal. He seemed to be saying: "A lesser man would kick me downstairs and out of this sacred place. But I know you love animals. Besides, the children applaud!"

They did—500 girls and boys were applauding wildly.

The exercises over, Bobo found his unnoticed way to the boys' cloakroom. It was warm in the cloakroom. Bobo curled himself up in the corner and went to sleep.

Fifteen minutes later he was awakened by a peremptory admonition from Janitor William Fairbairn. "Get out of here, you mutt!"

Bobo growled and showed his teeth. Bobo is one-half collie and the other half mastiff and bull. That combination showing its teeth is not a slight to inspire confidence.

"Mad dog!" cried Janitor Fairbairn. "Mad dog!" called saucer-eyed boys and a saucer-eyed little girl, who had been listening at the cloakroom door. "Mad dog!" rang the cry through the school.

A cop was summoned. Patrolman Robert Tucker essayed open convocations and this falling drew his automatic.

Five shots ended Bobo.

MAXIM, BY RADIO, TALKS TO AUDIENCE OF 200,000.

Inventor Predicts That in Two Years One Speech Can Be Heard by 1,000,000 Citizens.

Hiram Percy Maxim, inventor and the President of the American Radio Relay League, last night spoke at the radiophone station of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company to more than 200,000 amateur radio telephone owners and their friends scattered broadcast over the Eastern section of the country. He predicted that in 1924 such a speech would reach at least a million hearers.

The radio amateur operator was the cause of the present high development of the art of wireless. Mr. Maxim asserted, and through his efforts the radiophone would advance still further. Radiophone communication with Great Britain is to be experimented with soon, he said. A delegate of the amateurs association has been sent to England, and on a set date will listen for signals from America, reporting at the Marconi transatlantic station what he has been able to hear. Mr. Maxim predicted that the tests would be successful and that for the first time the citizens of the United States and England would be in direct communication.

Installations of the radio telephone connected with amplifiers would one day be installed in all public halls where legislative bodies gathered, he claimed. Speeches in Congress will thus be transmitted, word for word, to the citizens who care to listen.

"I hope I may be pardoned for believing that this will not only do us citizens a lot of good but that it may also do our distinguished delegates in Congress a lot of good," Mr. Maxim remarked.

OPERA SINGER ROBBED OF THOUSANDS IN GEMS

Police Deny Knowledge of Mme. Rappold's Loss.

It became known to-day that Mme. Marie Rappold, opera singer, had been robbed of jewelry valued at several thousand dollars. It is said the articles were stolen from her apartment at No. 29 West 67th Street. Mme. Rappold refused to discuss the robbery, beyond saying it had occurred and that she wished to forget about it.

The police of the West 68th Street Station said they had no report of the robbery on record. Detectives employed by an insurance company, however, are said to be investigating the case.
